U. S. May Need 4-Million Army, Marshall Says

House Committee Restores Draft Age Limits to 21-45, Registration 18-64

Legislation making some 25,000,000 men between the ages of 21 and 45 liable for immediate conscription was tentatively approved by the House Military Affairs Committee yesterday.

The House group voted approval of the original draft ages of the Burke-Wadsworth bill and provided for registration of all men 18 to 64, as opponents of a less drastic bill in the Senate drove to delay or limit the man-power draft.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, announced he would propose a substitute bill, setting up the machinery for conscription but delaying any actual draft until after war comes. Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, urged adoption of another compromise proposal—delay of compulsory service until January 1, pending an intensive trial of voluntary recruiting.

Meanwhile, objection was raised to the absence of any limit on the number of men the President can call for compulsory military service, and a bloc of Senators initiated a move to limit the total to 800,000 draftees.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, and other supporters of the measure, opposed the move on the ground Congress can control the number by means of granting or withholding appropriations. The bill now contains a provision barring any draft of men unless Congress specifically provides money for this purpose.

Wheeler Assailed

The debate brought a heated clash between Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, an opposition leader, and Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas. Connally charged that in a speech by Wheeler insisting on a limitation on the number of draftees, the Montanan "wants to make it just as difficult as he can for the Government to get an Army."

Wheeler protested that the Texan was "unfair," that he favored preparedness, and Connally withdrew the remark and apologized. He added, however, "that no other Senator" was as "free in reflecting on the motives of others" as Wheeler.

During the more than six hours of debate, the Senate acted on one of the more than 25 amendments

1,200,000 Force Now Planned Can't Defend Hemisphere, Staff Chief Implies

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Gen. George C. Marshall believes that a larger force than the present projected Army of 1,200,000 men would be necessary to "prevent hostile infiltration in this hemisphere."

The Army chief of staff told the Senate Appropriations Committee that while limitations of equipment and organization will hold the United States to a 1,200,000-man force for "some time to come," we may need three or four million men or more "if danger comes."

The testimony was given behind closed doors and made public by the committee yesterday.

Profits Snag Navy

Rear Admiral William R. Furlong, Navy ordnance chief, told the same committee that the Navy Department has experienced difficulties in obtaining materials from American industry because manufacturers prefer British orders which contain none of the profit limits and other restrictions of naval orders."

Furlong said that "progress has stopped on the procurement of materials that go into ships."

"The Navy had no trouble whatsoever," he continued, "until business picked up and the Army, having increased appropriations, began to buy guns without the operation of the Vinson-Trammell Act (limiting profits). This and the foreign nations' and other government departments' buying without the operation of the Vinson-Trammell Act has caused business from the Navy to be unattractive. . . .

"For instance, there's a long list of requests from the British purchasing commission and naturally they will go ahead and do the work that will not bind them by profit limitations."

Urges Repeal

The admiral advocated quick repeal of the 8 per cent profit limitation and more liberal amortization of the cost of new factories and machinery—measures provided in the pending tax bill—as a solution of the problem.

Several committeemen, however, took another course. Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, said that the Government perhaps "should use a little force" to make manufacturers provide the necessary materials. Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, favored granting the President authority to take over plants if defense needs cannot otherwise be fulfilled.

Gen. Marshall told the committee that the Army could not say now what the final strength of the Army should be.

"If danger threatens this hemisphere," he added, "we may require 3,000,000 men, 4,000,000, or more be-

Blitz Defense Hurls Back U. S. 'Invader'

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Ninety thousand men lay along the Racquette River tonight after a day of lightning war which carried the victorious Blue forces 30 miles east of last night's front.

Brigade, division and corps command posts scurried to keep up with the infantry and guns. Communications were stretched to the breaking point. Field kitchens, fires still alight and pots steaming, were hitched to trucks and hurried forward so the hard-hitting combat troops might eat.

As night fell, the Black Army, theoretically invading the United States from the east, was pushed behind the Racquette, its original line, and Blue patrols thrust at its bridgeheads. During the night, these patrols felt across the river, men stripped to the buff and swimming over in the cold to locate an-

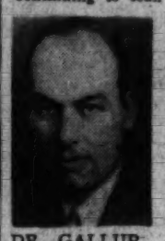
The Gallup Poll

Ohio Leaning To Willkie, Survey Shows

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 20.—State-wide surveys in Ohio, a State which has been a good barometer of national political sentiment since the turn of the century, show Ohio voters continuing to lean toward Wendell Willkie in the Presidential race. The Institute's latest poll, on which interviewing continued up through last week-end, finds Roosevelt polling 47 per cent in Ohio, to 53 per cent for Willkie—the same division of sentiment as was found in the Institute's first post-convention poll early this month.



DR. GALLUP

The results represent a sharp defection from Roosevelt in Ohio since the 1936 election, when the President carried the State by a majority of 61 per cent of the major party vote. Most of the defection, the survey finds, has come in the smaller cities, towns and rural areas.

Ohio is an important State to watch in any Presidential election, not only because of its 26 electoral votes, but because of its past record as an index of national sentiment.

It has cast its electoral votes for the winning candidate in every election since 1900, which means that anyone who had correctly forecast the Ohio winner in the last ten elections would have been picking the national winner as well.

While there is no guarantee, of course, that Ohio will continue to be a good barometer State, its record was particularly impressive in 1936. Roosevelt polled 61 per cent of the major party vote in the State and 62.5 per cent of the major party vote in the Nation—a difference of only 1.5 percentage points.

Most of the interviewing in the latest Ohio study was completed before Wendell Willkie's acceptance speech last Saturday, so that the impact of his address is not reflected in the results.

Rural Loss Sharp

Rural and small town areas in Ohio show a much sharper drop in sentiment for Roosevelt than do the urban centers. This fact has an important bearing on the campaign because approximately two-thirds of the vote cast in Ohio is cast in places of under 100,000 population. The attitude toward Roosevelt today as compared to 1936 is shown below.

	For Roosevelt 1936 Election	Today's Points Poll	Loss
Ohio cities over 100,000	65%	59%	—9
under 100,000 (including rural)	57	40	—17

These results clearly show that whereas Roosevelt carried the

Roosevelt Shuns Debate

Defense Problems Prevent Campaigning, President Declares

By Douglas B. Cornell
Associated Press Staff Writer

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 20.—President Roosevelt answered no today to Wendell L. Willkie's challenge to debate campaign issues—and reported that conversations with Britain on United States acquisition of naval and air bases on English possessions in this hemisphere were progressing satisfactorily.

Both subjects were discussed at his regular press conference at the summer White House, with the Chief Executive indicating that it was defense problems like the naval-air base situation which would keep him from campaigning for a third term.

Things are in such shape this year, he said, that he can do no

Willkie Hurls New Challenge

Says Third-Term Issue Puts Roosevelt 'Under Double Obligation'

By William B. Ardery
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Rushville, Ind., Aug. 20.—Renewing his invitation for President Roosevelt to meet him in debate, Wendell L. Willkie expressed the opinion today that the Chief Executive was "under double obligation" to discuss campaign issues because he was running for a third term.

In a statement handed to his press conference after Mr. Roosevelt had turned down his earlier debate proposal, the Republican Presidential nominee said he would "be glad to debate the questions involved in the present campaign at the points he (the President) visits in various parts of the country."

At Hyde Park, N. Y., the President recalled to reporters his previous statements that with conditions as they were, it was obvious he could not do any political campaigning.

"The President is running for a third term," Willkie's statement said, "and in view of the fact that this is a violation of a tradition of 150 years standing, it is my judgment that he is under a double obligation to discuss the issues, as well as the particular issue of a third term.

"I do not believe that even the President of the United States has

U. S. and Britain Agreed on Bases, Churchill Says

Plan to Lease Lands Proves 'No One Can Stop' the Fusion Of Interests, He Holds

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 20.—Britain announced today an "agreement in principle" for United States lease of British island territory from Newfoundland to the Caribbean for defense bases and presented the plan to Parliament and people as proof of an "inexorable" fusion of British and United States interests.

Winston Churchill himself thundered that "no one can stop" this trend and his burst of eloquence stirred exultant response.

In Commons tonight Leslie Hore-Belisha, the former war secretary, raised the possibility of "an eventual common citizenship" of Britain and the United States, and said this alone would almost compensate for "the evils of war."

Such a union, Hore-Belisha recalled, was offered, in vain, to France in the hour of the Third Republic's collapse.

"Like the Mississippi"

Utterly confident, Prime Minister Churchill used his disclosure of the plan for air-naval base leases to declare that the British Empire and the United States "will have to be mixed up together in some of their affairs for mutual and general advantage."

"No one can stop it!" he cried. "Like the Mississippi, it just keeps rolling along! Let it roll! Let it roll on full flood, irresistible, to broader lands and better days!"

Tumult from steep and crowded benches almost smothered the prime minister's last words—just after he had disclosed the unprecedented British offer of the leases, for 99 years, at the conclusion of a long and uncompromising report on the war.

Later, Lord Halifax, the foreign secretary, told the House of Lords that "we have agreed in principle" on the question of the leases on British possessions in the Western Hemisphere.

Appeals for Naval Aid

Where the bases will be located was not disclosed, but Lord Halifax said the discussions concerned Atlantic islands—presumably Bermuda—various West Indian points and Newfoundland.

Churchill declared Britain sought no advantage for herself from the offer, but he did appeal for "timely

U. S. Risks War Over Refugee Ship, Bone Says

By the Associated Press

The Senate heard an accusation yesterday that a single "stubborn" man, "either President Roosevelt or someone in the State Department," had refused to change the course of the refugee ship American Legion and thereby had risked a provocative incident that might have "precipitated this country into war in a week."

The accuser, Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, spoke while the Army transport bearing 897 passengers headed for New York, apparently safely beyond the waters off Scotland which Germany had warned were mine-infested and highly dangerous.

"Someone is risking the lives of 900 human beings aboard that vessel," Bone told the Senate. "If that vessel is blown skyward the charge will be made that she was torpedoed by a German submarine."

He suggested that Congress investigate why the State Department or other officials insisted that the vessel, which left Petsamo, Finland, Friday night, had persisted in a course through the mined area in the face of the German warning.

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, interrupted Bone to say that the latter's remarks would

Trotsky Knifed By Intimate; Near Death

Special Dispatch to The Post

Mexico City, Aug. 20.—Leon Trotsky, one-time Bronx pants-presser who became the war lord of the Bolshevik Revolution, lay near death in a hospital here tonight, his skull punctured by a mountaineer's pick-axe wielded by a man he believed a friend.

The assailant, variously identified as Frank Jackson, Jacques van den Dreschd and Jacques Mortan, was under arrest in the same hospital, badly beaten by Trosky's guards who rushed into the library of Trotsky's villa when they heard the screams of the exiled Soviet war commissar.

Surgeons at the Green Cross Hospital operated on the 60-year-old revolutionary in an attempt to save his life, then placed him under an oxygen tent.

Dr. Joaquin Baz, one of the four attending surgeons, said the chances were "nine to one that he cannot live," but Gen. Jose Manuel, Chief of the Federal District Police told reporters, "there are hopes of saving his life."

Trotsky's guards said the assailant probably was a member of the OGUP (Russian Secret Police). Police said the assailant had known Trotsky more than a year, frequently visited the house, and was regarded not only as a friend but as a strong sympathizer.

They said he asserted "I would give my life's blood" for Trotsky. Later, however, he appeared to have differed violently with Trotsky's views and his management of the "Fourth Internationale." The clash of opinions was believed to have precipitated the attack.

Second Attack

The assault occurred between 4:30 and 5:30 p. m. (6:30 and 7:30 p. m. E. S. T.). The Trotskys moved to the villa a year and a half ago after Trotsky had broken with Diego Rivera, Mexican muralist, at whose home they had lived since their arrival in Mexico from Norway in January, 1937.

The attack was the second to be made on the life of Trotsky since he came to this country.

The first was last May 24, when 20 gunmen raided his home around dawn and poured a crossfire of machine-gun bullets into it. Both Trotsky and his wife escaped injury at the time by lying flat on the floor of their bedroom. One of their guards, Robert Sheldon Harte, of New York, was kidnaped by his assailants, however, and his body was found a month later under a farmhouse kitchen, 20 miles from Mexico City.

Since the first attack, Trotsky's villa has been transformed into a veritable fortress, with three-gun pill boxes mounted on a 15-foot-high brick wall. The entrance is barred by a steel door and the entire place is policed by guards.

U. S. Planning Trade Favors For Canada

Economic as Well as Military Assistance To Neighbor Studied

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt's new defense agreement with Canada is to be followed soon by economic, trade and financial arrangements with our northern neighbor that will bring American dollars as well as arms to Canada's aid, officials told The Post yesterday.

Study has begun of ways the United States could build up Canadian defense industries, roadways and military bases without violating the Neutrality Act, it was learned.

Military phases of the consultative agreement will take first rank, because defense cooperation is the more urgent necessity, it was said. But closely following the consultations between Canadian and American generals and admirals will be talks between fiscal and trade experts. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., is in Canada now on what his office says is a "vacation."

The preliminary opinion of top-ranking experts yesterday was that it would be perfectly legal for the United States to build great naval and air bases on territory leased from Canada. That would not violate the Neutrality Act prohibition against loans to a belligerent government, it was explained.

Bases Called Legal

"A tenant has the right to improve property that he rents," one high official said. "There is nothing unneutral about that."

More United States dollars might be piped to Canada, it was believed, by making loans to firms with branch factories above the border.

If the Attorney General or Congress would declare this device legal, it was learned officially, then the United States would undertake to help expand Canada's heavy industries and light industries that

Sen. O'Mahoney, Simpson Lead Wyo. Primaries

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 20 (AP).—U. S. Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney piled up a 3,000 vote lead tonight for the Democratic renomination over Cecil W. Clark, Newcastle attorney. Returns from 173 precincts out of 895 gave Wyoming's senior Senator 3,804 votes to 401 for Clark.

Representative Frank O. Horton was leading B. Frank Bratcher, Sheridan, 4,131 to 755, for the Republican nomination for the House seat.

A close contest was indicated in the four-man Democratic Congressional race as returns from 171 precincts showed Dr. J. C. McHenry and John McIntyre were running within 100 votes of each other. McHenry had polled 1,468 to McIntyre's 1,371. Green R. Simpson, of Greybull, was running third with 815 and Riley Wilson, also of Greybull, was trailing with 618.

Sumners Bill Wins 3d Place On Calendar of the House

The Sumners national representation resolution was given No. 3 position on the House calendar by Democratic leaders yesterday as the Rules Committee prepared to vote this afternoon on the request for a special rule to bring the legislation to the floor.

Chairman Sabath said he would do everything possible to get a favorable vote on the Sumners resolution when the committee meets at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

His statement followed a conference with Majority Leader Rayburn and Speaker Bankhead at which the three agreed that the District suffrage measure would be one of the few pending legislative proposals to be given the right of way before adjournment.

Majority Leader Rayburn said that if the special rule is granted that the Sumners resolutions will be taken up in the House immediately after the disposal of the excess profits tax bill and the conscription measure.

This program, it is believed, would delay a House vote on suffrage at least until the latter part of this month.

Offsetting the pledge of House leaders to place the Sumners resolution on the final legislative program was the chance that it might be delayed too long to be consid-

Armored Fascist Division Reported Among Forces on Albanian Frontier

Athens (Wednesday), Aug. 21.—Greece early today canceled all officers' leaves and ordered the army to "remain on watch" after receiving alarming news of Italian troop movements in Albania opposite Greece's northwestern frontiers.

It was reliably reported that Greek troops are being rushed to the frontier from the northern garrisons.

[The Associated Press reported from Belgrade that usually well informed circles had heard Italian troop concentrations on the Greek frontier included at least one armored division.

[From Athens, the Associated Press reported Greece yesterday called up several thousand men of new military classes, in the third strengthening of the army in a week.]

Lights Burn Late

At 1 o'clock this morning, lights were still burning in the foreign office—a most unusual occurrence. It is reported that the British Minister, Sir Michael Palairet, conferred with Premier General John Metaxas for an hour and a half last night.

A flotilla of British warships has been sighted near the Island of Mykonos—one of the Cyclades. One informant states that ten vessels are in the group. (Britain has pledged to come to Greece's aid if she is attacked.)

The Italian press has suddenly sharpened its anti-Greek campaign after a comparative lull. At least two cabinet members have told friends that they expect a note from the Italians almost at any moment. The latest Italian allegations of Greek terroristic activities in Albania is causing concern and nervousness regarding Italian intentions.

Berlin Reassuring

This may all be an unjustified flurry in the war of nerves being waged against this country. It may be something more. The Greek minister in Berlin called at the Wilhelmstrasse this morning and Berlin correspondents of Athens newspapers claimed the Reich assured him that no trouble should be expected. The German legation told your correspondent the same thing yesterday afternoon.

Nevertheless one responsible source said early this morning that

Nazi-Held Coast Hit From Norway to France by Bombers

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 20.—British bombers struck at German-held airdromes and quays from Norway to southern France today in an effort to smash Nazi springboards for any attempted invasion of these islands, and carried out attacks on the outskirts of Paris itself.

Here at home, seven German planes were declared shot down in the day's assaults upon Britain—assaults described by the air ministry as "comparatively slight"—and an unstated number of Englishmen died under the invaders' bombs.

In a single southwest town, "several" were killed and many wounded by bombers which dived low and hit a row of houses. In another town in that region, men on a bathing beach were machine-gunned by the raiders, but no casualties were reported.

Two towns in Essex, one in South Wales and one in the Anglian region, were raided. A South Wales port was reported to have suffered "small" damage.

Gibraltar Raid Starts Fire

Minor attacks continued into the night with two Nazi raiders shot down. One fell near a northeast coast village. Its four-man crew was captured. The other was struck by antiaircraft fire in southwestern England.

Telep replied he had been riding at a "slow trot" and attributed the horse's condition to Sunday's high humidity. Judge George D. Neilson took the defendant's personal bond.

Ortiz Acts In Argentine Cabinet Crisis

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires (Wednesday), Aug. 21.—President Roberto M. Ortiz, who had turned his duties over to an acting President because of illness, was reported suddenly to have reassumed leadership of his cabinet early this morning in an attempt to check a growing crisis threatening his regime.

The crisis centers around an army land purchase in which it is alleged too much money was paid.

Ortiz was reported to have called the cabinet into session at his home at 1:30 a. m. and as the group met it was said the resignations of some or perhaps all the members was imminent.

Gen. Juan Bautista Molina, long regarded as one of the leaders of the extreme right wing of the Argentine army, was placed under arrest for 60 days upon orders of War Minister Gen. Carlos Marquez.

Gen. Molina had sent a letter to the Senate yesterday charging his superior with an attempt to clear himself in the land deal by blaming other officers, among them Gen. Molina.

House Leaders Weigh Early September Adjournment

Profits, Housing And Draft Bills Get Right-of-Way

By James D. Secrest

Post Staff Writer

With an eye on early adjournment, House Democratic leaders yesterday agreed on a three-point major legislative program and talked of bringing the session to a close or at least a recess for the House early in September.

The excess profits tax, the military conscription and the slum clearance housing bills were given the right of way at a conference of Speaker Bankhead, Majority Leader Rayburn and Chairman Sabath of the Rules Committee.

Afterward Sabath said that he would attempt to bring out rules on the conscription and housing bills, as well as the District representation resolution, but that all other pending requests for special rules would be rejected.

The excess profits tax bill, which is expected to be brought to the House floor on Friday, will not need a special rule, he said.

Rule Insisted for Housing Bill

The compulsory military service bill is still in the House Military Affairs Committee, but it probably will be reported within a few days. It would follow the tax measure on the floor if ready.

Despite the insistence by House leaders that the Administration housing bill be granted a rule, strong opposition within the Rules Committee has thus far succeeded in bottling up the legislation.

The measure would authorize an annual appropriation of $5,000,000 to release $150,000,000 which the United States Housing Authority is authorized to lend but for which it lacks rent subsidy funds.

The original Housing Act authorized a $800,000,000 program and provided $28,000,000 for rent subsidies. The USHA has reported that the $28,000,000 was sufficient to service only $850,000,000, leaving $150,000,000 unusable without further Congressional action.

Loan Bill Delayed

House leaders, explaining that they could not forecast how long the Senate might want to remain in session, said that members of the House want to finish up the major pending business and go home to campaign for reelection.

Should the Senate wish to remain, they said, the House might be able to take three-day recesses after completing its program.

Meanwhile, the Democratic leaders were encountering some trouble in trying to put through a $500,000,000 loan bill which the Administration has asked to implement trade and friendly relations with Latin America.

The measure, which increases the lending power of the Export-Import Bank, brought three no-quorum calls from the Republican side yesterday and taunts that even the members of the banking and currency committee, which reported it, doesn't know what the money is to be used for.

Cox Calls Loans "Dangerous"

Despite the statements of members backing the bill that there is little prospect of any loans being made immediately, it was learned that many Latin-American representatives are in Washington ready to make applications as soon as the legislation would become law.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, labeled the proposed loans "a most dangerous and expensive experiment" and predicted that the $500,000,000 is "just a fraction" of what the taxpayers would be called upon to subsidize industrial development of Latin-American countries, which will in turn compete with industries in the United States.

Majority Leader Rayburn answered Cox, asserting:

"In months ahead the United States is going to need some friends. If we can't have them in the Western Hemisphere, we may not have them at all . . . 'If it costs $500,000,000, it is money well spent."

Bone replied that he was tired of hearing aiding-the-enemy arguments and added that the "Senator from Florida wants to go to war and has said so."

"The Senator tells a falsehood when he makes that statement," Pepper replied heatedly.

Both Senators later apologized for their remarks.

Representative Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, commented to reporters that in refusing to change the vessel's route, the Administration showed that it preferred that the ship be "blown up by the Germans rather than the British."

"The only possible reason for not changing her course," she said, "is that the British had mined the waters near Iceland, while there were German mine fields nearer Great Britain."

If the ship is blown up, she added, "the tragedy will never be excused, and the Administration will be held strictly accountable."

President Rejects Willkie Challenge To Debate Issues

political campaigning, including debating with Willkie as the Republican Presidential candidate suggested in his acceptance speech at Elwood, Ind., Saturday.

President Roosevelt's no to the Willkie challenge came when a reporter asked this question:

"Mr. President, when are you going to start the debates with Wendell Willkie?"

Smiling and flicking the ashes from a cigaret, Mr. Roosevelt told the newsmen that they knew as well as he did what the situation was.

In his own acceptance speech, he said, he told the public and the Democratic Convention that he happened to be the President of 130,000,000 people and that things were in such shape this year that it was, of course, perfectly obvious that he could not do any political campaigning.

He did not identify "things," but there was no doubt he referred to the trend of international affairs, their impact on this country and the vast defense program.

While Mr. Roosevelt could not be persuaded to say when decisions in the British-American conversations might be reached, British Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax told the House of Lords in London that "agreement in principle" had been arrived at for the leasing to the United States for 99 years of British sites in the Atlantic, various West Indian points and Newfoundland.

And while British Prime Minister Churchill, speaking in the House of Commons, appealed to this country for "timely reinforcement" of the British navy, Mr. Roosevelt told reporters they should not speculate on proposals that the United States sell to England destroyers built in World War days. He did not deny, however, that such sales were under consideration.

To Name Board Members

In response to other questions relating to defenses, Mr. Roosevelt said:

He hoped to announce Thursday the names of U. S. members of a permanent American-Canadian defense board to be established under an agreement between him and Canadian Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King.

Reports that Canada and the United States might occupy certain strategic areas jointly were pure, unadulterated speculation.

It was just a newspaper story that the defense agreement might contemplate the use of World War destroyers by Canada.

On that point, he was told that it seemed to be assumed in Ottawa that destroyers were involved and that the Canadian naval minister "was almost to the point on it."

Mr. Roosevelt said he didn't believe that.

While discussing political topics, the President disclosed that several months ago he asked Roy Howard, editor of the New York World-Telegram, to investigate Fifth Column activities in Latin America and that Howard had declined.

The President identified Howard as the private individual he had in mind when he said in his third-term acceptance address that, with one exception, the persons he had asked to help in the defense program had agreed to do so.

The President said he had asked Howard to go to South America by plane, on a 40-day trip, and meet editors and government officials he knew when he represented the United Press there. Mr. Roosevelt said he asked Howard to talk to them confidentially, on behalf of the United States and find out what their own personal opinions were on Fifth Column activities.

Howard is now on an assignment in the Far East for the Scripps-Howard newspapers, of which chain he is chairman of the executive committee, but G. B. Parker, editor in chief of the newspapers, issued a statement in Washington in which he quoted from a letter that Howard wrote the President on June 5.

In the letter Howard said it was 20 years since he had spent any time in South America and that he had lost "contacts with the politics and the personalities of the continent."

"No personal considerations ever have or ever will interfere with my rendering to you, or anyone in your position, any public service for which I am qualified," Howard's letter read. "I am sure you must know that.

Howard Letter Quoted

"So long as American democracy continues I believe that our press will have a function that is at the same time an obligation. I believe that without attaching too much importance to my position in American journalism there is a modicum of reason for my belief that in such times as these I may be in a better position to render some service through a medium with which I have had 40 years' experience than through one with which I am wholly unfamiliar."

a right to eliminate public discussion or to refrain from engaging in it when seeking public office.

"I again invite him to engage in public discussion."

Apparently still resentful of a speech by Secretary of Interior Ickes, Willkie appeared in the evening at a joint meeting of the local Rotary and Kiwanis clubs and said in a brief talk:

"Where I learned it, when we have a blow to strike, we strike it ourselves and we don't strike a foul blow through stooges."

At his press conference Willkie reiterated his previous statements that "the test in the world today is whether the democratic system is going to survive in competition with the totalitarian system."

"Of all people," he continued, "the President of the United States should be the most anxious to do those things that promote and develop the democratic process.

"Again I repeat, the democratic process is based upon public discussion."

Willkie suggested that the President "name experts who understand the building of defense works" to inspect the Nation's defenses. He coupled this with a proposal that the Chief Executive "devote such time as he now uses for that purpose to making democracy work by discussing the issues in which the American people are very much interested."

Saying it was true that Mr. Roosevelt was President, the Republican nominee added:

"It is equally true that he is running for a third term for President of the United States."

"The democratic process basically rests upon discussion," Willkie's statement continued, "and any man who seeks the office of President of the United States not alone should be willing to but is under an obligation to publicly discuss the questions before the American people."

Asked about the new Canadian-American defense board, Willkie said that one of his objections to Administration foreign policy was that "the President doesn't take the American people more into his confidence."

"We ought to know more about what is involved," he continued. "This is a democracy, after all. After the President has taken us into his confidence and told us what is involved, I shall be very glad to express my views."

Denies Tammany Tie

Willkie reiterated in response to another question that he had never belonged to Tammany Hall.

"I never was in Tammany Hall in my life," he said.

Willkie said he had received more than 100 communications today suggesting that he put Secretary Ickes on his pay roll because the latter's radio speech last night "was so helpful" to Republicans.

Asked whether he wouldn't violate the Hatch antipolitics Act if he put Ickes on his pay roll, Willkie responded:

"I suppose it would, but it doesn't make any difference, because I wouldn't want him around, anyway."

Willkie talked during the day with William A. Comstock, former Democratic governor of Michigan, and Alfred Debo former chairman of the Michigan Democratic Committee.

"I shall support Mr. Willkie," Comstock said in a statement, "because I do not believe in breaking the antithird term precedent.

"I believe Mr. Willkie, on his record, can bring to the administration of national affairs the practical wisdom that has been so lacking in New Deal executives."

Plan Organization

Comstock said he and Debo would organize an independent organization for Willkie among Democrats. Willkie said the group probably would fit into a similar organization already started by John W. Hanes, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Lewis W. Douglas, former budget director.

Willkie also talked today with Raymond E. Willis, of Angola, Indiana Republican candidate for Senator, and William A. Kunkel, of Bluffton, Ind., a Democrat who publishes the Fort Wayne (Ind.) Journal-Gazette.

Willis advised him, Willkie said, "that I will carry Indiana by over 100,000 votes and that the sentiment is growing."

Asked whether Kunkel, an old friend, would support him, Willkie responded with a grin that "I don't know, but I have a hunch."

The nominee said it was virtually certain that he would leave here by train tomorrow night or Thursday for a few days in New York. He said his plans thereafter were indefinite but that it still was possible he might make a trip to Maine.

Bridges Calls Ickes a 'Hitler In Short Pants'

Roosevelt Charged With Holding Back News of Nazi Arming

By the United Press

Terming the New Deal "nothing but an American form of Nazism," Senator Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, yesterday accused President Roosevelt of having withheld "until election year" secret reports regarding German rearmament for the present war.

Bridges, replying to last night's nationally broadcast speech by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, said Ickes himself "is a Hitler in short pants" and "the keeper of the White House umbrella."

He was designated by Republican Presidential Nominee Wendell L. Willkie to answer Ickes, whose radiocast was the Administration's reply to Willkie's Elwood, Ind., acceptance speech.

Ickes had characterized Willkie as "the simple, barefood Wall street lawyer." He described as "contemptible" Willkie's charge that Mr. Roosevelt may be inciting the country to war and called the Republican Party a party of pro-Nazi appeasement.

In his accusation against Mr. Roosevelt, Bridges said:

"Adolf Hitler rose to German power a few months before Roosevelt took over the American Presidency. Hitler's plans were known. They were published.

"The secret reports of our foreign agents concerning German rearmament were not pleasant news. So they were filed in the White House waste basket until election year. And the Congress and the people were kept in total ignorance of the dreadful portents on the European horizon which President Roosevelt alone could have disclosed.

"Along with Blum, with Baldwin and with Chamberlain, Roosevelt slept as Germany armed.

"With eighteen billions of blank checks which he could spend wholly at his own discretion he built with these funds not one battleship, not a plane, not an antiaircraft gun, not a single tank. He squandered it recklessly as he wished."

Ickes had criticized Willkie for assertedly attacking the dignity of the Presidency.

"Since when," Bridges asked, "has Ickes defended the 'dignity of the Presidency?' Since when has the Roosevelt family upheld the dignity of the White House?

"Professional Rabble-Rouser"

"Like a small boy hiding behind his mother's apron strings, the New Deal has sought protection behind the 'dignity' of an office that long ago vanished under crass commercialization by the Roosevelts."

"Who is this Ickes who talks so big—at a safe distance—about Hitler? In his own right, Ickes is a Hitler in short pants. Like Hitler he hates the newspapers and freedom of the press and speech and American form of nazism. Like Hitler he is a professional rabble-rouser who never succeeded at anything else; who is a political hatchet man.

"The New Deal regime that Ickes schemes for is nothing but an American form of nazism. Like Hitler he is a common scold puffed up by high office. The resemblance is closest in their attitude toward the truth."

Previous plans were for Bridges to broadcast his reply to Ickes. These were canceled by Willkie who said Ickes' speech was not important enough to warrant buying radio time for an answer.

Willkie Belonged To Tammany; Records Show It, Says Flynn

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 20.—Edward J. Flynn, Democratic National Chairman, charged today that Wendell L. Willkie was once a member of a club affiliated with the Democratic organization in New York County and as such was a member of Tammany Hall.

FLYNN

He made the first part of the statement at a morning press conference and added the second this afternoon in commenting on Willkie's characterization as a "plain and simple falsehood" the assertion by Secretary of Interior Ickes that the Republican Presidential nominee was a member of Tammany.

Flynn said Willkie joined the Democratic Club in the Fifteenth District in June, 1935, "and the records of the Grover Cleveland Democratic Club—the Tammany organization in the Fifteenth District—show that Mr. Willkie paid his annual dues as a member of that club for two years."

Asked what constituted Tammany Hall, Flynn said:

"Tammany Hall is the Democratic organization in the borough of Manhattan in New York County. Any member of a district club is a member of Tammany Hall."

Flynn added that Willkie had also been a member of the Democratic county committee and produced a copy of a board of elections report, certifying that Willkie and Mrs. Willkie had been elected to the county committee of the fifteenth assembly district in 1935.

Flynn announced appointment of Wayne Johnson, of New York, as chairman of the finance committee for the national committee, and Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, as director of the speakers' bureau for the campaign.

Declaring that "Billy Mitchell has proved his case, "Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, yesterday introduced a bill to confer posthumously the rank of major general on Col. William L. Mitchell, original proponent of a large air force.

"It is high time that Congress recognizes that he was right in advocating a large air force," Clark said. "Billy Mitchell has proved his case."

Because of criticism of the Army air force over a period of years, Mitchell was court-martialed and demoted in rank.

W. Preston Lane, of Hagerstown, Md., Maryland Democratic National Committeeman, announced tonight that Truman B. Cash, of Westminster, new chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, had been chosen to head the Party's 1940 Maryland election campaign.

The announcement was made after a series of conferences between Democratic Party leaders and members of the Maryland Congressional delegation, including Lane, Senators Tydings and Radcliffe, Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, Howard Bruce, E. Brooke Lee and others.

Cash is a Westminster insurance man.

Parks Office Asks $202,045 Increase

To meet the demands of a population increased by the defense program and keep them "fit and of good morale," the National Capital Parks yesterday asked the District Commissioners to increase its 1942 budget by $202,045.

The agency, which functions under the Department of Interior, has asked for $1,127,487 to extend the city's play areas and add eight privates and one sergeant to the park police force.

The inadequacy of recreation facilities in the National Capital Park system has brought severe criticism from the public and the press during the past year, officials said. The city has lagged behind other "progressive municipalities," particularly in the provision of tennis courts and softball diamonds. This lack of facilities will become more acute due to the expansion of the National Gallery of Art and the extension of Independence avenue, which necessitate the removal of 27 tennis courts and two softball diamonds.

$560,000 Program Suggested

The parks office proposes the development program be concentrated in the East Potomac Park, Anacostia and Brightwood recreation centers. They recommend a half-million dollar program spread over a four-year period, with annual appropriations of $125,000.

This expenditure would include the construction of a field house for the Fort Dupont Park golf course; the Brightwood recreation center; and either completion of the central wing of the existing field house in East Potomac Park or construction of a building at the northern end of the park, and provide for the establishment of three complete recreational units.

$25,000 Asked for Dam

A sum of $25,000 is requested to construct a dam across Rock Creek at Pierce Mill. It was pointed out the operation of the mill depends upon the restoration of the water level upstream to the elevation it had when the mill was in operation.

In requesting more policemen for the park force, the officials point out that the personnel was reduced from 76 to 72 in 1935 and never brought back, although park areas have increased by some 794 acres. During the present fiscal year the development of five large recreational areas will be completed with CCC funds, necessitating additional police protection. Inadequate police protection in the past five years has resulted in a large amount of physical damage from abuses, vandalism, and petty thievery, which cannot be prevented unless additional police are provided, it was said.

Col. Cecil Leaps To Death From Hartford Hotel

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 20 (AP).—Col. Joseph S. Cecil, U. S. A., retired, plunged to his death today from the sixth floor of a local hotel. Col. Cecil's home was at 2029 Connecticut avenue northwest, Washington, D. C.

Dr. Perry T. Hough, medical examiner, said Col. Cecil, who was 62 years old and a holder of the Congressional Medal of Honor, had committed suicide.

Col. Cecil leaves his wife, Mrs. Caroline Van Nydeck Schenck Cecil, of Washington and Falmouth, Mass.; a daughter, Mrs. Thomas E. Adams, of Washington, and a brother, Maj. Thomas J. Cecil, U. S. A., retired, of St. Petersburg, Fla.

Col. Cecil won the Congressional Medal of Honor, one of the rarest of awards, for "distinguished bravery" in service during the Philippine Insurrection. Since his retirement, he and Mrs. Cecil had lived in Washington and at their summer home at Falmouth.

German Anti-Nazis Seized in France By Hitler's Agents

Chaney, Switzerland, Aug. 20 (AP). Hundreds of German anti-Nazis, who fled their homeland when Adolf Hitler came into power, are being rounded up by his agents in conquered France and taken back to Nazi jails, reports from across the border disclosed today.

Armed with long lists of names, Nazi officials were said to be making the rounds of civilian internment camps in the unoccupied zone in France in a widespread search for fugitive German nationals.

Neutral observers told of seeing large groups of forlorn prisoners herded into trucks under guard of heavily armed Germans in civilian clothes and being driven off to Germany via the occupied zone.

The Federal Diary:

Defense Job Boom for Women Seen by Civil Service Aide

Mrs. McMillin Warns, However, It's as Difficult to Land Government Position in Washington as It Is to Break Into Movies

By Edward Ryan

American women can expect a job boom as a result of the National Defense program, but they ought not to look for it in Washington, Civil Service Commissioner Lucille Foster McMillin warned yesterday.

Mrs. McMillin, first woman member of the Civil Service Commission, said that women and men have about as much chance to break into Government jobs in Washington as to break into the movies in Hollywood. Her talk was broadcast over the Columbia network.

Washington, and Hollywood, she said "seem to attract men and women as the candle lures the moth."

Civil Service Fills Jobs

"I am not an authority on Hollywood," said Mrs. McMillin, "but I do know that it is dangerous and usually futile to come to Washington unless there is a job waiting."

Practically all the Federal jobs, including defense posts, are being filled by civil service examinations, and "American women should not come to Washington unless sent for," she said.

Mrs. McMillin is the author of a book on women in government, and she pointed out that they had been holding public jobs since before the Revolution. Nearly a century went by, however, before more than a handful of women were holding jobs in Federal departments.

Then, in 1862, Gen. Francis E. Spinner, treasurer of the United States, hired Jennie Douglas to trim paper currency, and, said Mrs. McMillin, she did the job so well that the issue was settled in women's favor.

"We may well be philosophical over the fact," she added, "that when the time came to immortalize this incident in bronze and marble, a statue was erected to Gen. Spinner, who gave Jennie Douglas a job, and not to Jennie herself, who did the work."

Sees Brighter Prospects

Mrs. McMillin described the World War years as a "milestone in the history of the progress of women," and suggested that they face an even brighter prospect during the 1940 emergency.

There are already 172,000 women in the Federal service, she said, including 5,000 in the Navy Department, and 15,000 in the War Department. They are working in a wide variety of jobs—like those of Ruth B. Shipley, passport division chief in the State Department; Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint; Mrs. Marion Banister, assistant treasurer.

Unlike the World War days, she said, women workers in Government now can expect the same pay as men for the same kind of work.

In some jobs they can expect preference over men—like coding and decoding important dispatches, a task requiring employes who can keep secrets, Mrs. McMillin said that "strangely enough, in view of certain traditions with which you may be familiar, these jobs usually go to women."

Apply by Thousands

Women, said Mrs. McMillin, have already applied in thousands for new examinations for stenographers and nurses in connection with defense. For many other jobs, she said, women have qualities which make them valuable, particularly in work "requiring care and alertness and the quick use of the hands." They would be useful, she suggested, in analysis of powder, in loading shells, in operating machines, and in other jobs needing "the same tiype of ability which has made the girls and women of America experts with the typewriter."

Mrs. McMillin said it was too early to predict all the ways women would contribute to the defense program, but she added that it seemed "inevitable" that the sphere of women's activity will widen.

"We can say with absolute assurance," she said, "that whatever women are called upon to do they will do well and that when the history of these stirring times is written it will be known that they have contributed splendidly and patriotically to the national defense work which faces our country today."

Berry Urges Unity Before Engravers

A. F. L. Union Gets Plea To End 'Disjointed Industrial Conditions'

A plea for the unity of all labor to maintain democracy, prevent "disjointed industrial conditions" and keep America out of war was made yesterday at the forty-first annual convention of the A. F. L.'s International Photo-Engravers' Union of North America.

George L. Berry, president of the A. F. L.'s International Pressmen's Union, urged the union delegates "not to be stampeded by any circumstances that may arise in connection with our differences internally in the American labor movement."

"The interests of all who are engaged in the processes of free enterprise within a democracy are at stake," he said, urging the solidification of the "inseparable partnership of labor, management and investment."

Calling upon investors and business managers to join with labor in eliminating "disjointed industrial conditions," Berry said that only prompt action could combat the threat of Fascism and Communism in this country.

"It seems to me," he added, "that we should concentrate on the task of strengthening our forces, not necessarily in contemplation of improved economic status, but to hold what we now possess, because we cannot escape the economic disorder of the world."

The meeting was held at the Mayflower Hotel. William Green, president of the A. F. of L., and Secretary of Labor Perkins are scheduled to address the annual banquet at the Mayflower tomorrow night.

U. S. Health Aide To Fix Va. Sites For Oyster Floats

By the Associated Press

The Public Health Service agreed yesterday to send a representative to Virginia to survey, in cooperation with State health authorities, oyster areas and locate acceptable sites for the use of oyster floats.

The agreement represented a victory for a large delegation of Virginia State officials and oystermen who came here yesterday to protest against a health service ruling prohibiting the future use of floats in public waters.

Floats are used for natural water storage of oysters, where through the ebb and flow of tides through the floats, sand and other foreign matters are removed from the oysters to improve their quality and "harden" them to withstand shipment. All areas recommended by the State health authorities will be studied, and those found not below health service standards will be accepted.

Girl Singer Subs for Star At Interview

LAURA TRIGGIANI
Sings Lead in "Micaela"

Young Soprano Tells How She Made Debut In Big-Time Opera

A 22-year-old soprano, as new to press conferences as she is to opera, yesterday stepped cheerfully into the shoes of a star who failed to turn up and told reporters how it feels to jump from high school to big-time singing.

Pinch-hitting at a press conference for Coe Glade, acclaimed as the greatest present-day "Carmen," and who is to sing that role tonight at the Watergate, was auburn-haired Laura Triggiani, who is as ingenious as her favorite exclamation:

"And how!"

This is the plot of Miss Triggiani's success story, with the hardships deliberately omitted.

She was born of Italian parents in Paterson, N. J. An uncle is a tenor and her grandfather used to sing bass in the church choir, but both were on a strictly amateur basis.

Furthermore, she has a brother who is a saxophonist in a swing band and who hurls epithets like "yodeler" every time she braces herself for a classical score.

When 16 she asked a New York singing teacher to start her on a course of instruction. She was told to "go back and finish high school." Nevertheless, she was persistent.

Miss Triggiani makes a long story short by saying she did finish high school, tackled the teacher again—this time successfully—and last January broke into opera via the leading role in "La Traviata."

When the star of an opera company was unable to appear for an engagement in Newark, the company manager telephoned frantically around New York. He finally reached Miss Triggiani's teacher, who recommended his star pupil for the role, despite her lack of experience. Just as she did yesterday, the young singer jumpd into the breach.

Last week the young soprano saw "Carmen" for the first time from the other side of the footlights, and she didn't like it. She says she kept thinking such things as "now Micaela (her role in the opera tonight) is getting ready to make her entrance." She added:

"It took the glamour away, and how."

No Russian Base Found Off Alaska

Alameda, Calif., Aug. 20 (AP).—Reports that Russia had fortified Big Diomede Island, in the Bering Sea off Alaska, were discredited today by Commander Harold G. Bradbury, of the Coast Guard Cutter Shoshone, just back from a patrol cruise of Alaskan waters.

"All I saw on the island was a barn-like frame building, perhaps constructed to house a boat or two," Commander Bradbury said, adding that Big Diomede and its beach are "completely covered with boulders" and that it would be "almost impossible to level the island, let alone to construct a base."

Churchill Sees Fusion of U. S., British Aims

Prime Minister Agrees to Leasing Of Naval Bases

reinforcement" of Britain's navy from the United States—an unspoken but clear reference to her need for United States' aid in filling gaps in her fleet. American discussion has centered about the sale to Britain of 50 overage destroyers.

The prime minister gave "thanks to our friends over there" that Britain has been able to ferry across the tions of all kinds—cannon, rifles, tions of all kinds: Cannon, rifles, machine guns, cartridges and shells —all safely landed without the loss of a gun or a round."

(This was taken in Washington as the first official word that surplus United States Army munitions valued at $37,000,000, released by the Government almost three months ago, had arrived safely in England.)

Jeers at German Blockade

Brimful of expressions of confidence in Britain's final triumph, Churchill again and again spoke of "when"—not if—Britain reaches the top of the hill and referred to the "campaigns of 1941 and 1942" and again that Britain's energies must not be "confined to defending ourselves. . . ."

He jeered at Germany's blockade, told the House Britain's air power was overhauling Germany's, declared that Britain was growing less and less vulnerable to invasion, that her capacity for war was rising and that some day there would be peace again in a Europe freed from Nazi domination.

It was one of his best oratorical performances—calm and polished yet bursting wth exuberance.

When he finished, he sank back on the government bench and let the noise ride. Finally he rose and stomped out to work.

Churchill told the House Britain decided some months ago that her interests and those of the United States both required that the United States have facilities for naval and air defense of the Western Hemisphere.

"We have therefore decided, spontaneously and without being asked or offered any inducement," he said, "to inform the Government of the United States that we should be glad to place such defense facilities at their disposal by leasing suitable sites in our trasatlantic possessions for their greater security against unmeasured dangers of the future.

"President Roosevelt has made it clear that he would like to discuss with us and with the Dominion of Canada and Newfoundland the development of American naval and air facilities in Newfoundland and the West Indies. . . .

"Undoubtedly, this process means these two great organizations of English-speaking democracies will have to be somewhat mixed together in some of their affairs for mutual and general advantage.

"For my own part, looking out upon the future, I do not view the process with any misgivings."

Hoover's Proposal Rejected

The prime minister flatly turned thumbs down on former President Hoover's proposal that Britain allow food through her blockade to help relieve famine in Nazi-mastered areas of continental Europe.

Declaring that the Nazis "have repeatedly stated they possess ample reserves of food and that they can feed their captive peoples," he cried, "Let Hitler bear his responsibilities to the full, and let the peoples of Europe who groan beneath his yoke aid in every way the coming of the day when it will be broken."

But Churchill, reluctant at this time to "embark on speculation about the future shape which should be given to Europe or the new securities which must be arranged to spare mankind the miseries of a Third World War," sketched his picture of peace only in broadest outline.

Churchill found the scales of almost a year of fighting heavier on the side of Britain.

"Whole Island Bristles"

He acknowledged that a "cataract of disaster" had poured out in the past three months—the Dutch and Belgians conquered, France forced out of the war, Italy brought in against Britain.

But, on the other side, he said:

"We have rearmed and rebuilt our armies in a degree which would have been deemed impossible a few months ago . . .

"The whole island bristles against invaders from the sea or from the air . . .

"Our navy is far stronger than at the beginning of the war . . .

"The merchant tonnage under the British flag . . . is larger than when we began.

"Our stocks of foods of all kinds are many times as great as in the days of peace."

Churchill emphasized Britain's growing power in the air against attacks which, he admitted, Britons must "certainly expect" to become even more intense.

Blames African Defeat on French

"The enemy is, of course, far more numerous than we are," he acknowledged. "But our new production already largely exceeds his, and the American production is only just beginning to flow in.

"Our bomber and fighter strength after all this fighting is larger than it has ever been."

Churchill touched only briefly on the loss of Somaliland to Italy, blaming it primarily on France's collapse, and commented that "far larger operations no doubt impend in the Middle East."

For these, he added, "we have large armies and many means of reinforcing them."

The last war, he said, was a struggle of "prodigious slaughter;" this one, a "conflict of strategy, of organization, of technical operators, science, mechanics and morale."

Only two weeks short of a full year of war, he noted, British killed, wounded and missing, including civilians, are about 92,000, and many of these are prisoners, against more than 300,000 in 1914-15.

Greeks Rush Army To Face Italians

"We have reason to fear an attack from the Italians as soon as Italy begins its long-awaited campaign against Egypt.

"We think the Italians wish to deprive British naval and air units of possible bases against Italy by grabbing our harbor islands before England has a chance to do so. Many of our officers believe Britain's first naval defense line in the Mediterranean runs from Corfu to Alexandria."

[Augur, British journalist, writing for the New York Times from London, said news had been received here that Bulgaria rejected an Italian invitation to join in action against Greece. Rome invited King Boris to press the Bulgarian demand for an outlet into the Aegean Sea from Greece simultaneously with an Italian move from Albania. King Boris refused to consider the idea and ordered his premier to publish the fact to the world, Augur asserted.]

Athens, Aug. 20 (AP).—Premier Metaxas called on King George late tonight, but the subject of the audience was not disclosed. Neither was there government confirmation of reports Turkey has promised to come to the aid of Greece if she is attacked. The reports circulated after a conference between Metaxas and the Turkish Minister to Greece.

(Britain already has made such pledges to Greece and Italian diplomats have been reported in recent conferences with Metaxas to have insisted that Greece repudiate such guarantees and come within the Italian sphere of influence.)

Torpedo Was Italian

Athens, Greece, Aug. 20 (U.P.).—Naval experts tonight announced that the markings "Turin 1936" found on a torpedo fragment taken from the Greek mine-laying cruiser Helle, sunk by an "unidentified" submarine last week, indicated it was Italian-made.

[Previously, the Greek government, apparently in an effort to avoid any further friction with Italy, had shown strong inclinations to keep the Helle incident as quiet as possible. Only Monday it was said the results of the investigation probably would not be published.

[Aerial bombing attacks on two Greek freighters and two Greek destroyers also were minimized by the Athens government, which insisted the places were "unidentified," although crew members and officers of the destroyers positively identified the attacking planes as Italian.

[Thus the announcement of the nationality of the torpedo may indicate the Greeks have abandoned hope of placating Italy and now seek only to make the record clear.]

It was announced also tonight that the government was requisitioning wrecking tugs which are laying antisubmarine and antimine layer nets in the principal Greek ports.

Italy Charges Terror

Rome, Aug. 20 (AP).—The official Italian news agency Stefani accused Greek authorities tonight of hiring assassins to terrorize Albanians in the Greek region of Cismuria, and declared the Albanians were awaiting Italian "action to ban the criminals."

(This is the sharpest suggestion yet heard of direct measures against Greece, which long has been subject of a violent Fascist press campaign.

(Italy's press has laid claim to Ciamuria for Albania, which has been under Italian occupation since April, 1939. Italians said that Ciamuria is rightfully Albanian territory.)

Army in Hawaii Using Aged Planes

Bombers Lack Armor, Self-Sealing Gas Tank, Bullet-Proofing

(This is the second of a series of articles on America's Pacific defense.)

By W. W. Chaplin
International News Service Staff Writer

Honolulu, Aug. 20.—The Hawaiian air force—Army and Navy—is so far merely a skeleton on which service chieftans hope to build an adequate defense of the mainland from possible Pacific attack.

If there should be aggression from the Orient, the Navy now centered here would fan out into the ocean and the air forces would be left the main job of defending Hawaii and back of that the American mainland.

At the present time the Army has about 300 planes here and the Navy about 250, counting the planes on aircraft carriers. That's a fairly adequate air fleet if the ships are of the latest model able to meet the best that any potential enemy might have.

Army Bombers Old

But the Army level bombers are at least 4 years old, far older than bombers declared surplus because of obsolescence and so sold to the British, and the Navy dive bombers are without any of the equipment of modern warfare.

Neither the Army nor Navy planes have armor plating, self-sealing gasoline tanks, or bullet-proof glass to protect the pilots and crews from the fire of enemy planes.

I went through the Army air base at Hickman Field, adjoining the Pearl Harbor naval base, and saw what is being done to strengthen the air defense here.

Millions of dollars are being poured into airport construction and equipment, but almost nothing so far gives any evidence of new flying equipment.

I walked through great barracks where each soldier is allotted a comfortable iron bed. There were three pairs of shoes beneath each bed, and changes of uniform in the locked trunks. Kitchens have been built to feed 3,000 men and the most modern cooking and refrigerating equipment is installed.

But there aren't enough planes and those on hand are not modern. This explanation was given by Maj. Gen. Walter H. Frank, commanding the Army air force here:

"The air bases now built or under construction will have cost about $50,000,000. The planes we have now are perhaps four years old. That is because we get planes after they have been in service about a year on the mainland to get the bugs out of them. So thus far we haven't any armored planes, any self-sealing tanks, any bullet-proof glass. Those are new developments and they haven't come to us yet."

Plenty of Bombs

The air forces boast easily about the future, about what they hope to have, but only about ammunition do they boast of the present.

"We have bombs enough," one high air force officer told me, "to last virtually years, all buried underground."

Underground facilities in Hawaii are not going to be restricted to mere burial of bombs, however. The first of a contemplated series of underground plane hangars is already being planned—to be hewn out of a hillside. Such hangars would be connected with runways for speedy takeoffs and would be carefully camouflaged to protect them from being spotted easily from the sky or sea.

Gasoline storage tanks likewise are being installed beneath the earth's surface. In addition to the millions of dollars worth of ammunition stored underground, quantities of war gas and foodstuffs have been similarly "planted" in charted zones.

The more remote islands of the Hawaiian group are also being developed for auxiliary bases from which flying transports could operate carrying special shock troops to any part of the islands where an emergency might raise.

Shenandoah Waits Ruling on School Fund Dispute

Strasburg, Va., Aug. 20 (AP).—William H. Logan, commonwealth's attorney of Shenandoah County, today asked Attorney General Abram P. Stables if his interpretation of the Virginia appropriation law coincided with that of Dr. Sydney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, who yesterday told the county school board that unless revenue equal to the amount expended last year to operate the county's public schools is appropriated for the same purpose this year, the State will allocate no funds to Shenandoah County beyond the constitutional allowance.

The Attorney General told Logan to submit his question in writing. The commonwealth's attorney said he complied with this suggestion and expected a reply in several days.

With schools normally scheduled to open early in September, patrons in this county still are without any assurance that the schools will be operated for a full term and teachers who have not received all of their salary for the 1937-40 session, are without contracts for the forthcoming term. A budget submitted earlier this year by the school board to the board of supervisors was rejected on the ground that it called for excessive expenditures.

Chungking Razed By Fire After Japanese Raids

Chungking, China, Aug. 20 (AP).—High winds fanned flames from Japanese incendiary bombs into a raging conflagration tonight that left Chungking's eight-century-old walled city area an unrecognizable mass of smoking ruins.

Hundreds of Chinese were believed killed and trapped in the blazing area where homes sheltering 25,000 persons were wiped out by 100 Japanese bombers in the sixth raid in four days. Antiaircraft batteries shot down one raider.

Lin Yu-tang, Chinese author of American best sellers, lived through two direct bomb hits on his air raid shelter. He said later:

"If they can dish it out, we can take it."

Donovan Reports

Fifth Column Works Best in Democracy

(The following is a condensation of the second of four articles made public by Secretary of the Navy Knox as part of the national defense program. The other articles will follow on successive days. Col. Donovan recently returned from a mission abroad, on behalf of Secretary Knox. He wrote these articles in collaboration with Edgar Ansel Mowrer, foreign correspondent of the Chicago Daily News.)

By Col. William J. Donovan and Edgar Ansel Mowrer

When all allowance has been made for Hitler's superior armies, his resourcefulness, his daring and the vital assistance by Germans living within the victim countries, his success can only be explained by another factor. This is nothing less than the presence among his enemies of what, since the Spanish civil war, has been known as the "Fifth Column."

Since no country has ever been unanimous, a "Fifth Column" has existed potentially in every land in every war. But despotic or totalitarian countries ruthlessly suppress it at home while exploiting it eleswhere. It is in a democracy that the "Fifth Column" can function most freely and effectively. It remained for Adolf Hitler's genius to raise the creation, strengthening, organization and activity of the "Fifth Column" in the countries that opposed him to a decisive weapon.

He said more or less openly that he would do so.

"We need armies. But we shall not use them as in 1914. The place of artillery will in the future be taken by revolutionary propaganda. To break down the enemy psychologically before the armies begin to function at all. The enemy people must be demoralized and ready to capitulate before military action can even be thought of . . . mental confusion, indecisiveness, panic, these are our weapons. The history of revolutions . . . is always the same. The ruling classes capitulate. Why? Defeatism: They no longer have the will to conquer."

Use Communist Agitators

The propaganda machine for creating and sustaining a "fifth column"—again according to Hitler's confessed theory—is of a double nature. On one side it aims at influencing the masses. For this purpose Hitler in the present war utilizes his radio traitors. Lord Haw Haw for the English, Ferdonnet for the French, and to some extent, particularly in the last two years, Communist agitators whom he tricked or corrupted into serving him. But for the classes he had a much more subtle bait. As he himself put it:

"The results at which I aim are only to be obtained by the systematic corruption of the possessing and governing classes. Business advantages, erotic satisfactions and ambitions, are the three main stops in our propaganda organ."

Who did this work in the various countries?

In the bloodless conquest of Austria, "fifth column" Austrian leaders like Seyss-Inquart, dupes like Guido Schmidt, played a decisive part, while the discontent of the masses was whipped up to enthusiasm in favor of Nazi Germany, agents like Franz von Papen skillfully convinced leading Austrians that only through Hitler could their secret aspirations be fulfilled.

Czechs, Poles Immune

The Slovaks, who had suffered their bondage under Hungary, could be duped. But Czechs and Poles could not. Both peoples had lived for too long cheek to jowl with Prussians to have the slightest doubt as to Hitler's real intentions. There was no strong "fifth column" among the Czechs and Poles; a few Czech agrarians, the former Polish Foreign Minister Josef Beck. The Czechs were finally conquered by French betrayal and British selfishness, the Poles by the armed might of a nation four times as strong.

To see the Fifth Column in full swing one had to wait for the attack on democratic countries.

In Norway there is little doubt but that Fifth Column activities contributed to the success of the German blitz attack and were responsible for the quick collapse of all organized resistance.

In Belgium, without the shadow of a doubt, Flemings loyal to Hitler betrayed the main defenses of the Albert Canal and opened not only their country, but Holland as well, to German invasion.

Text of Churchill's Confident Report to Commons on the War

'Road to Victory May Not Be So Long As We Expect,' Prime Minister Says, But 'Be It Long or Short, We Mean To Reach Our Journey's End'

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 20.—The text of Prime Minister Churchill's speech today to the House of Commons:

Almost a year has passed since the war began. It is natural for us, therefore, to pause on our journey at this milestone and survey the dark, wide field. It is also useful to compare the first year of this second war against German aggression with its forerunner a quarter of a century ago.

Although this war is, in fact, only a continuation of the last, very great differences in its character are apparent. In the last war millions of men fought by hurling enormous masses of steel at one another. Men and shells was the cry and prodigious slaughter was the consequence.

In this war nothing of this kind has yet appeared. It is a conflict of strategy, of organization, of technical operators, science, mechanics and morale.

The British casualties in the first 12 months of the Great War amounted to 365,000. In this war British killed, wounded, prisoners and missing, including civilians, are about 92,000, but of these a large proportion are alive as prisoners of war. Throughout all Europe for one man killed or wounded in this first year, perhaps, five were killed or wounded in 1914-15.

The slaughter is but a fraction, but the consequences to the belligerents have been even more deadly. We have seen great countries with powerful armies dashed out of coherent existence in a few weeks. We have seen the French Republic and the renowned French army beaten into complete and total submission with less than the casualties which they suffered in any one of half a dozen of the battles of 1914-18.

The entire body—it might almost seem at times the soul of France has succumbed to physical effects incomparably less terrible than those which were sustained with fortitude and undaunted will power 25 years ago.

Although up to the present the loss of life has been mercifully diminished, the decisions reached in the course of the struggle are even more profound upon the fate of nations than anything which has ever happened since barbaric times.

Moves are made upon scientific and strategic boards, advantages are gained by mechanical means as the result of which scores of millions of men become incapable of further resistance or judge themselves incapable of further resistance, and a fearful game of chess proceeds from check to mate by which the unhappy players seem to be inexorably bound.

There is another and far more obvious difference from 1914. The whole of the warring nations are involved—not only soldiers, but the entire population—men, women and children.

The fronts are everywhere. The trenches are dug in the towns and the streets. Every village is fortified. Every road is barred.

The front line runs through the factories. The workmen are soldiers, with different weapons but the same courage.

There seems to be every reason to believe that this new kind of war is well suited to the genius and resources of the British nation and empire, and that once we get properly equipped and properly started a war of this kind will be more favorable to us than the somber mass slaughters of the Somme and Passchendaele.

If it is a case of whole nations fighting and suffering together, that ought to suit us, too, because we are the most united of all the nations. Because we entered the war upon the national will and with our eyes open, because we have been nursed in freedom and individual responsibility and are the products, not of totalitarian uniformity, but of tolerance and variety.

Intention to Maintain Blockade Of All Countries Under German Power

If all these qualities are turned, as they are being turned, to the arts of war, we may be able to show the enemy quite a lot of things they have not thought of yet.

Since the Germans drove out the Jews and lowered their technical standards, our science is definitely ahead of theirs.

Our geographical position, the command of the sea, and the friendship of the United States, enable us to draw resources from the whole world and to manufacture weapons of war of every kind, but especially of the superfine kinds, on a scale hitherto practiced only by Nazi Germany.

Hitler is now sprawled over Europe. Our offensive springs are being slowly compressed, and we must resolutely and methodically prepare ourselves for the campaigns of 1941 and 1942.

Two or three years are not a long time, even in our short precarious lives. They are nothing in the history of a nation.

And when we are doing the finest thing in the world, and have the honor to be the sole champion of the liberty of all Europe, we must not grudge these years, or weary as we toil and struggle through them.

It does not follow that our energies in future years will be exclusively confined to defending ourselves and our possessions. Many opportunities may lie open to amphibious power, and we must be ready to take advantage of them.

One of the ways to bring this war to a speedy end is to convince the enemy, not by words but by deeds, that we have both the will and the means not only to go on indefinitely but to strike heavy and unexpected blows.

The road to victory may not be so long as we expect. But we have no right to count upon this.

Be it long or short, rough or smooth, we mean to reach our journey's end.

It is our intention to maintain and enforce a strict blockade not only of Germany but of Italy, France and all other countries that have fallen into the German power.

I read in the papers that Herr Hitler has also proclaimed a strict blockade of the British Islands.

No one can complain of that.

I remember the Kaiser doing it in the last war.

What indeed would be a matter of general complaint would be if we were to prolong the agony of all Europe by allowing food to go in to nourish the Nazis and aid their war effort, or to allow food to go in to the subjugated peoples which would certainly be pillaged off them by their Nazi conquerors.

There have been many proposals, founded on the highest motives, that food should be allowed to pass the blockade for the relief of these populations.

I regret that we must refuse these requests.

The Nazis are boasting that they have created a new unified economy in Europe.

They have repeatedly stated that they possess ample reserves of food and that they can feed their captive peoples.

In a German broadcast of June 27 it was said that while Mr. Hoover's plan for relieving France, Belgium and Holland deserved commendation, the German forces had already taken the necessary steps.

We know that in Norway, when the German troops went in, there were food supplies to last for a year.

Many of Valuable Foods Essential To Manufacture of War Materials

We know that Poland, though not a rich country, usually produced sufficient food for her people.

Moreover, the other countries which Herr Hitler has invaded all held considerable stocks when the Germans entered and are themselves very substantial food producers.

If all this food is not available now it can only be because it has been removed to feed the people of Germany and to give them increased rations there during the last few months.

At this season of the year, and for some months to come, there is the least chance of scarcity, as the harvest has just been gathered in.

There is another aspect.

Many of the most valuable foods are essential to the manufacture of vital war materials. Fats are used to make explosives, potatoes to make the alcohol for motor spirit. The plastic materials now so largely used for aircraft construction are made of milk.

If the Germans use these commodities to help them bomb our women and children, rather than to feed the population who produce them, we may be sure that any imported food would go the same way, directly or indirectly, or be employed to relieve the enemy of the responsibilities he has assumed.

Let Hitler bear his responsibilities to the full, and let the peoples of Europe who groan beneath his yoke aid in every way the coming of the day when it will be broken.

Meanwhile we can arrange in advance for the speedy entry of food into any part of the enslaved area when this part has been wholly cleared of German forces and has genuinely regained its freedom.

We shall do our best to encourage the building up of reserves of food all over the world, so that there will always be held out before the eyes of the peoples of Europe, including—I say it deliberately—the German-Austrian peoples, the certainty that the shattering of the Nazi power will bring to them all immediate food, freedom and peace.

Rather more than a quarter of a year has passed since the new government came into power in this country.

What a cataract of disaster has poured out upon us since then!

The trustful Dutch overwhelmed, their beloved and respected sovereign driven into exile, the peaceful City of Rotterdam the scene of a massacre as hideous as anything in the Thirty Years War; Belgium invaded and beaten down, our own fine expeditionary force, which King Leopold called to his rescue, cut off and almost captured, escaping, as it seemed, only by a miracle and with the loss of all its equipment; our Ally, France, out; Italy in against us.

All France in the power of the enemy, all its arsenals and vast masses of military material converted to the enemy's use; a puppet government set up at Vichy which may at any moment be forced to become our foe; the whole western seaboard of Europe, from the North Cape to the Spanish frontier, in German hands; all the ports, all the air fields upon this immense front employed against us as potential springboards of invasion, the German air power, numerically so far outstripping ours, has been brought so close to our island that what we used to dread has come to pass, and the hostile bombers not only reach our shores in a few minutes and from many directions but can be escorted by their fighters.

If we had been confronted at the beginning or May with such a prospect, it would have seemed incredible that at this point of a period of horror and disaster we should stand erect, sure of ourselves, masters of our fate and with the conviction of final victory burning unquenchable in our hearts.

Few would have believed we could survive; none would have believed that we should today not only feel stronger, but should actually be stronger, than we have ever been before.

Let us see what has happened on the other side of the scales.

The British nation and the British Empire, finding themselves alone, stood undismayed against disaster. No one flinched or wavered; nay, some who formerly thought of peace now think only of war. Our people are united and resolved as they have never been before.

Death and ruin have become small things compared with the shame of defeat or failure in duty.

We cannot tell what lies ahead. It may be that even greater ordeals lie bofere us.

We will face whatever is coming to us. We are sure of ourselves and of our cause. Here, then, is the supreme fact:

Meanwhile, we have not only fortified our hearts but our island.

We have rearmed and rebuilt our armies in a degree which would have been deemed impossible a few months ago.

We have ferried across the Atlantic, thanks to our friends over there, an immense mass of munitions of all kinds: Cannon, rifles, machine guns, cartridges and shells; all safely landed without the loss of a gun or a round.

The output of our own factories, working as they have never worked before, has poured forth.

The whole British army is at home.

More than 2,000,000 determined men have rifles and bayonets in their hands tonight, and three-quarters of them are in regular military formations.

We have never had armies like this in our island in time of war.

The whole island bristles against invaders from the sea or from the air.

As I explained to the House in the middle of June, the stronger our army at home the larger must be the invading expedition; and the larger the invading expedition the less difficulty will be the task of the Navy in detecting its assembly and in intercepting and destroying it on passage, and the greater would be the difficulty of feeding and supplying the invaders if ever they landed in the teeth of continuous naval and air attack upon their communications.

As in Nelson's day, the maxim holds——our rst line of defense is the enemy's ports.

Now air reconnaissance and photography have brought to an old principle a new and potent aid.

Our Navy is far stronger than at the beginning of the war.

The great flow of new construction set on foot at the outbreak is new beginning to come in.

We hope our friends across the ocean will send us a timely reinforcement to bridge the gap between the peace flotillas of 1939 and the war flotillas of 1941.

The seas and oceans are open. The U-boats are contained. The magnetic mine is mastered.

The merchant tonnage under the British flag after a year of unlimited U-boat war, after eight months of intensive mining attack, is larger than when he began.

British Empire Stands Invincible And Nazidom Can Still Be Resisted

We have, in addition, under our control 4,000,000 tons of shipping from the captive countries, which has taken refuge here or in the harbors of the empire.

Our stocks of food of all kinds are many times as great as in the days of peace.

Why do I say all this? Not, assuredly, to boast; not to give the slightest countenance to complacency. The dangers we face are still enormous.

But so are our advantages and resources.

I recount them because the people have a right to know that there are solid grounds for the confidence we feel, and that we have good reason to believe ourselves capable, as I said in a very dark hour two months ago, of continuing the war, if necessary alone, if necessary for years.

I say it because the fact that the British Empire stands invincible and that Nazidom can still be resisted will kindle again the spark of hope in the breasts of hundreds of millions of downtrodden or despairing men and women throughout Europe and far beyond its bounds, and that from these sparks there will presently come a cleansing and devouring flame.

The great air battle which has been in progress over this island for the last few weeks has recently attained a high intensity.

It is too soon to attempt to assign limits either to the scale or duration of the great air battle.

We must certainly expect that greater efforts will be made by the enemy than any he has so far put forth.

Hostile air fields are still being developed in France and the Low Countries and the movement of squadrons and material for attacking us is still proceeding.

It is quite plain that Herr Hitler could not admit defeat in his air attack on Great Britain without most serious injury.

If, after all these boastings and blood-curdling threats and lurid accounts trumpeted around the world of the damage he has inflicted, of the vast numbers of our air force he has shot down, so he says, with so little loss to himself; after tales of panic-stricken British crouched in their holes, cursing the plutocratic government which has led them to such a plight—his whole air onslaught were forced tamely to peter out, the Fuehrer's reputation for veracity of statement might be seriously impugned.

We may be sure, therefore, that he will continue as long as he has the strength and as long as any preoccupations he may have in respect of the Russian air force allow him to do so.

On the other hand, the conditions and course of the fighting have so far been favorable to us.

I told the House two months ago that whereas in France our fighter aircraft were wont to inflict a loss of two or three to one upon the Germans, and in the fighting at Dunkerque, which was a kind of no-man's-land, of about three or four to one, we expected that in an attack on this island we should achieve a larger ratio.

This has certainly come true.

It must also be remembered that all the enemy machines and pilots which are shot down over our island or the seas which surround it are either destroyed or captured, whereas a considerable proportion of our machines and also of our pilots are saved and soon again come into action.

A vast and admirable system of salvage, directed by the ministry of aircraft production, insures the speediest return to the fighting line of damaged machines and the most provident and speedy use of all the spare parts and material.

At the same time the splendid—nay, astounding—increase in the output and repair of British aircraft and engines, which Lord Beaverbrook has achieved by a genius of organization and drive which looks liks magic, has given us overflowing reserves of every type of aircraft and an ever-mounting stream of production both in quantity and quality.

The enemy is, of course, far more numerous than we are. But our new production already largely exceeds his, and the American production is only just beginning to flow in.

Never in Conflict Was So Much Owed by So Many to So Few

Our bomber and fighter strength after all this fightin is larger than it has ever been.

We hope and believe that we shall be able to continue the struggle indefinitely and as long as the enemy pleases; and the longer it continues the more rapid will be our approach, first toward that parity and then into that superiority in the air upon which, in a large measure, the decision of the war depends.

The gratitude of every home in our island, in our empire, and indeed throughout the world, except in the abodes of the guilty, goes out to the British airmen who, undaunted by odds, unwearied in their constant challenge and mortal danger, are turning the tide of world war by their prowess and their devotion. Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few.

All hearts go out to the fighter pilots whose brilliant actions we see with our own eyes day after day; but we must never forget that all the time, night after night, month after month, our bomber squadrons travel far into Germany, find their targets in the darkness by the highest navigational skill, aim their attacks—often under the heaviest fire, often with heavy loss—with deliberate, careful discrimination, and inflict shattering blows upon the whole of the technical and war-making structure of the Nazi power.

On no part of the Royal Air Force does the weight of the war fall more heavily than on the daylight bombers, who will play an invaluable part in the case of invasion and whose unflinching zeal it has been necessary in the meanwhile, on numerous occasions, to restrain.

We are able to verify the results of bombing military targets in Germany not only by reports which reach us through many sources but also by photograph.

I have no hesitation in saying that this process of bombing the military industries and communications of Germany and the air bases and storage depots from which we are attacked—and which will continue upon an ever-increasing scale until the end of the war and may in another year attain dimensions hitherto undreamed of—affords one, at least, of the surest, if not the shortest, of all the roads to victory.

Even if the Nazi legions stood triumphant on the Black Sea, or indeed upon the Caspian; even if Hitler was at the gates of India, it would profit him nothing if at the same time the entire economic and scientific apparatus of German war power lay shattered and pulverized at home.

The fact that the invasion of this island upon a large scale has become a far more difficult operation with every week that has passed since we saved our army at Dunkerque, and our very great preponderance of sea power enable us to turn our eyes and to turn our strength toward the Mediterranean and against that other enemy who, without the slightest provocation, coldly and deliberately, for greed and gain, stabbed France in the back in the moment of her agony and is now marching against us in Africa.

The defection of France has, of course, been deeply damaging to our position in what is called, somewhat oddly, the Middle East.

In the defense of Somaliland, for instance, we had counted upon strong French forces attacking the Italians from Jibuti.

We had counted also upon the use of the French naval and air bases in the Mediterranean, and particularly upon the North African shore.

We had counted upon the French fleet. Even though metropolitan France was temporarily overrun, there was no reason why the French navy, substantial parts of the French army, and the French Empire overseas should not have continued the struggle at our side.

Shielded by overwhelming seapower, possessed of invaluable strategic bases and of ample funds, France might have remained one of the great combatants in the struggle.

By so doing, France would have preserved the continuity of her life and the French Empire might have advanced with the British Empire to the rescue of the independence and integrity of the French motherland.

In our own case, if we had been put in the terrible position of France—now happily impossible, although of course it would have been the duty of all war leaders to fight on here to the end—it would also have been their duty, as I indicated in my speech of June 4, to provide as far as possible for the naval security of Canada and our dominions and to make sure they had the means to carry on the struggle from beyond the oceans.

Most of the other countries that have been overrun by Germany for the time being have persevered valiantly and faithfully. The Czechs, the Poles, the Norwegians, the Dutch, the Belgians, are still in the field, sword in hand, recognized by Great Britain and the United States as the sole representative authorities and lawful governments of their respective states.

That France alone should lie prostrate at this moment is the crime not of a great and noble nation but of what are called the men of Vichy.

We have profound sympathy with the French people.

Our old comradeship with France is not dead. In Gen. de Gaulle and his gallant band that comradeship takes an effective form.

These free Frenchmen have been condemned to death by Vichy, but the day will come, as surely as the sun will rise tomorrow, when their names will be held in honor and graven in stone in the streets and villages of a France restored in a liberated Europe into its full freedom and ancient fame.

But this conviction which I feel of the future cannot affect the immediate problems which confront us in the Mediterranean and in Africa.

It had been decided some time before the beginning of the war to defend the protectorate of Somaliland. That policy was changed when the French gave in, and when our small forces there—a few battalions, a few guns—were attacked by all the Italians troops—nearly two divisions—which had formerly faced the French at Jibuti.

It was right to withdraw our troops virtually intact for action elsewhere. Far larger operations no doubt impend in the Middle East theater and I shall certainly not attempt to discuss or prophesy about their probable course.

We have large armies and many means of reinforcing them. We have the complete sea command of the eastern Mediterranean. We intend to do our best to give a good account of ourselves and to discharge faithfully and resolutely all our obligations and duties.

A good many people have written to me to ask me to make on this occasion a fuller statement of our war aims and of the kind of peace we wish to make than is contained in the very considerable declaration which was made early in the autumn.

Since then we have made common cause with Norway, Holland and Belgium. We have recognized the Czech government of Dr. Benes, and we have told Gen. de Gaulle that our success will carry with it the restoration of France.

I do not think it would be wise at this moment, while the battle rages and the war is still in its earlier stage, to embark upon elaborate speculation about the future shape which should be given to Europe or the new securities which must be arranged to spare mankind the miseries of a Third World War. The ground is not new. It has been frequently traversed and explored and many ideas are held in common by all good men and all free men.

But before we can undertake the task of rebuilding we have not only to be convinced ourselves but convince all other countries that the Nazi tyranny is going to be finally broken.

The right to guide the course of world history is the noblest prize of victory. We are still toiling up the hill. We have not yet breasted the crest line. We cannot survey the landscape or even imagine what its condition will be in that longed-for hour.

The task which lies before us immediately is at once more simple and more stern. I hope, indeed, I pray, that we shall not be found unworthy of our victory if after toil and tribulation it is granted to us

Medical Tests Expected to Weed Out 3,000 Guard Officers

3,000 Are Expected To Be Removed And Retired as Unfit

Some 3,000 National Guard officers are expected to be removed from their commands and retired as physically unfit as the result of special strict medical examinations just ordered by the War Department.

The Army Surgeon General, officials said yesterday, has set up rigid physical requirements for all guardsmen to be mobilized into Federal service under legislation passed by both Houses of Congress and nearing final approval on changes. Because of lax standards prevailing, it was said, from 20 to 30 per cent of the officers are expected to fail in some States.

"The number will vary in different States," an official said. "Some units have held to rigid requirements. Others have not. Some such percentage as that may result."

The War Department expects to fill the places dropped from Regular Army and Reserve officers and any surplus of Guard officers available. In this connection the War Department has suggested to State adjutant generals that they conduct special examinations before the Guard is called so that the States rather than the Federal Government may replace the disqualified officers.

New York has already started examining its officers, and 14 leaders, including Col. John J. Mangum, present commander of the famous "Fighting Sixty-ninth," now renamed the 165th Infantry, have been ordered retired with others to follow.

Officials here said the reason so many Guard officers are likely to be found unfit is that a considerable number of men have been kept in service who are valuable for training because of their war experience but unfit for field duty today.

Col. Charles A. Dravo, adjutant general of the District Guard, said yesterday he knew of no plans for a special preliminary examination here, but that this may be considered when the troops return from maneuvers.

Text of Churchill's Commons Report

For the rest we have to gain the victory.

There is, however, one direction in which we can see a little more clearly ahead.

We have to think not only for ourselves but for the lasting security of the cause and principles for which we are fighting.

Some months ago we came to the conclusion that the interests of the United States and of the British Empire both required that the United States should have facilities for the naval and air defense of the western Europe and its resources. tack of a Nazi power which might have acquired temporary but lengthy control of a large part of Western Europe and its resources.

We have therefore decided, spontaneously and without being asked or offered any inducement, to inform the government of the United States that we should be glad to place such definite facilities at their disposal by leasing suitable sites in our transatlantic possessions for their greater security against the unmeasured dangers of the future.

The principle of association of interests for common purposes between Great Britain and the United States had developed even before the war in the various agreements reached about certain small islands in the Pacific Ocean which have become important as air fueling points. In all this line of thought we found ourselves in very close harmony.

Presently we learned that anxiety also was felt in the United States about the air and naval defense of their Atlantic seaboard, and President Roosevelt has made it clear that he would like to discuss with us and with the Dominion of Canada and with Newfoundland the development of American naval and air facilities in Newfoundland and in the West Indies.

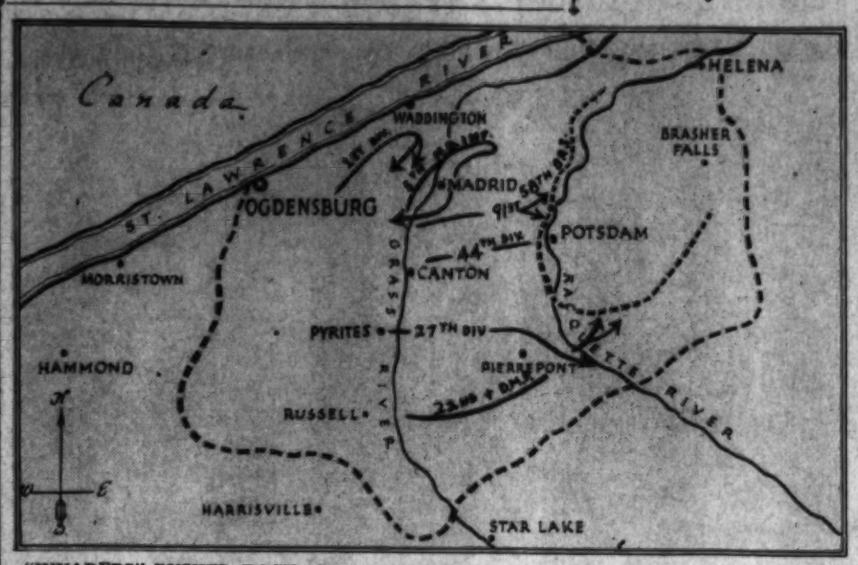
There is of course no question of any transference of sovereignty or of any action being taken against the wishes of the various colonies concerned, but for our part His Majesty's government are entirely willing to accord defense facilities to the United States on a 99-year leasehold basis, and we feel sure that our interests no less than theirs and the interests of the colonies themselves and of Canada and Newfoundland will be served thereby.

Undoubtedly this process means that these two great organizations of the English-speaking democracies, the British Empire and the United States, will have to be somewhat mixed up together in some of their affairs for mutual and general advantage.

For my part, looking out upon the future, I do not view the process with any misgivings.

No one can stop it. Like the Mississippi, it just keeps rolling along. Let it roll. Let it roll on, full flood, inexorable, irresistible, to broader lands and better days.

Blues Push Front Back Thirty Miles



"INVADERS" PUSHED BACK—Blue army (left side of map) last night smashed 30 miles through Black army's line. The new front is now along the west side of the Racquette River, turning east northeast of Colton. Fifth Maryland Infantry crossed the Grass River between Madrid and Waddington and retreated "under fire." First Division clashed with the "invader" in the same area. Fifty-eighth (Maryland) Brigade and Ninety-first (Virginia) Brigade penetrated past Madrid to the new front. Forty-fourth Division advanced from Canton to Potsdam. Twenty-seventh Division moved from Pyrites eastward to the Racquette and southeast to Colton. Twenty-second Cavalry Division and D. M. F. (motorized unit) made lightning attack from Russell turning back the flank of the Black line

chors for pontoon bridges to be thrown athwart the stream by engineers in the morning.

Troops in reserve were being rushed across the 30-mile gap to the new front in unlighted truck convoys streaming eastward along every road. Dawn tomorrow will see a push along the whole line which may end the war by noon.

It was a day laden with those spectacular flashes which only a war of this sort can produce. Raiding parties pierced both lines and raged against their communications at dozens of points. Generals were captured; the hard-bitten regular First Division lost its entire staff and a supply train of 325 trucks; Brig. Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock, commanding the Fifty-eighth (Maryland) Brigade, whose capture featured last year's war at Manassas, was taken with his staff.

The day's outstanding feat was that of the Fifth Maryland, under Col. Harry Ruhl, of Baltimore, which swept in trucks up behind the Grasse River 40 miles to Chamberlain, far behind the First Division's front. At Chamberlain it ran into division headquarters, snapped up the 325 trucks, more than 500 men, an assistant chief of staff, two colonels and two lieutenant colonels, and barely missed Brig. Gen. Karl Truesdell, Division Commander.

Pressed by the First, now alive to its danger, the regiment turned eastward, crossed the Grasse and made its way back along the east bank of that river to Bucks Bridge, where it crossed safely to its own territory.

Down at the south end of the line, infantry, cavalry and the mobile force organized by Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding the Blues in the field, pushed 40 to 50 miles eastward, crossed the Racquette and ripped the Black rear to shreds. At noon the 182d and a battalion of the 181st Infantry of the Twenty-sixth (Massachusetts) Division, holding the left flank of the Black Army, were caught in a mighty pincers. Squeezed by units of the Twenty-seventh (New York), Twenty-second Cavalry (Pennsylvania) Divisions and the Mobile force, they extricated themselves by their bootstraps minutes before the pincers closed.

On the other hand, the 244th Coast Artillery, which had moved its huge 155 milimeter guns 20 miles by tractor during the night before, were caught on a narrow road by the Forty-third (New York and New Jersey) Division and were pushed back into the streets of Canton without firing a shot. Capture was averted by the umpires, who ruled the regiment might have been able to fight off the attack had it not been hedged about by land the Army had been unable to rent for the war.

In the air over the shifting battle lines, Blue and Black planes clashed in furious dog fights which the troops on the ground paused in their battle to watch. During the day repeated raids were made by Black bombers on the Blue troops driving at the south flank and at railheads behind the lines.

Of these bombers, umpires ruled five shot down by Blue pursuit, which lost two ships in combat. Volunteer civilian observers and the Army's secret aircraft warning device spotted all bombing formations before they reached their objectives.

Propaganda leaflets were showered on Blue troops by the Black bombers appealing to them to "put down your arms and come under the leadership of the Blacks, where the greater things in life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness are a reality—under our great Black leader." A radio message from the Blacks, reporting withdrawal of one division, was intercepted by the Blues but disregarded.

The feat of the Black First Division, which battled as desperately for every foot of ground it lost today as ever it fought at Soissons, in extricating itself from apparently certain capture, was regarded by observers as the outstanding performance of the day. Caught in a rapidly closing maw of infantry and artillery, it escaped with the loss only of its train.

At Brown's Bridge, a few miles below Potsdam, on the Racquette, patrols of the 108th (New York) Infantry surprised a small holding force of the 101st (Massachusetts) Engineers, who met them with rifles and machineguns, then fled across the bridge, leaving a dozen prisoners in Blue hands. A staff sergeant of the engineers stood on the bridge holding a card which read "destroyed." The New Yorkers clambered into trucks and rolled off amid much good-natured chaffing.

Twenty miles north, near a little crossroads called Casey's Store, the Ninety-first Brigade of Virginia, under Col. John F. Bright, mayor of Richmond, established its command post under cover of trees fringing a hayfield. Lieut. Col. Edwin Cox, brigade executive officer, lay against a boulder, his feet toasting before a small fire.

"We're supposed to be stabilized here," he said. "But you watch us. We've started raiding parties out now and they're going to stir up something."

At dawn tomorrow, the whole Blue army will push forward, fight its way across the Racquette if it can, and throw the weight of its 50,000 men against the 40,000 Blacks dug in atop a long line of hills overlooking the river. It may be complete success; it may be another Fredericksburg, depending on how it looks to the umpires.

Lull After Week-End Air Attacks Upon Britain Presages New, Still Heavier Storm, Nazis Warn

By Percival Knauth
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 20. — German air activities over Britain today were again restricted to "armed reconnaissance," with the Nazis reporting only scattered air battles between British machines, protective convoys and German pursuers.

Several airports in Kent, including those at Eastchurch and Southend, were reported bombed this noon. Later, the Germans singled out munitions depots and other military objectives as their targets.

The sudden quiet which followed the week-end's explosive battles, the Germans warn, is only another lull before another, still heavier, storm. Bad weather is given as the reason for the restricted activities today, but it is reminded that last week also there were some days on which aerial activities were relatively slight.

British air raids on the Reich, which included one on Berlin last midnight, reportedly killed and injured numerous civilians, including 6 dead and 23 injured in a "city in the Ruhr." In a west German town, it is likewise reported that a whole row of houses was destroyed with numerous injured.

Only two planes were reported to have reached Berlin and one of them is claimed to have been shot down on its way home, over Oldenburg.

Tonight, however, all German radio stations transmitting on a medium long-wave band shut down their transmission at 11 o'clock, leading neutral quarters to believe that last night the British may have followed the radio band to find their way in. Authoritative quarters recalled that last autumn at the outbreak of war similar precautions were also taken.

The official DNB news agency ceased its radio news transmission at the same hour instead of continuing on to 4 a. m. as usual, and said that in the future it would sign off at 11 o'clock each night.

Yesterday's air battles resulted in five British planes being shot down with two Germans missing, according to the army communique. Today's score has not been revealed.

Prime Minister Churchill's speech in the House of Commons has not been commented on as yet by official quarters, but the press is unsparing in its scorn.

"The British lion," writes the newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter, "has not only gone to the dogs but to the toads. So far as Churchill is concerned, his speech is reminiscent only of the frightened croaking of a bullfrog."

There is no dearth of sarcasm, likewise, concerning Britain's "successful" retreat from Somaliland. The Germans are reminded that the British already "have similar retreats to their credit" such as those from Namsos, Andelsnes, Dunkerque and Narvik.

The defeat in Somaliland, the Germans predict, will not be the last inflicted to Britain by their Italian allies while the German air force attends to the British Isles.

"IT'S THOSE EXTRA MILES PER HOUR THAT COUNT WITH ME"

says WILBUR SHAW—
3-TIME WINNER OF THE 500-MILE SPEED CLASSIC

"AND IT'S THOSE EXTRAS OF SLOWER BURNING I LIKE ABOUT CAMEL CIGARETTES"

Copyright, 1940, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, North Carolina

SLIPPERY TURNS at 120 miles per hour! Hub to hub duels at 150! For 500 blistering, nerve-wracking miles—laboratory equivalent of 50,000 normal highway driving miles. Yes, it's America's most thrilling classic of auto speed. It's also a proving ground of your safer and more efficient car of tomorrow. For the aerodynamic design, high-compression motor, alloy pistons, the safety glass of your car today had their testing at the hands of these daring men. And, three times, Wilbur Shaw (above) has come through with the extra degree of mechanical perfection—the extra daring and extra skill—that wins. He has the "extras"... he appreciates the extras... in cigarettes, too. Camels give the extras. Wilbur Shaw smokes Camels.

WITH WILBUR SHAW—with millions of others—the "extras" in slower-burning Camels are the difference between just smoking and smoking pleasure at its best. Your own experience tells you that cigarettes that burn fast, burn hot. And that excess heat destroys flavor—makes your smoke flat, harsh. Light up a Camel... the slow-burning cigarette of costlier tobaccos ...and get the "extras"—including extra smoking (see right).

CAMELS BURN SLOWER AND GIVE ME THE EXTRA MILDNESS AND EXTRA FLAVOR I WANT FOR STEADY SMOKING. AND, OF COURSE CAMELS GIVE ME EXTRA SMOKING

EXTRA COOLNESS
EXTRA FLAVOR

In recent laboratory tests, CAMELS burned 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them. That means, on the average, a smoking plus equal to

War Of Arithmetic

What seems badly needed at this moment is a committee of higher mathematicians and expert psychologists to fix a formula whereby we can work out an answer to the supremely important question of which side is winning the aerial phase of the Battle of Britain. Meanwhile, the only certain thing is that one side—perhaps both sides—is scarcely shaming the devil by telling the truth.

In the first 12 days of the great battle the Germans claim to have put 775 British planes out of action. This is 75 more than the total of Nazi planes that the British claim to have bagged in the same period. But at the same time the admitted British losses are 41 planes below the admitted losses of the Germans.

Is it possible to assume any constant ratio of fact to fiction in any of these claims? If so, shall we look for it in the column of losses inflicted or in that of losses suffered? Or should a mean of the two be struck? The first would give the advantage to the Nazis, the second would give it to the British, and the third would render honors approximately easy.

Here, of course, is where the psychologists come in. If, as some say, neither command dares admit the whole truth to its enemy, it becomes a question of which side can afford to admit the greater admixture of truth. The psychologists may be able to tell us whether the excess claims of the Nazis are an application of the principle expressed in "Mein Kampf." People who would strain at a small lie, said Hitler, will readily swallow a big one.

The psychologists may also be able to tell us whether the proverbial fondness of the British for understatement would tempt them to undestate not merely their losses in the air, but also damages on the ground.

It is no easy problem, as we dare say most of our readers have discovered for themselves. And, alas, by the time the psychologists have found the answer the battle will be over.

Not Much To Ask

The House Committee on Rules is usually busy and is often overworked. It must examine a great many requests for rules to expedite an enormous volume of legislation. If it serves its function well, it will give to each bill in the legislative program of the House a place commensurate with its importance.

So the issue before the committee today will be whether or not the Sumners resolution is of sufficient importance to be sent to the floor of the House for a vote at the present session. Chairman Sabath of the Rules Committee has promised action today on Representative Sumners' appeal for a special rule. What the committee decides may determine the future political status of Washington with its 663,000 inhabitants.

It is true, of course, that the present session of Congress is legislating to meet an emergency. Some legislators may complain that this is a poor time to advance a proposed constitutional amendment permitting Congress to grant the District representation in the Senate, House and electoral college. But the resolution need not conflict with any defense bill. Nor should Congress forget that Washington, too, has its emergency.

In the relatively small area of the District a large number of American citizens, greatly exceeding the population of various States, are denied any part in governing the city or the country of which they are a part. This situation has led to some shocking conditions, as the recent investigations of the Home for the Aged at Blue Plains revealed. Aside from questions of community welfare, however, it is of great importance in a period when democracy is being revitalized to extend the rights of democracy to all the people.

No one should assume that the Sumners resolution can be postponed without weakening the cause which it represents. Today that resolution has the full indorsement of the Democratic Party and the approval of a large number of Republican legislators. Should action be postponed until next year the outlook might be entirely different. If the Republicans should win sufficient strength to organize the House, they might find little interest in pushing through a measure indorsed by the Democratic platform but not by their own.

The Rules Committee is thus face to face with the question of whether the Capital City should be Americanized. Of course, the Rules Committee should not attempt to decide the issue on its merits. That decision should be left for the House, and, later, the Senate. All the committee is asked to do is to give the "go-ahead" signal so that the Sumners resolution may be debated and submitted to a vote. Surely that is not too much for a disfranchised community to ask.

Churchill's Optimism

During the very hour when Winston Churchill was addressing the House of Commons yesterday on the state of the war, wave after wave of German bombers were again sweeping across the English countryside, dropping loads of death and destruction. It was the thirteenth day of the titanic Battle of Britain.

During that period an untold amount of damage has been done to British ports, shipping, factories, airdromes and homes. But there appears to be no evidence that the successive raids, carried out in some instances by more than 1,000 Nazi planes, have weakened Britain's fighting capacity or impaired the morale of her people.

It was not without reason, therefore, that Mr. Churchill's speech was full of confidence of Britain's capacity to withstand the terrific Nazi onslaught and of dogged determination to fight the war to a successful conclusion.

Great Britain, he said, is stronger today than she was at the outset of the present battle. She has 2,000,000 men under arms, three-fourths of them in regular military formations. The British navy, he said, is stronger than at the beginning of the war. Britain's merchant tonnage, despite a year of unlimited submarine warfare, is larger than in September, 1939, and she has acquired, in addition, 4,000,000 tons of shipping from the captive nations.

Mr. Churchill's opinion that production of aircraft in Great Britain now exceeds that in Germany is of doubtful value. But the British people certainly appear to be more united than ever before.

At the same time, the fighting premier did not try to minimize either the difficulties or the dangers that still confront the beleaguered and harassed British. He spoke realistically of the weakness of Britain's position in the Middle East, symbolized by the evacuation of Berbera. He warned his people that what had happened during the past 12 days is probably only a foretaste of much worse that is to come.

"We must certainly expect," he said, "that greater efforts will be made by the enemy than any he has so far put forth." It is too soon, he added, "to assign limits either to the scale or the duration of the great air battle."

Yet, while Britain's principal task is to defend the islands, she is not forgetting the necessity of fighting on the enemy's own soil. Mr. Churchill held out to the British the hope that by 1941 or 1942 Britain's campaign against Germany will be undertaken in earnest.

For Americans two points in this speech are particularly important. The first is Mr. Churchill's acknowledgement of Great Britain's offer to lease naval and air bases in this hemisphere to the United States. This offer has been made, he said, without any request or inducement from this country.

The second was his plea that Britain's "friends across the ocean will send us a timely reinforcement to bridge the gap between the peace flotillas of 1939 and the war flotillas of 1940." This was his sole reference to the problem of the destroyers which has been agitating American opinion. It is a problem which must be considered on the basis of just where American interests lie, and how best they can be served in an extremely critical situation.

In the meantime the encouraging tone of Mr. Churchill's speech will cheer the people of this Nation, as well as the British premier's own countrymen. The valor of the British in this most fateful hour in their long history cannot but arouse enthusiasm in the hearts of all those who love freedom.

Nor can the American people forget that the struggle raging over Britain is certain to affect profoundly the destinies of the United States and of the Western world.

The Cost Of War

Sir Kingsley Wood, chancellor of the exchequer, has announced that Great Britain's July war expenditures averaged $229,000,000 weekly—about 42 per cent higher than the April budget estimates.

British expenditures for war purposes would total about $12,000,000,000 during the next 12 months if the present weekly rate of spending should be maintained. But the chancellor of the exchequer has hinted that it will probably go higher.

Considering the rate at which we are appropriating money for national defense, these figures may no longer seem impressive. However, Great Britain's budgetary burden is being borne by a nation with about one-third the population of the United States and a smaller per capita income. Notwithstanding that fact, or perhaps because of it, the Government hopes to cover about 40 per cent of all expenditures from current revenues. Critics are saying that this is not enough—that at least half the national expenditure ought to be covered by taxes.

Under ordinary circumstances such a weight of taxation would seem intolerable. But in a war threatening a nation with destruction, there is no limit to the extent of sacrifices that may properly be required. The chief question is how to make sure of obtaining for the government the resources it must have.

Like the United States, the British entered upon this period of emergency spending handicapped by a very heavy legacy of debt. They no longer have access to American credit resources which were available to them during the last great war. So taxation has to be relied upon heavily to divert private income to government use.

There is an alternative to taxation and borrowing, namely inflation. By raising prices and drastically reducing consumer purchasing power inflation would put an automatic check upon consumption and leave geater surpluses at the disposal of the state. But the British hope to escape that method by appealing to the people to spend less on themselves and lend as much as possible to the government.

By rationing certain products, and by regulating industrial operations, the government itself can make sure that self-indulgence will be held in check. Yet, regardless of the financing method followed, wars have to be paid for by the people.

Sir Kingsley has well said: "The problem of financing this war is in the main the problem of directing spending power from all sections of the population into the hands of the state."

Mr. Ickes' Mud

A name-calling brawl broke out in the Senate recently when the National Guard bill was under discussion. Several legislators ignored the subject under debate and unloosed tirades of abuse against their opponents. That demonstration brought sharp criticism upon their heads from many parts of the country.

Since the conscription bill came up for debate in the Senate mud-slinging has been kept fairly well under control. But now Secretary Ickes has set the ether waves aquiver with a scurrilous reply to Wendell Willkie's acceptance address. Slurs, epithets and crude innuendo were crowded into his radio address on Monday night with reckless unconcern for either accuracy or fair play.

Senator Bridges' reply to Mr. Ickes is worthy of note only because it shows how quickly a campaign can degenerate into a contest of insults when once the initial step in that direction has been taken.

One of Mr. Ickes' thrusts may have been justified. In his acceptance address Mr. Willkie unfairly accused the President of "unscrupulously" encouraging Great Britain to hope for more help than this country can give. It has been evident on several occasions that the British have an exaggerated idea of the war equipment American industry can turn out in the next few months. But Mr. Willkie should not have assumed that President Roosevelt "unscrupulously" misled the British.

Taking the Willkie speech as a whole, however, it was a penetrating analysis of issues rather than personalities. The Republican candidate began his campaign with few personal charges and much illuminating discussion of grave national issues. His thoughtful challenge deserved a better reply than Mr. Ickes' twaddle about weasels, Samuel Insull and "barefoot Wall street lawyers."

In one respect the fact that the Secretary of the Interior resorted to such tactics is a compliment to Mr. Willkie. Demagogues who find it difficult to meet their opponents' arguments usually resort to the smearing process. Mr. Ickes' address is disturbing chiefly because it shows the preference of an Administration leader for peanut politics when issues that may gravely affect the future of the Nation are at stake.

The Real Arbiter

When King Carol made his nation an ideological and political satellite of the Third Reich he did so in the hope that German friendship would shield Rumania against further dismemberment. He was obviously banking on Germany's acute need of Rumanian oil and wheat.

Since Russia took Bessarabia and Bukovina she has made no further territorial demands on Rumania. Whether this has been due to German pressure on the Soviet or whether Stalin is content with his spoils is not clear. But the temporary satisfaction of Russian claims has been followed by a vehement clamor for Rumanian territory by Bulgaria and Hungary.

Of the two claimants Bulgaria was the one easiest to satisfy. It is understood that an agreement in principle has been reached between the governments at Sofia and Bucharest whereby Bulgaria is to get back the lost region of Southern Dobruja. The Hungarian demands on Carol's kingdom are proving more difficult to adjust. For, while Hungary wants all or a very large part of Transylvania, Rumania is loath to give up any of that rich and valuable region. Negotiations between the two countries have now reached a state of deadlock.

The ultimate decision as to how much or how little Rumanian territory is to be ceded to Hungary rests neither with King Carol or the Magyars, but with Hitler. For that reason questions of territorial sovereignty in the disputed zone are of little more than academic and sentimental significance. For if Germany wins the war the whole of Europe, including the Balkans, will be under German domination. And if she loses, any arrangements entered into at this time will probably not be worth the paper they are written on.

Reflections On War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Two letters of recent date published in your paper have set me to wondering. Of course I am growing old and am therefore unable to keep abreast of the times. Yet when I first read the letter signed D. V. T. in The Post of Monday, August 5, it never occurred to me that an answer such as that of F. L. P.'s in The Post of August 9 could result. So much for a grandmother's understanding of the problems of the world—the problems of international intrigue, perhaps I should say.

As for the problems of human behavior in a world which is now managed by intriguing militarists to a great extent, I believe, may I raise a few questions as well as answer a few which both these writers expressed?

D. V. T. asks "Why are we who are young being prepared for the slaughter?" Die or be killed! That is the order of the day for a sector of humanity between the ages of 21 and 31 and male.

So long as governments permit militarists to continue their efforts at solving the esonomic problems of their respective nations by force of arms while at the same time they permit armament manufacturers to indulge in international exchange of munitions for profit, as our own industrialists have been doing, just that long will it be the duty of women to keep the human race from committing suicide or completely destroying the young men whom we count as fathers, workers and leaders of the future.

There must be some sort of satisfaction which older men get from delegating such arduous death to that certain age group! Can it be due to the same instinct which prompts the tomcat to destroy male kittens? Who knows?

Perhaps you have never lived close to nature. That may be one reason militarism is becoming totalitarian. Cities have separated people from opportunities to compare themselves with animals. It is the cities that produce such gangsters as now battle for power.

Mary Haworth has the right word for the cure of masculine sadism, "Exquisite diplomacy or implacable force." SOUR PUSS.

Women For The Army?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On Page 9 of The Post of August 14 is a picture of a young girl beside a phantom soldier on an Army poster, entitled "The Beauty of Defense." Under this appears the following: "She gives call to colors... Miss America 1938 has been 'enlisted' by the United States Army to attract youth to the colors . . ."

If this kind of "bait" is what it takes, surely there'll be no lack of recruits. But a suggestion occurs to me: Now that we find it necessary to enlist beauty and sex to lure our boys to a realization that our homes and our land are worth saving, and that this country is in peril from every point of the compass, let us instead throw open to the women of the Nation a chance to enlist in the Army.

Many women are quite adept in the use of firearms, and I dare say millions would grasp the opportunity to be prepared to defend their babies and, indeed, their "boys grown tall."

Does this seem fantastic, heretical or barbarous? Read "We Have Our Orders," August Survey Graphic, reprinted in the August Readers' Digest.

We are muddled beyond hope of clarity in this Nation. When we are face to face with the four outlaw nations, all of which stand ready to gang up, where will be the 8 per cent net profits for our billion-dollar manufacturers who refuse to produce planes and tanks for their own protection until the Government assures them against losses for necessary plant expansion in addition to their profits?

Who, pray, will insure the lives and safety of the men and women standing before the invaders devoid of training and equipment which alone can give them a fighting chance?

MRS. EDGAR E. KIDWELL.

Good Advice On Preparedness

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let us get down to facts on preparedness. For the past three years 'mid gathering world storms I have advocated "man power" and The Post has been kind enough to publish each of my letters. Right now we need scientific selective service as it is the only sensible and fair way to raise a fighting force. We have needed this for years and therefore have considerable ground to make up in a short space of time.

Scientific selective service should incorporate an opportunity for enlistments outside of the ages covered by the first draft. Our Class 1 is men of 21 to 30, and each man should be classified as to physical fitness, past training, qualifications, dependents, etc.

Selective service should mean the application of common sense in the allocation of our man power. It should be placed where of most use. Some will go for intensive training in combat units while others can be held ready for support jobs either in the active forces or in industry.

Due to complete changes in fighting mechanics and strategy since 1918, fortunately we need fewer men and more mechanism. About all the "mechanism" necessary in 1918 was a knowledge of the rifle, bayonet, bombs, machine guns and old-style artillery. Now all is changed. Intensive training of a mechanized Army inclusive of air force has replaced large units of infantry, cavalry and old-style artillery.

With all due respect to the sincerity and loyalty of those among us who decry the draft, who today can gauge our danger? Surely they admit it would not take a Hitler-American blitzkrieg to involve us—some apparently simple entanglement may be the spark.

I am a firm believer in augmenting of present forces rather than the raising of a "new Army." Build on the nucleus we have. The first draft should be registered and called for physical examination if we are to determine the physical status of our man power. Then men as needed and as can be assimilated should be selected for training with the augmented Regular Army and National Guard. Speed is paramount. We have dallied too long.

Fortunately, we are getting speed on the industry and mechanism end of our need. Our spirit and potential here is almost unlimited. We should be humbly thankful that we do not need 4,000,000 men this time. We need men only in units of hundreds of thousands but more intensively trained. And how many "machines" would any real American father give in exchange for the blood of one American boy—particularly if it were his boy?

We are united on so many aspects of our danger we must iron out the petty differences separating us and get action. Action so vital now may avert future slaughter and may assist us in bringing about a lasting peace for the world within a few years.

Ready To Enlist

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The conscription bill, with many of its variations, has been torn apart, mended, condemned and praised so much that I wonder if its mother will recognize the offspring if and when life begins. I am interested chiefly because it may vitally concern my future, and therefore, I believe, entitles me to have my say.

In the Post of August 15 was a story quoting President Roosevelt. He advised young college men to forget patriotism and continue their studies; that it was not desirable that they should enlist. It was such a strange paradox, coming from the head of a Nation that is at once crying to heaven that their country is in great need of fine, upstanding young men for all branches of its services, that it jerked me to attention and analysis.

Does it mean that college men are of a superior breed, that theirs is a life existing in another plane, separate and distinct from the great mass of us who were unable, chiefly because of economic reasons, to reach that exalted station in life?

I think not. In my immediate family I have several cousins who are either attending college or have been graduated. For the life of me I am unable to become deeply impressed by them, although I may appear sacrilegious. There may be a slight gloss to such attainments, possibly greater advantages in life because of contacts a college education may present to the ambitious. But I am weary, weary to the point of exhaustion, that they should be held up to the world as our only source of leadership.

I am 19 years old, sound of body and mind, and ready and willing to join in any defense program that may appear necessary by those whom I consider best fitted to know our country's need—the houses of Congress, our President and his Cabinet. But I do object and strenuously to being considered a nincompoop by some untrained and overzealous person who assumes unwarranted authority because some college has labeled him its graduate.

By all means the selective conscription method of raising an army, but move the age limit back to 18. And make adaptability the qualifier for leadership—not what college degree the prospect may possess.

Slow Politicians

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our politicians are making it easy for Hitler just as the politicians of France did. Our politicians have authorized billions of dollars for defense materiel and are now wasting very precious time trying to figure out a way to find the men to protect this country. By the time Hitler's blitzkrieg in England is over, they may have decided what is best for themselves in the coming elections.

Our tyrannical labor people are silently working for Hitler too. Our labor leaders tell everybody, including Uncle Sam, just how long each union man will work, how much he is to be paid, etc. This slows up production of vital war machines but what do they care?

This combination of dilly-dallying politicians and tyrannical labor will make invasion comparatively easy. A dictator would be better for us than ignorant, selfish politicians.

The Post Impressionist

Of A Feather

IN ENGLAND several years ago I heard of the Oozlem Bird, and I incline to think it's a serious defect in our knowledge of fabulous creatures that we never in America refer to this Bird. My British informant, editor of an obscure weekly, conjectured that "Oozlem" was a corruption of Jerusalem, and he amused me at luncheon by describing the Oozlem or Jerusalem Bird in barker style.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he barked, "step right up and behold the famous Oozlem Bird. When pursued by its feathered foes, it circles higher and higher in the skies, and when its foes close in for the capture, the ree-markable Oozlem Bird disappears into its insides, and ee-mits cries of derision."

He advised me that some human beings resembled this ree-markable bird, and he seemed to think they occurred rather more often among professors of economics than in any other group. After that luncheon I kept an eye peeled for the Oozlem Bird, but it was some time before I learned that the most likely place to look was in the midst of a convoy of Propaganda Birds.

Now, of course, we are all growing expert in identifying the Propaganda Bird and distinguishing its main varieties. Not long ago Melville Cane, the poet (and barrister for important literati) described an encounter at twilight in a wood with what I would take to be a Crypto-Stalinist Propaganda Bird, though the poet was not quite so specific.

"It settled with an awkward tilt,
It listed badly to one side.
By nature most unkindly built,
The creature then replied:

"I am the Propaganda Bird,
Of right wing quite bereft.
From which it clearly is inferred

While Cane's verses were still in manuscript, they provoked a fair lady of my acquaintance, sympathetic with sharecroppers, to retort with verses about the Vigilante Bird who minus a left wing flapped a wicked right at workers struggling for their rights, and I am positive that someone somewhere has spilled ink about the one-winged Turkey-Goebbel-er, the most destructive of all Propaganda Birds.

It is not so difficult, you see, to identify a Propaganda Bird, since it never has more than one wing, but spotting an Oozlem Bird is something else, first, because it is a rara avis and, second, because it hides among Propaganda Birds and specializes in protective coloration. The human Oozlem Bird dwells in the more rarefied regions of society, shuns vulgar publicity, and frequently works behind the scenes. His ordinary language is a jargon incomprehensible to laymen, and the last thing in the world he seems animated by is a desire to impress his point of view upon anyone. Notably he is adept in evasion when newshawks circle around him on his return from a transatlantic junket.

For a superlative system of the type, I will at once nominate the picturesque and sometimes Puckish Governor of the Bank of England, Montagu Norman, and it seems to me he never performed the feat of disappearing into his insides more slickly than when he eluded his questioners on the Macmillan Committee in 1930. Want to watch him disappear into his innards? Don't take your eyes for a split second off the following sentence from his testimony:

"Nevertheless, owing to the special difficulties and uncertainties in which industry has been, and I think in many ways still is, and having accomplished, so far as one could, the two external operations which I have described to you, we turned to industry, and, unusual as it may be, we have devoted during the last year or so and are still devoting efforts to an attempted study of industry, mainly the heavy basic industries of this country—I do not know whether, technically speaking, we were right or, technically speaking, we were wrong to do such a thing, but I do know that the situation in industry appeared to be such that if our action was theoretically wrong it was in the circumstances a trifling sin that we committed and well worth doing, and I do not regard for one moment having attempted to become interested in this subject—to put it in a nutshell, the information which I have received leads me to believe and hope that the salvation of industry in this country, without which commerce and finance cannot long, or indefinitely, continue, lies in the process of rationalization, as it is called, which I am not going to define, which has been defined in many varying ways, but to which I am a strong adherent, and it is toward the goal of rationalization, however it is precisely defined, that I hope the Bank of England will contribute as much as it can."

That is Oozlem Bird rigamarole, cunning in its hesitations, skillful in its vagueness, and inside it Mr. Norman concealed himself during the worst of the depression. When things brightened late in 1939, he turned on his questioners and critics and said: "I console myself with this, that 'the dogs bark but the caravan passes on.'" That, too, is true to form, for it will be recalled that the Oozlem Bird emits cries of derision at its feathered foes after it has foiled them by its disappearance into itself.

Willkie Meant What?

By Ernest K. Lindley

Speech Loaded With Generalities

THE GENERALITY to which no one can take exception, the statement that can be read to mean either of two opposites, and the declaration with a loophole, are all familiar devices of the politician.

Willkie's speech at Elwood was heavy with generalities, but as I heard it and later analyzed the text it seemed to be specific and forthright on a few points.

He came out for some form of "selective service." To me, and, I should have thought, to anyone who heard or read it, this meant some form of compulsory military service.

But Senator Taft said otherwise. He called to the attention of newspapermen the omission of the word "compulsory." I prefer to think Willkie left out this word because he thought it was unnecessary. But Taft creates the suspicion that Willkie's pledge was worded so that the advocates of compulsory selective service would think he had indorsed it, while the opponents of compulsory service could say that he did not.

So far as they went, Willkie's statements on foreign policy were, to me, forthright and clear. He explained succinctly the importance of British naval power to the defense of the Western Hemisphere. He put himself on record again—as he had done prior to his nomination—in favor of maximum material aid to Great Britain. He did this before a visible audience that probably was overwhelmingly isolationist and against the wishes of many Republican politicians.

BUT SENATOR NYE says, in substance, that Willkie indorsed his (Nye's) foreign policy. That presumably is because Willkie criticized the President for making inflammatory statements and intimated that he has been trying to lead us into war against the wishes of the American people. But Nye pretty consistently has regarded any kind of aid to Great Britain as a dangerous step toward war. Willkie does not so regard it. Moreover, he believes that aid to Britain serves our national defense.

Willkie cannot be held responsible for what Nye says about his speech or about anything else. As the campaign wears on we will see whether Willkie was really forthright and in dead earnest in these particular statements—as I think he was—or whether Senators Taft and Nye were correct.

If taken at face value, Willkie's comments should make it easier for the President to sell destroyers to Great Britain and to give the British such other additional aid as may remain within our power to give short of entry into the war as a full belligerent.

Willkie's speech parried, if it did not block, the efforts of the Administration to stamp the "appeaser" label on the Republican ticket. Just what constitutes "appeasement" now or in the future is open to debate. But Willkie's generalities of the question were strong.

WILLKIE SEEMS to me to be courageous and sound in warning the American people that they will have to make sacrifices. To some people this means only going back to the six-day week, without extra pay for overtime. Does it mean more than that to Willkie? I suspect so, but we are entitled to details including his full views on taxation.

Willkie speaks the language of liberalism. Or if that overused label has become meaningless, let's fall back on progressivism. Men's ideas alter with advancing years and changed environment. But the Willkie of 30 and 20 years ago was an ardent follower of Bryan and La Follette. Some things he has said and done in the last seven years since he became a big public utility executive are out of harmony with progressive philosophy. But he knows that philosophy, and there was no important passage in his Elwood speech which conflicted with it.

Willkie went farther—and indorsed the essence of many New Deal reforms. So did Alf Landon in 1936, who presented himself to the Nation at first as a sort of economical New Dealer. But as the campaign wore on, he talked more and more like an American Liberty Leaguer, or Herbert Hoover. Since then, of course, most of the New Deal reforms have become more deeply embedded in our system, and even more widely accepted as necessary or desirable. As a result, the growing tendency among Republicans has been to begin by approving the objectives of the New Deal and then to find fault with details of the performance. This latter criticism, when closely examined, sometimes goes deep enough to cancel the general words of approval.

WILLKIE IS ONE of these "yes, but" critics of the New Deal. There were astonishingly few "buts" in his treatment of the New Deal domestic program at Elwood. We may see in his later speeches whether they were omitted for reasons of time and space or whether he really is ready to accept most of the New Deal with only minor changes.

Willkie wants more production! Who doesn't? At Elwood he spoke in large terms in this subject. But he didn't tell us how he intends to get more production. Although the psychology of businessmen cannot be ignored, we know from experience that just putting businessmen in a happy frame of mind is not enough to sustain or increase production. They were never happier than in 1929, when production started down the toboggan.

Reading it, instead of listening to it, the Elwood speech was better, I think, than many of Willkie's admirers thought it was in their disappointment at his failure to "click" over the radio. But before making final judgments on what he stands for we need more detail.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Our Best War Leader.

WENDELL WILLKIE'S acceptance speech extinguished the last hope that the United States would be able to keep out of the war should Britain fall. Everyone would have liked to hear that he had some plan by which this country could ignore the threat of Hitler's chosen people or, in Col. Lindbergh's credulous theory, cooperate with a victorious Germany.

Assuming that Britain cannot beat Germany, I proceed to examine Mr. Willkie's remarks.

He denounced the President for "attacks on foreign powers" and for courting "a war for which the country is hopelessly unprepared." He said, also, that "the country has been placed in the false position of shouting insults and not even beginning to prepare to take the consequences."

BUT THE MAN who is the only alternative to Mr. Roosevelt himself acknowledged that "if the British fleet were lost the Atlantic might be dominated by Germany, a power hostile to our way of life, controlling, in that event, most of the ships and the shipbuilding facilities of Europe." The word "might" is a weak word here.

"That," he said, "would be calamity for us. Our defense would be weakened until we could build a Navy and air force strong enough to defend both coasts. Also our foreign trade would be profoundly affected. That trade is vital to our prosperity. But if we had to trade with a Europe dominated by the present German trade policies we might have to change our method to some totalitarian form."

Mr. Willkie spoke of the "barbarous and worse than medieval persecutions" inflicted by the German government. He said, "we must face a brutal but terrible fact. Our way of life is in competition with Hitler's way of life." And, again naming the enemy, he said, "I promise . . . to out-distance Hitler in any contest he chooses in 1940 or thereafter."

THUS WILLKIE went at least as far as the President ever has gone in recognizing the enemy and the conflict of our way of life with Hitler's. The German way is imposed on others by war. And there is no escape from the conclusion that if Willkie is elected he must resist by war the inevitable attempt of the chosen people of Hitler to reduce the Americans, like the peoples of eight European countries, to the status of subhuman slaves. Here it is still assumed that the British cannot win and that Hitler will put them to work for him, using their labor in their own shipyards to build more power for an assault on the United States.

Considering the vigor of Willkie's own compliments to Hitler, his objection to Mr. Roosevelt's utterances on the same subject is unfair and inconsistent. True, Mr. Roosevelt is President and Willkie is not yet, but if Willkie be elected he will be committed by these phrases.

In fairness to the President and to the Nation, it should be granted that he was speaking largely for home consumption in his denunciations of the killer countries. Like Mr. Willkie, he was warning his own people of a terrible danger and trying to arouse a martial spirit.

HAD HE ATTEMPTED four or five years ago to push through a heavy military program he would have been attacked from all sides as a warmaker with dictatorial ambitions. He is, in fact, so attacked today, even when the Republican nominee, the only other man who has a chance to become President for the fateful term, agrees with his warnings, recognizes Hitler as the enemy of the American way and offers to lick him in any contest, including, of course, a military contest.

Does this mean, then, that the next President, whether Roosevelt or Willkie, will lead the United States into war? Not that exactly. It means rather that the next President will lead us in war, but not into war, because, with Britain beaten, Hitler would and will bring the war to us.

The question then is not one of avoiding war. Hitler will decide that. It is a question of choosing the man who will do the better job of arming and training for war, leading the country in war and preserving or, after a period of suspension, restoring the liberties for which that war would be fought.

Duce, Fearing Defeat, Forbids His Fleet to Tackle British

Mussolini Kept Ships In Harbor as Enemy Battered Libyan Forts

By Augur
Copyright by New York Times

London, Aug. 20.—The British navy slapped Premier Mussolini in the face when it bombarded Marshal Rudolfo Graziani's Libyan bases next to the Egyptian frontier.

Concerning that successful operation the following facts may be taken as having been securely established:

1. The departure of the British Mediterranean fleet from Alexandria was quickly known to the Italian naval command.

2. Upon receipt of the information animation reigned at Taranto and other naval bases. Evidence points to preparation for the immediate setting out to sea. Indeed, light advance units were already leaving their anchorages.

3. Suddenly these activities ceased, and the Italian fleet remained passive in the harbor all the time the British were pounding Bardia and Fort Capuzzo to smithereens.

According to information ultimately received the Italian fleet remained in the harbor on the direct order of Mussolini, coming on the heels of an operational order from the admiralty to put to sea.

Italian admirals have little stomach for fighting, yet even they understood the danger of leaving the British challenge unanswered. Nevertheless Mussolini condemned them to inactivity.

The importance of the bombardment of the Libyan coast is not in the destruction of the town of Bardia or Fort Capuzzo but the destruction of a military supply base hidden in a deep canyon-like cleft of the coastal plateau. Vertical walls, combined with the winding course of a "wadi" (dry river) rendered it practically immune to aerial attack.

That canyon contained vast military stores, accumulated in advance for a move into Egypt. Now the stores, brought over with such difficulty from Italy, have been damaged, burned, dispersed or destroyed by the tremendous bombardment.

Whatever happens, the attack on Egypt must be delayed. The enterprise which Mussolini personally cherished and prepared for starts with failure.

It is presumed in London that Mussolini at the last moment kept the fleet inactive because he apprehends the consequences of a naval defeat on his personal regime. A major disaster for the Italian navy cannot be risked because it cannot be kept secret. The impression upon Italian public opinion would be disastrous to Fascist prestige, and therefore battle must be avoided even at the cost of strategic considerations.

Italians Gain Little In Berbera and Must Expect Sea Attack

By Mark Barron
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 20.—Italian occupation of Berbera, chief port of British Somaliland, may fit into a strategic move on the part of the British to shift their base of offensive to the sea.

The geography surrounding that sultry outpost of a bleak African desert colony is such that the British could carry on their warfare with far more effectiveness from their battle fleet than they could in trying to defend on land this small town.

The British have based across the Gulf of Aden, guarding the mouth of the Suez, a detachment of guncraft which should be able to raze Berbera.

Berbera is a town of normally about 20,000 people, except during the dry season, when it is swelled by traders swarming in from the interior with their stocks of ostrich feathers, sheep and goats, lion skins, salt and resin. During this season the town is suffused with a stench and torrid heat which the British governor general once described as a climate that "can be tolerated if necessary."

About 10 miles back of Berbera, running almost in a semicircle around the town, is a range of hills, mostly of a tough volcanic formation, through which caravans must pass to the desert by way of narrow canyons. If the British should start bombarding from the sea, the Italians would be hard pressed if they tried to retreat quickly through the hill passes back into the desert. Berbera must also depend upon its water supply from these hills.

British Somaliland, like French Somaliland, is mostly desert, composed of miles of flat sand, thorny bush, pestiferous flies and poisonous insects. The only continually productive vegetation is around the oases on the caravan routes.

Before the Jibuti-Addis Ababa railroad was built, the main line of travel into Ethiopia was on the caravan route that ran from Berbera down through Harar and Jijiga into Emperor Haile Selassie's former capital. During the Italian-Ethiopian war this ancient caravan route was revived as a major line of travel and across it was carried most of the supplies sent to the Negus' troops.

This isn't the first time the British have withdrawn in Somaliland. In 1910 they withdrew from the interior to a few coast stations when the "Mad Mullah," a native leader, went on the warpath. Again, during the World War they withdrew to the coast several times when the natives were incited to revolt.

Petain Speaks To Americas

Says France Will Rise

PETAIN STATEMENT.
Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, France, Aug. 20.—Marshal Petain, head of the French state, today made the following statement to the American press:

It is a real pleasure for me to receive the representatives of the American press and bid them welcome.

I am happy to seize this occasion to tell them of the sincere friendship France holds for America, for both Americas, Anglo-Saxon and Latin.

We piously preserve the memory of the brotherhood in arms of our Lafayettes and our Rochambeaus with the heroes of your War of Independence.

Friendship Unchanged

The friendship linked at that time has enjoyed the rare privilege of remaining unchanged through all vicissitudes of fortune. Recently again you have given us a new token of your magnificent generosity toward our refugees and evacuees. Precious in itself, this aid was even more precious for the testimony it brought of the fidelity of your sentiments towards us.

With Argentina, with Brazil, we feel united by the community of our Latin culture. Therein lies a bond which I was able to test the strength of during my embassy in Spain. We know the extent to which Latin America shared our trials and her fidelity, too, touches us deeply.

You have manifested, gentlemen, great and cordial interest in what France will be tomorrow. I am no prophet, yet there are certain things which I may say, if not with certainty, at least with absolute conviction.

Faith in France

Firstly, I have faith in France rising anew and that with a rapidity which will once again astonish the world. France has ever been the land of "luminous and surprising awakenings," to cite our great Bossuet. Her past is the pledge for her future.

The France of tomorrow will be at once very new and very ancient.

She will become again what she never should have ceased to be—essentially an agricultural nation. Like the giant in the fable, she will recover all her strength by renewed contact with the earth.

She will restore those old traditions of craftsmanship which in the past made her fortune and glory. A classic land of quality, she will know how to impart again to all her production with that finish, that delicacy, that elegance, in which for a long time she was without rival.

Land of Arts

It goes without saying she will remain a land of arts, of high culture, of distinguished research.

She will cultivate virtues which make strong peoples; she will know how to temper, by vigorous discipline, an individualism which at times becomes excessive; she will honor anew those great truths of Christian morality which were the former solid basis of our civilization.

She will remain firmly attached to the ideal which she professes in common with the great American democracies, an ideal founded on respect of the human individual, on the cult of the family, community and country, on love of justice and humanity; she will strive more than ever to develop between the old world and the new those relations and those exchanges, cultural as well as economic, which create, between peoples, the very atmosphere of comprehension and amity.

Word From Pershing

Vichy, France, Aug. 20 (AP).—Marshal Petain disclosed today that Gen. John J. Pershing had sent a message expressing the wish that he could be at the side of his old French comrade-in-arms during these critical days.

"Were it not for his age (Pershing will be 80 in September), he would be here," said the marshal, himself now 84.

"I was very moved and profoundly grateful for his wish to help in saving France and the youth of France."

Equation Of Battle

By Barnet Nover

The Fight Over England

IN THE PERIOD between August 8 and 18, inclusive, the British claim to have destroyed 700 German planes while losing only 153 of their own. The Germans, for their part, admit to the loss of only 194 planes while insisting that their fliers shot down no fewer than 775 enemy machines.

These completely divergent sets of figures have produced understandable bewilderment. It is obvious that if the British claims are anywhere near correct the German claims are lying propaganda and vice versa. But since there is no way of checking up on the figures the tendency is to regard them as equally exaggerated and give credence to the claims of neither side.

YET GERMANY'S aerial blitzkrieg on Britain has lasted long enough to make possible at least a preliminary analysis of the opposing tabulations.

This is easier regarding the German figures than the British. On August 8, the Germans reported that in the aerial combats of that day 49 British and 10 German planes were shot down, a ratio in Germany's favor of almost five to one. On August 11, when the German raids of British centers were renewed in greater force, the ratio, again in Germany's favor, was four and a half to one. On August 12 it was just under four to one. On August 13 it was five to one, on August 14 two and a half to one. It rose again the following day to five to one and four to one on August 18.

In other words, if we are to believe the Germans their fliers not only were able to carry out their bombing raids but at the same time to destroy more than four British fighting planes sent up to drive off the invaders.

NOW IF THAT WERE true the Germans by now should be enjoying complete aerial mastery over Great Britain. For the Germans have boasted, and the British have always admitted, that quantitatively the German air force is very much superior to theirs. In other words the Germans should today be in a position to repeat their successes in Poland, Norway, the Low Countries and France and be in a position to wipe out British resistance at one blow.

There is no evidence, however, that Britain's capacity to fight back has thus far been seriously diminished by Hitler's onslaught.

Nor is there any evidence that the damage which the German bombers have done to British ports and factories and airfields and power plants has been truly crippling.

The evidence is to the contrary. Neutral eyewitnesses, including responsible American correspondents in England, have reported that shipping continues to move in and out of harbors which the Germans claim to have made unusable; that planes continue to take off from airfields which have been subjected to terrific bombardment from the air; that British morale is as high as ever.

This does not mean that the German raids have not caused a very considerable amount of damage. In all likelihood they have. It does mean that this damage has not been sufficient to make it impossible for Britain to continue the fight. Indeed, according to one reliable witness, Mallory Browne, of the Christian Science Monitor, "the Germans have been unable to inflict any serious damage of permanent strategic importance."

THERE IS, moreover, an indirect proof that the German claims are wide of the mark.

If the Nazi air force has been knocking down close to five British planes for every one of their own shot down, then, obviously, their tactics should have been to give the R. A. F. no rest or respite and to attack Britain with ever-increasing force. That, indeed, was the prevalent assumption of what would happen once the attack on Britain began in earnest. During the five days following Sunday, August 11, precisely that did happen.

The number of German planes raiding British centers increased during that period from an estimated total of 600 the first day to an estimated 1,200 to 1,500 on the fifth day. But the sixth day, Friday, August 16, saw a decline to an estimated total of 800 planes in the size of the German aerial armada hurled against Britain and on Saturday England enjoyed an almost complete respite from air attacks.

IT IS QUITE possible that this respite and those of later days was ordered by the German military authorities for the purpose of reorganizing the air squadrons in order to be prepared for new efforts on a more gigantic scale than any hitherto attempted. The British, as Winston Churchill's speech in the House of Commons yesterday clearly shows, are not ignoring that possibility. At the same time the failure of the Nazi air force to carry out an unceasing attack on the British Isles with an ever-increasing force may have been due to the fact that the British claims are largely correct and the German losses have been so considerable as to compel the German air force to take a respite. Certainly, in view of the fact that the British are fighting on their home ground and their fighters are supported by antiaircraft and balloon barrages, it is reasonable to assume that the invaders suffered greater losses than the defenders.

Some observers even claim that the rate of German losses has been greater than the replacement rate. But even if true this does not mean that the British are out of danger or anywhere near out of danger. The overwhelming superiority in numbers which the German air force possesses may still prove the decisive factor. As to this the next week or fortnight may tell the tale.

Roosevelt to Be On the Defensive, Moley Declares

President Roosevelt "will be on the defensive" in the coming election "and the advantage will not be his," Raymond Moley, former New Deal brain truster, declares in an article published today in the Saturday Evening Post.

Moley, who was one of the President's most intimate advisers in the early years of the Administration and then revealed his experience in a book, observes that the President is "magnificent in offense, plausible in persenting new policies," but "he is awkward when the light is carried to him."

Moley contrasts the personalities of the President and Wendell L. Willkie, concluding that the public will make its final judgment by comparing the characters of the two men and their ability to "protect" what Moley calls a "perceptibly frightened" citizenry.

Moley asserts that Willkie has the more intimate knowledge of industry and the problems of people who work with their hands.

Comparing the two men, Moley's article states:

"As mariners on the sea of economic life, he and Willkie offer the contrast between the planner of navies, the student of what ships have been and ships should be, and the captain who's stood on the bridge in all kinds of weather."

Moley declares that the resignation of James A. Farley as campaign manager is "most dismaying" to the President.

State Department Upholds Bullitt's Speech on War

Copyright by New York Times

The State Department yesterday came vigorously to the defense of William C. Bullitt, American Ambassador to France, who was under fire in Congress Monday for his speech in Philadelphia Sunday on the war and its problems for the United States.

At his press conference, Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State, contended that the speech was justified. He declined to say in so many words that it was authorized by the State Department but it was gone over carefully in the department in advance and was distributed to the press by the department.

This country, Welles said, is going through critical times. When an American ambassador has been in an important foreign post in Europe during the last four years, has been an eyewitness of much that has been going on, and upon returning to this country wishes to give the American people his feelings as to the danger confronting the United States, that is highly desirable and in the interest of public enlightenment, Welles said.

Sales for the first eight four-week periods totaled $158,770,923, against $145,366,700 for the similar period last year.

Nazi Plane Falls In Eire Just Before Flying Boat Is Due

London, Aug. 20 (AP).—The London Daily Mail said tonight that a German plane which crashed in Ireland today fell an hour or two before the arrival of the British flying boat Clare from New York at Foynes, Ireland, only 50 miles from the scene of the crash.

The newspaper called the German plane a "Mystery 'Q' Plane."

(This name apparently comes from the "Q" boats used by the British in the World War to trap German submarines. They would appear as innocent small boats until the submarine came close and then they would open fire.)

Four American pilots were reported aboard the Clare.

T.B. Ward, Built By PWA, Opened At Gallinger

Designed to eliminate crowded conditions among the tuberculosis patients at Gallinger Hospital, the new 228-bed ward, built with WPA money, was opened yesterday with ceremony.

The old wooden shacks, which for years have housed the tuberculosis patients, will no longer be used for this purpose. Health Officer George C. Ruhland, who attended the occupation of the new ward by the patients, expects to remodel the structures for use as convalescent homes.

Another PWA project, the new 276-bed medical ward, will be opened next Tuesday. Formal dedication of the buildings has been put off until this fall.

By George B. Bookman

"Is this the White House, officer?" asks the lady from the corn belt.

"Yes, Ma'am, this is the White House," answers the trimly uniformed policeman, polite in spite of it all.

That is usually the citizen's first introduction to a compact, highly trained and tactful corps of men known officially as the White House Police.

A family man, a tireless question answerer who could give an excellent account of himself if called on to shoot it out with a gunman, a proficient boxer and wrestler who can also preside benignly at annual Easter-egg rolls—that, briefly, is the typical White House Policeman.

Eighty men, citizens all, make up the force. Recruits are chosen, after application to the White House Police, from the uniformed men of the Metropolitan Police Force and the Park Police. At least two years' experience on the Metropolitan Force or the Park Police is a prerequisite.

Their job, primarily, is to guard the President and the First Lady when they are in residence at the White House and to guard White House property.

Never in the history of the force has one of its members fired a shot in the line of duty or made an arrest. But the White House Police pistol team has won more trophies than any other similar team in the country.

Further, a White House policeman has the same power to make arrests as a member of the Metropolitan Force. If necessary, he is authorized to leave the mansion grounds to pursue an offender or make an investigation.

If any air of glamour surrounds this hand-picked police force, it is because its operations are under the general supervision of the United States Secret Service, which is also responsible for the personal safety of the President and his family.

Frank J. Wilson, Secret Service chief, and Joseph E. Murphy, assistant chief, have charge of the White House Secret Service detail and the White House Police.

Col. Edmund W. Starling, who strides like a general and shakes hands like a Postmaster General, is chief of the Secret Service detail at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue. He has been with the Secret Service for 26 years.

Daily Col. Starling holds conferences on protection problems with his assistant, Dale B. Whiteside, and Capt. Marcey of the White House Police.

The White House policeman is as famous for his ability to answer questions as is the Buckingham Palace guard for his fur hat.

"Is there any chance to see the President," is the hopeful query that is heard dozens of times a day. Each time the guard must shake his head and answer in the negative, invariably with a smile.

Many visitors, the White House police say, think that the President goes to the Capitol every day. Quite a number invariably look quizzically at the mansion and ask, "Where is the dome?"

Though the White House may look like a somnolent Southern mansion these summer days, its safety is guarded every hour by the men who are proud to be called "wide awake."

In a real sense, they are part of democracy's first line of defense.

WASHINGTON

Hyde Park, N.Y.,
August 19th, 1940.

My dear Captain Marcey:

I want you to tell the members of the White House Police Pistol Team how proud I am of the splendid score they made at Teaneck last week in shooting 1196 out of a possible 1200 and thereby capturing the championship of the United States, Canada, Mexico and Cuba.

Please extend to officers John J. Cash, E. L. Warden, E. Reynolds and R. P. Hallion my hearty congratulations on the scores they made.

Such skill would be a source of satisfaction at any time. It is doubly gratifying just now when the thought of the Nation is concentrated on the acquisition of all the skills essential in the development of an adequate national defense.

Very sincerely,

Franklin D. Roosevelt

New Sub Chasers—Something new in submarine chasers anchored yesterday at the Washington Navy Yard for an official inspection by Navy Department authorities. Revolutionary in design, the PC 450 (left) and PC 451 (right) tied up for a week's visit after an overnight trip from Norfolk, Va., where they were recently commissioned. Navy and Congressional leaders are expected to view them today and tomorrow. The PC 451 is the largest—165 feet long and powered with Diesel motors. It carries a 3-inch gun, four machine guns and depth charges. The 451, described as an innovation in sub chasers, was received at Norfolk August 10

British Ship With Refugees For U. S. Sunk

Survivors Reach Port; England Admits Losing Nine Vessels in Week

By the Associated Press

Dublin, Aug. 20.—The torpedo sinking of a 5,000-ton British steamer bound to the Americas with British war refugees, some of them en route to the United States, was disclosed today.

Seven persons were killed, survivors said, when two torpedoes struck their ship when it was two days out from a British port. The survivors were landed Sunday night at a port of northwestern Ireland by a Yugoslav steamer. The name of the British ship was not disclosed. Her destination was Jamaica.

Swedish Ship Sunk

London, Aug. 20 (AP).—The sinking of the 2,825-ton Swedish steamer Hedrun was disclosed today when survivors were brought to a west coast of England port. Eight persons were believed lost. Survivors said the ship was torpedoed without warning in the Atlantic.

Nine British ships of 32,257 tons were lost during the week ending August 12, it was authoritatively stated today.

In addition, the report said, one 942-ton Allied ship and two neutral ships, totaling 6,708 tons, were lost, making the week's total 12 ships with aggregate tonnage of 39,907.

Half of Previous Week

This was only slightly more than half of the acknowledged losses of 75,124 tons for the week ended August 5, which showed 13 British ships, totaling 60,058 tons; a 1,298-ton Allied ship and five neutral vessels with a total tonnage of 13,768 sunk.

No additional German shipping losses were reported.

(The German high command, reporting continuing successful raids on British merchant vessels, said one submarine had sunk 41,000 tons of shipping and also listed the 4,559-ton armed British merchantman Ampleforth and another 6,680-ton steamer as sunk.)

Maj. Emig, D. C. Civic Leader, Dies at 77 After Long Illness

Founded N. Washington And Dupont Circle Citizens Associations

Maj. Clayton Ely Emig, 77, United States Army Reserves, widely known Washington civic leader, died yesterday at Mount Alto Hospital following a protracted illness.

Maj. Emig, a native of York County, Pa., had been a resident of Washington since 1893. He founded the North Washington and Dupont Circle Citizens Associations and at one time served as president of the former and financial secretary of the latter.

More recently, Maj. Emig was chairman of a committee of civic leaders who were instrumental in the selection of Gravelly Point for the new National Airport.

Held Two Degrees

Until the time of his death, Maj Emig maintained a keen interest in national defense problems and two months ago was notified that his commission in the Army Reserves had been extended for another five-year period.

He received his early education in York County schools, attended Oberlin College and the University of Maryland Law Department. He held the degrees of M. A. and LL. B.

In addition to carrying on a wide practice of law, Maj. Emig was noted as a lecturer and author. He wrote and delivered a series of lectures before women's seminaries on "Law That Women Should Know." He also lectured extensively on "The City of Washington and Its Great Men."

He organized the Dupont Circle Citizens Association for the purpose of combating commercialism and enforcing zoning laws against undesirable structures in residential sections.

Maj. Emig also was the leading spirit in the founding of a special commission to aid appointive authorities in the selection of applicants for positions in the District government.

Entered Air Service

In 1917 he entered the Air Service as a captain and in the same year was attached to the Middletown Supply Depot. He was post commander of the aviation repair department at Indianapolis and from 1919 to 1920 was attached to the War Department as a legal expert.

MAJ. EMIG

He was a member of the American Bar Association, Sons of the American Revolution—including the Florida chapter; Army and Navy Club, Sojourners Club and numerous other patriotic and civic organizations.

Maj. Emig leaves his wife, Mrs. Lelia Dromgold Emig, and three daughters, Mrs. DeForest Mellon, Mrs. Gladys Emig Doing and Mrs. Ralph Endicott.

Funeral services will be held tonight at 7 o'clock from Gawler's funeral home. Interment will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Bar Group to Meet

Petain Calls U. S. Wise in Rearming

By John Lloyd
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Vichy, France, Aug. 20.—Chief of State Petain declared today that he sympathized and agreed with the decision of the American people to arm themselves against eventualities.

Marshal Petain was asked: "Does France view with sympathy the concern of American nations arming themselves against eventualities?"

"Certainly," the marshal answered. "A nation must be able to defend itself against invasion and must have means to do so."

Any nation, the chief of state said at a press conference, has not only the right but the duty to prepare itself.

Health Appears Good

"It must study possible dangers," he asserted. "It must then decide what moral preparations are necessary to ward off that danger.

"Technical men must be responsible for material needs."

The marshal appeared in excellent health.

Among other things, he said:

"I do not wish to criticize England. I cannot accuse her. Any nation has the right to defend herself. I feel France was left alone to fight out the war on her own too soon, but I do not wish now to engage in resentment."

Still a Republic

He declared the French Republic still exists. Asked whether France was going toward a totalitarian dictatorship, he cited Switzerland as the example to be followed here.

"There," he said, "you have liberty and, at the same time, discipline."

"I do not pretend," he admitted, "that this government is free."

"We are bound absolutely by the clauses of the armistice. The Germans hold the rope and twist it whenever they consider the accord is not being carried out."

He said, however, that France was willing to work out her salvation on the soil remaining to her, and spoke of her determination to reorganize and survive.

Plan of Education

"Yes," he added, "we will remain a democracy, but not a democracy where everyone may do anything he wishes."

Asked whether the reeducation of the people might not require a generation, he replied:

"You might say that's true, but we are going to tackle the problem in France from both ends. We are going to education both the youths and the older people. With youth we can use persuasion. The older people are inclined to be more hardheaded. With them, we will resort to discipline, perhaps in some cases rigorous discipline."

Petain confidently predicted his defeated country would recover from its present trials. The will to recover exists, he said, and added grimly: "If in any sense it does not, I will create it."

Essentially Agricultural

"The France of tomorrow," he asserted, "will be at once very new and very ancient.

"She will become again what she never should have ceased to be—an essentially agricultural nation. It goes without saying that she will remain a land of arts, of high culture, of disinterested research.

"She will cultivate the virtues which make strong peoples; she will know how to temper with vigorous discipline an individualism which at times became excessive . . ."

Petain observed that there has been some criticism of France for not fighting on from her colonies after defeat on the continent.

"But what would you have had us do,' he asked. "Our army in Africa was very weak. We had nothing but the debris of an army left on the Continent. What could we do?"

He described France in her present position as a country "with a strangling cord around her neck" but there was no bitterness in his speech. All his talk was in the vein of facing the circumstances and making the best of them.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE STATE DEPARTMENT
WASHINGTON, D. C.

Gentlemen: The signatory of this letter is much alarmed at the possible danger to an American vessel, now on the high seas, laden with important figures and refugees with the possibility (almost invitation) of precipitating an international event in our foreign relations and endangering the lives of helpless hundreds of passengers.

May she also remind you that she has received no answer to her last telegram requesting information on the mine protection afforded American vessels. Mines have also been known to drift away from their moorings—an added danger. The Lusitania tragedy must not be repeated.

Respectfully yours,
MRS. J. SERGEANT CRAM.

Magnesium Metal

THE STORY OF A SUCCESSFUL AMERICAN ENTERPRISE

TODAY MAGNESIUM METAL, so vitally essential to airplane construction, is selling at 27 cents a pound.

This is an all-time low, made possible by production processes which The Dow Chemical Company has been developing since 1915 to assure an adequate domestic supply of this invaluable metal.

The low price of 27 cents a pound contrasts significantly with $3.50 a pound which American industry was paying when Dow entered the field.

Magnesium is a full one-third lighter than any other metal in common use and yet it is so tough it stands up successfully under severe usage. Therefore, the series of magnesium alloys, produced by Dow under the trade name of DOWMETAL*, has won a remarkably wide acceptance.

It is reassuring to know that the domestic production of magnesium metal is in no way tied up to foreign patents. Dow owns its own processes. The development of these processes, including their use, is a free and clear American enterprise.

Not only does Dow pay no royalties to foreign sources for the production of magnesium metal, but it has licensed without fee or royalty over a score of American fabricators of Dowmetal parts.

Dow's production of magnesium metal has increased steadily during the past twenty years. That all demands may be met for all needs, production facilities were doubled the first of this year and will be doubled again by December, 1940—thus assuring a capacity of 25,000,000 pounds a year.

Wife of Willkie 'Idea Man' No Stranger Here

Mrs. Russell Davenport Honor Guest Couple of Years Ago at Press Women's Dinner Where She Met Feminine Officialdom

By Hope Ridings Miller

WITH WENDELL WILLKIE'S "idea man," Russell Davenport, very much in the spotlight these days, Washington society is running true to form and focusing attention on his wife. Thus, you hear over the teacups and dinner tables plenty of speculation as to whether she will be coming down from New York to spend some time here the next few months.

Hope Ridings Miller

Truth is, Marcia Davenport is no stranger to Washington. A noted novelist, biographer and music authority, she has visited here frequently, and a couple of years ago she met a sizable section of feminine officialdom at the annual dinner of the Women's National Press Club. She was there as an honor guest.

I remember meeting her a couple of hours before at a small party given by Maxine Davis in her Georgetown home. Dark, dynamic and talkative, she held her share of the spotlight without difficulty. Since her husband came to the fore as No. 1 enthusiast for the current Republican Presidential candidate, I've been recalling some of the things she said; and unless she has changed her mind since then, chances are, no matter how much Mr. Davenport takes part in the national picture, there's slight chance his wife will spend much time in the Nation's Capital.

Chiefly Interested in Music

She said, among other things, that she and her husband lived along New York's East River and hoped they always would. She said, also, that the Democratic Party was one of the few organizations to which she belonged and that she was delighted Mrs. Roosevelt was to be present at the press dinner.

A fascinating lady if there ever was one, Marcia Davenport is the daughter of Alma Gluck and Efrem Zimbalist. So I was not surprised to hear her say that music always has been one of her chief interests. Among other subjects she mentioned during the evening were her two daughters (one by a former marriage); her fondness for cats ("I make friends with any feline animal," she observed with a twinkle in her eyes); her enjoyment of cooking ("when I don't have to"); and her dislike of the country. ("We have a place in Norwalk, Conn., but I simply can't work there. I don't find rural scenes either restful or inspiring").

More Davenport Data:

Her early education began in a convent, then shifted to a Quaker school, on to the Shipley school, and finally to Wellesley College from which she made "an escape as soon as possibe." Later, she studied at the University of Grenoble.

Beginning her career by writing advertising copy, she left that to join the editorial staff of the New Yorker. Her biography of Mozart (the first written in this country) and her novel entitled "Of Lena Geyer," were best sellers. In recent years she has devoted much time to broadcasting and music criticism.

Miss Prochnik Liberty League Telephone Girl

Post-Debutante Extremely Pleased With Her New Job

The cheerful voice that answers the telephone when you call the office of the Liberty League these days belongs to Miss Patricia Prochnik. The attractive post-deb daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik has just gotten a job as switchboard girl and typist there and likes it a lot.

Shortly after her debut last winter, Miss Prochnik started work for a local photographer's studio. Her parents are now in New York to meet another daughter, Mrs. Francis Spalding, wife of an American foreign service officer at Cairo, Egypt. Mrs. Spalding and her four children arrived in New York after a roundabout trip on a refugee liner.

From New York the family will go up to Boston to visit Mrs. Prochnik's parents, and from there Mrs. Spalding will continue on to Squam Lake, N. H. While the Prochniks are away their home here is being occupied by another daughter, Mrs. John de Sibour, and her infant baby, Jay Henry de Sibour ("Pete" for short).

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

MR. AND MRS. Maguris James, who often visit Washington as guests of the Emil Hurjas, the Eugene Meyers or Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, and who are spending the summer at Rehoboth Beach, entertained at dinner the other night in honor of Mrs. Alfred I. duPont. Mr. James is writing the life of Mrs. duPont's late husband.

Mrs. duPont motored down to Rehoboth from Wilmington to spend several days with Mr. and Mrs. James and during her stay was the inspiration for several pleasant gatherings. At the dinner in her honor both she and her hostess wore orchids and lilies of the valley grown in Mrs. duPont's greenhouses and brought for the occasion by the thoughtful guest.

Dinner was served at two tables on the porch, the color scheme being green and white. Masses of tube roses made deliciously fragrant center pieces, which early in the evening, were raided to furnish boutonnieres for the gentlemen.

Mrs. James wore pleated ice-blue satin, which set off her blonde beauty to perfection, and Mrs. duPont chose a beautifully fitted black gown with a white embroidered frill outlining the decollete. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Chales E. Ferguson, of New York—he is one of the editors of the Reader's Digest—and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper.

The Fergusons, also house guests of Mr. and Mrs. James, were full of enthusiasm for the farm that they have bought in Northumberland County, Va., and were interested to learn that Mrs. duPont is a native of that same county. Mrs. Ferguson, who is dark and vivacious, wore a becoming summer print, while Mrs. Clapper agreed with Mrs. duPont in the choice of black with touches of white.

Mrs. James, who is full of fun and not the least bit secretive, confided that the extra butler serving dinner so impeccably was the lifeguard who in the daytime guards the beach where the Rehoboth domestics take their surf dips.

Reading the current press eulogies on the chic, slim figure of the Duchess of Windsor, I am reminded of the fact that at one time, not long before her marriage to the former King, she was a pupil of Washington's famous professor of gymnastics, Emery Siposs.

With Great Britain at war, there won't be any formal entertaining for Keith Officer, Counselor of the Australian Legation, who has just been transferred to Tokyo. But his friends will find some way to see as much of him as possible and to bid him Godspeed. During his tour in Washington Mr. Officer has entertained frequently at his attractive house in Georgetown usually preferring to invite small groups for dinner and bridge or cocktails. He is particularly fond of the country and Sundays often saw him off on long tramps into Virginia with his dog. I believe he actually walked all the way to Warrenton one day.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

College Trousseau

I

She must have some slacks and suits for play,
Outfits for tennis and hockey and gym,
Some hiking attire and a riding habit,
And some nifty one-piecers in which to swim.

II

She must take along several dress-up frocks
For dormitory dinners, sorority teas;
Some cute date dresses for Friday nights,
A costume suit for week-end jubilee.

III

She must have nifty togs for the football games,
A dress she can wear on to tea at the frat,
A top coat, a fur coat, smart little chapeaux,
Gloves, bags, dizzy doodads to provoke gay chat.

IV

She must be prepared for the college party,
With gowns to dazzle at the formal prom,
Others for simple extempore dances,
And one she can wear everywhere with aplomb.

V

She must have the right duds for campus strolling
And some snappy rain outfits—and furthermore,
Some cute little jackets for spectator sporting,

VI

She must have fudge party robes and enough underpinnings
To start a bride on a honeymoon,
And a wardrobe trunk that in the days of her mother,
Would have outfitted a dormitory from September to June.

VII

She must shop her father's bankroll thin in August,
To keep up with fashion's autocracy,
And to hold her own with the college Joneses,
For that's the way of democracy.

VIII

Yes, these are the clothes she must take to college
Yet may I ask—if it's not too crass—
What on earth will she wear to pursue knowledge?
And when will she ever have time for class?

This Suit Goes Everywhere

Here's a "little suit" that will be snug and right at the office once summer clothes are abandoned. For collegians it is equally smart since it will go to the stadium and to tea dances afterward. Both the slim, pleated skirt and the neat, little bolero are of featherweight plaid wool. There's a softly draped wool jersey blouse beneath in gray to match the plaiding. The wooden buttons are hand carved

Diamonds Effective On Tanned Skin

The time to wear diamonds is in the late summer and early autumn, so that the contrast of your chalk white evening gown with your brown skin gives the diamond its greatest value.

A gold necklace high-lighted with diamonds, a large diamond studded floral clip, gold knotted earings with a diamond in the center of the design, a diamond bangle, as big as you can wangle, with a solitaire diamond ring —would be something.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Fingertip Care

Slim-pointed fingers may denote an appreciative nature and creative ability, but you can tell more about a person's character by looking at the tips. They're certain tattlers on grooming.

Nails should always follow the general contour of the hands. However, long pointed nails are the most difficult to keep looking nice. They break off easily, collect more grime and require more changes of polish, which is sometimes drying to the nails. Here are some hints for preserving long nails—if you're the type to wear them:

Keep the nails strong by never filing them to too narrow a base. Rather, a broad one with the nails gradually tapering to the tips. Do not cut the cuticles but push them back gently each time you wash your hands or apply lotion.

Swab the nails clean and bleach with peroxide and a few drops of ammonia. Apply this with an orange stick for a nail file discolors and breaks the nail. For snowy tips run a pencil under the nails.

After removing old polish, rub olive oil over the nails to counteract the drying effects of the polish. Then use three deft strokes to apply a new coat over the entire nail.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Traveling Man, Home Mostly for Week-Ends, Shows Acid Boredom With Wife's Friends and Social Life

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband is a traveling salesman who is away most of the time, except for week-ends. Unlike most of his kind, he likes to "step out" with me when he is home; and he particularly likes to play bridge. But the trouble is that I don't seem able to make friends for us.

I have women friends with whom I do club and church work and with whom I play bridge of afternoons. If I ask them to play bridge with us in the evening they accept—and apparently they have a pleasant time with us. But they are ages in repaying the invitation. Also, if we give a regular party, usually it is returned in kind after a while—although sometimes it takes the form of an invitation to me, when my husband is out of town.

My husband resents this, and is beginning to refer sarcastically to our acquaintances as "your friends." Do you think there is something wrong with our personality or technique? Or do most wives have trouble getting their husbands out in the evening? Do most husbands prefer to go where they have something in common with the other couple? That is, where one is a relative, or a lodge brother, golf partner or business associate? This problem is making us uncomfortable and almost unhappy and I would welcome any suggestions. Sincerely,

M. L. Y.

Husband Seems More At Fault Than Wife

DEAR M. L. Y.: Your choice of club work, church work and afternoon bridge playing as customary diversions in your husband's absence indicates that you incline naturally to a sedate pattern of recreational activity. And the fact that you have developed a list of acquaintances with whom you can spend your husbandless days in such ways proves that you have an adequate talent for making friends—or for creating a place for yourself in the social life of your community.

If your husband is expecting you to develop, in his five days' absence out of seven, a better rounded social life of the purely frivolous sort—in which you are an habitue of a circle of married couples who fraternize constantly on a breezily informal basis, and who would welcome him with open arms of week-ends—he is asking too much. Indeed, he is asking the impossible, in my opinion.

Husband and wife who win that kind of social acceptance by kindred spirits must be (1) attractive each in his own right; (2) must be closely united by their genuine mutual enthusiasm for certain types of recreation—as, for instance, music, the theater, dancing, night clubbing, entertaining at home, etc., and (3) must be fairly constant social companions. In other words, each must support the other in their social campaigning, and the mutual support must be involuntarily and graciously given.

It seems probable, in your case, that your husband is little interested in, and proportionately unattractive to, the persons whom you have come to know. But since he is so little at hand to help you develop a list of acquaintances or intimates more to his liking, he is not justified in his critical attitude toward either you or them. You have, in a sense, found your own pace and level, and his discontent with what you have found suggests that your current problem is but the surface reflection of a basic dissimilarity in social interests between yourself and him.

The problem as stated suggests that he would like a gayer social life—both in tempo and variety—than a wife of your obviously somewhat sober temperament is capable of stirring up, alone and unaided. Apparently he overlooks entirely his own responsibility for introducing into the domestic picture the kind of persons with whom he could be altogether at ease—and who would seek his company as often and as eagerly as he would seek theirs.

Plainly he is bored by the tedium of his week-ends at home, but I believe that tedium is primarily the result of his failure (not yours) to make an intelligent social investment in the home field. If he wants to be amused, he must exert himself to be an entertaining person. He must be both good guest and good host. He must show that he likes people. And this means, among other things, cheerfully waiving ceremony in regard to who entertained whom last time.

If you know certain couples with whom you enjoy playing bridge, have them come to your house as often as they will come. Don't be so stuffy as to await a return invitation before asking them a second, a third or even a dozenth time. And if your husband doesn't find your boon companions and their husbands stimulating society, then advise him pleasantly to trot out his selections. Tell him you will gladly make his friends yours, and that he has a fifty-fifty responsibility with you to enlarge your list of mutual acquaintances.

Incidentally, your wistful questions about whether husbands perfer to go "where they have something in common with the other couples, such as a relative, a lodge brother, a golf partner or business associations,"—these questions indirectly label your husband as something of a stick. The implication is clear that he lacks the gift of tuning in, conversationally, with whomever he comes across. And that is an odd lack, for one in his profession. But it is that lack which is crippling his social life at home, and therefore it is unfair of him, as I said before, to hold you entirely to blame for his discontent.

M. H.

Alice Marble Avoids Overeating To Keep in Trim

By Associated Press Feature Service

Alice Marble wants an ice cream soda. Before every match she says: "This time I'll really have my ice cream soda if I win!" She usually wins. But she never gets the soda.

Her coach, Eleanor Tennant, always says: "Now, Pinky, you know you'd rather have a rare beefsteak."

And Pinky (Alice Marble to us) says, "Y—es, I would."

Miss Marble has found her way to tennis championships, restored health and continued beauty by listening to her coach.

"I never overeat," she explains. "I choose lots of vegetables and drink lemon juice in water—not hot water.

"I practice the year 'round, play golf for exercise and fun, and jump rope daily to keep my figure trim and to improve my breathing."

She listens to a teacher who is determined that she shall keep the sleek beauty she began with. Her skin is even better than it used to be.

Alice never grips the racket and never contracts her muscles, but plays an easy game with good rhythm and timing. Such a system often makes the difference, she says, between imitating men and holding your own as a woman.

The champion's legs are nearly perfect, with a grand summer tan, and are free of hair. Her toenails, bright red, match finger nails and lipstick. She has learned how to use makeup since she was called down for using too much during an English match.

Her only rigid muscles are of the waist and diaphragm, which ought to be the envy of every girdle-clad woman.

Seeking Easy Way to Reduce Is Time Wasted

Prepared Substitutes For Meals May Prove Dangerous to Health

By Ida Jean Kain

THE LATEST TRICK in reducing is the neatest. Some ingenious and enterprising manufacturer with an uncanny understanding of the overweight psychology has evolved a method whereby you take his product in place of two meals a day and reduce. You could take anything in place of two meals a day and reduce. You could take an apple but it would'nt keep the doctor away

This is just calorie cutting in another guise. Instead of telling you to hold your calories down 1,000 a day, the proponents of these plans get the same calorie deficit by having you take a synthetic product low in calories in place of the two meals. If you consistently omit two meals a day, you are fairly certain of reducing—but unless the substitute supplies all the protective elements you must have, it's a risky business.

Easier to Stay on Diet

There are foods on the market which are low in calories and can be safely used in place of high calorie foods—they are in a different class. They do not purport to take the place of meals. It is suggested that they be used in conjunction with well-balanced low-calorie meals to contribute satiety.

You may find it easier to stay on a diet if you use some of the calorie biscuits or breads because you can eat more of them without exceeding your reducing allowance.

But nothing in this world can reduce you unless you keep your calorie intake below the number expended daily in energy. Sweat baths, soaps, salts, cream, rubber girdles and all the long list of "reducers" are futile unless you keep your calorie intake below the number expended in energy! Then the stored fat is burned to make up the deficit.

Massage, although often advocated for the overweight, is not reducing. It is an excellent means of stimulating the circulation and improving the muscle tone. It shortens stretched muscles and improves your measurements. But it does not reduce weight.

Exercise Isn't Enough

I don't even try to sell you on exercise as a reducer! The amount you are likely to take regularly will not help you to lose any appreciable number of pounds. When you consider the number of calories you have to burn in exercise—4,320—to lose one single pound of fat, you can see that you would not get very far on exercise if you ate as you pleased! But exercise tones the muscles and gives you a lovely figure.

When you understand the separate roles of a low-calorie diet and streamlining exercise, it is not so easy for you to be led astray by the promises of substitutes!

A WOMAN'S WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

Zoo Director's Wife Leads Adventurous Life; Grocer's Clerk Pours Highballs for Shopper

IT'S A LONG WAY from the New York offices of the Woman's Home Companion to the wilds of Liberia. Mrs. William M. Mann bridged that gap, however, when she married Dr. William Mann, director of Washington's Zoo. Since then she has traveled with him to Central America, South America, British Guiana, the East Indies and, most recently, Liberia. Animals were all new to her, but she says she found it very easy to get interested in them.

MRS. MANN

She caused a stir on the expedition from which they have just returned. One crone in the village where they camped was captivated by the sight of a white woman, particularly a white man in slacks, and paid daily visits to their hut just to have another look.

Her favorite souvenir of Liberia is a trophy symbolizing her membership in a native snake society. Presented to her after a long and elaborate ceremony, it consists of an antelope's horn filled with snakebite remedy and decorated with the shells which serve as poker chips for native gambling games.

Most houses look their worst when they're undergoing repairs. Not so the White House; the scaffolding used by painters there recently was an attractive shade of pastel (not Eleanor) blue which proved very becoming to the mansion . . . Also in the throes of restoration is a former temporary executive mansion, at present the home of the Arts Club, 2017 I street northwest. James Monroe was living there when he was elected President. Because the White House was being repaired at the time, he made it the Presidential home from March 4 until June, 1817. The 135-year-old building now sags slightly and workmen are bracing it with steel girders.

SCIENCE MARCHES ON—Patents were issued last month for a fingernail cutting machine, a cockroach trap and a device intended to prevent automobile accidents by scratching the motorist's eyelids whe nhe dozes at the wheel. Also patented was a perfume temptingly described as containing "a ketal derived from a pyrocatechol of the general formula . . . wherein R means a substituent of the group consisting of alkyl radicals and cycloalkyl radicals and of a ketonic compound of the group consisting of aliphatic ketones and cycloalkanones."

Ringside Table

(Subbing for Mary Harris)

DON CARR

"Hello, Carr!"

"Whatcha say, Don?"

"Oh, I'm in the pink."

"Man, I haven't heard that expression since the old days out at Maryland U."

"Hi! There's an idea for that colyum we promised to write for Mary Harris. Let's make it about our first band at Maryland U."

Ours was the first dance band at the University of Maryland. We called it "The Old Liners," Maryland being the "Old Line State." In those days we were not what you would call "solid senders," but we sure were "hot." The combination was two saxes, two trumpets, trombone, piano and drums. Rehearsals for our "special arrangements" were a memory test for those who couldn't read music, a scribbling session for those who could. The nonreaders would play a phrase over and over until the others wrote it down in fair enough shape to read later on. The drummer meanwhile got in a good nap.

We played most of the school dances and practically all of the fraternity and sorority "hops." It seems only yesterday that our classmate Munro Leaf would call us over to his frat house and say:

"Boys, don't forget our big dance next Friday. We want your four-piece band."

That was the average size outfit for frat houses.

"Say, Carr, how about that first big show the Old Liners played for the K. A. Minstrels!"

"Oh, sure, the featured vocalist was Kate Smith—remember?"

"Yes, she wanted to sing with us all summer, but when New York called she upped and letf us."

"You know, Don, the Old Liners remind me a lot of our Madrillon band. Hugh, Lou, Leon, Johnny—they all have the old 'college try'—fine bunch of fellows."

"Hey, what time is it?"

"Two o'clock."

"Gangway!" I gotta give Wendy her 2 o'clock bottle—waiter, give Carr the check."

Six Americans Nazis Captured Arrive in N. Y.

Refugee Ships Bring Ambulance Drivers, British Children

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Aug. 20.—The Quanza, a small Portuguese liner which was taken out of her usual South African run for a special voyage to evacuate war refugees from Europe, arrived here today on her first visit to this port with another of those unique boatloads of passengers that the war has made almost a commonplace.

It included six American ambulance drivers who were captured by the Germans; Dutch and colored seamen whose ship was torpedoed without warning; three members of the wealthy Rothschild family, a Japanese journalist; Pierre Lazarett, editor of the Paris Soir, whose paper was taken over by the Nazis; a French film actor, a Czecho-Slovakian figure skater, a Paris opera star and refugees from virtually all the countries which Hitler has conquered.

Altogether there were 317 passengers on board and they filled the 6,636-ton ship to capacity. One hundred and ninety-six of them, including 66 United States citizens, debarked here. The remaining 121, unable to obtain United States visas, will remain on board until the ship reaches Veracruz, Mexico.

Treated Well by Nazis

The ambulance drivers all testified that considering the difficulties of the situation their captors treated them well, one even calling them "extremely polite." Yet they all want to continue to aid the fight against the Nazis by returning to drive ambulances in England.

The men, all members of the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps, were Arthur Stratton, 29, of Clinton, Mass.; Charles Willen, 20, New York; Paul Brooks Willis, 37, of Albuquerque, N. Mex.; Francis J. Vicovari, 28, and Robert Carson, 42, both of New York, and William T. Ripley, 27, of Montclair, N. J.

All except Vicovari were captured June 23, along with 15 other members of their section, in the Vosges Mountains where the section was surrounded in the midst of 300,000 French soldiers. Vicovari was captured a week earlier.

"The Germans resented Americans being there," Vicovari said. "They told us we had no business being there." Willis expressed the German attitude even more succinctly. "They told us we were chumps," he said.

Three American women on board who were also in Paris after the occupation testified that the Germans were "very correct."

Revenues Soar as 10,000 Phone Daily for Weather Forecast

"THE WEATHER IS . . ."—When you dial WE. 1212, the voice that gives the weather report is that of Mary Wright (left), who made the recording for "Rosie the Robot." Bessie Ryder (right) is showing a spectator at the Dupont exchange where the recording was made

Rosie, the Robot, Gives the Answer Whether It Will Rain or Shine And She Works 24 Hours a Day

When Mark Twain complained that "everyone talks about the weather, but no one does anything about it," he was not reckoning with the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

Talking about the weather is out of fashion. In Washington today, the thing to do is listen. More than 10,000 District residents lift their phones every day, dial WEather 1212, and hear the world's most patient woman detail the Weather Bureau's latest forecast.

The perplexing poser that has agitated the universe for centuries, "Will it rain, or will it shine," now yields to a telephone, six dexterous twists of the wrist and an attentive ear.

To picnic or seek some well-roofed restaurant, to go sailing or curl up with a good book, to wear heavy underwear or light—these and other earth-shaking puzzlers having to do with rubbers, raincoats and umbrellas now are easily answered.

And that's not all. The phone company's new service, which has just completed four months of 24-hour operation, has innumerable utilities.

These come under such headings as "what to do with the baby when he wakes up in the middle of the night," and "how to keep junior from overhearing juicy bits of gossip when the neighbors drop in for tea."

The dulcet tones that issue from the receiver when WEather 1212 is dialed have a hypnotic effect upon children. The only problem, according to advocates of this system, is to get the child to eat, sleep, and do an occasional lesson without disconnecting the phone.

The telephone company emphasizes that it takes no responsibility for such mishaps or for the truth of its omen-readers.

"We always quote the Weather Bureau," one executive explained.

So, if your evening gown shrinks to knee-length under a sudden downpour don't blame the maiden who announced melodiously, "Fair weather tonight," when you rang WEather 1212.

Calling her back and berating her soundly is usually good salve for that ouraged feeling. Her name is Rosie, it is rumored about, and she won't talk back. But it won't do much good. You see, Rosie is a robot.

Canada to Get U. S. Assistance lend themselves to continental defense.

Industries to Be Geared

The funds could come from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which now has a bill in Congress for $1,500,000,000 more loan authority, of which $500,000,000 is to go to the Export-Import Bank. Unless Congress restricts these loans to Latin American republics, it was thought yesterday that some of the funds could be siphoned to Canada.

Further, there are plans to gear Canadian and American industry more closely to eliminate unnecessary duplication in defense plants. Experts predicted yesterday that the Defense Commission would begin a study of the possibilities of standardizing tanks, trucks and other defense materiel produced on both sides of the border.

Outright loans to the Canadian government, which are illegal anyhow, are not necessary just now, officials said.

The Canadian dollar is in a strong position, obviating the need for intercession by America's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund.

Industrially, Canada is booming this month, having just established in July a new high employment record, in such industries as lumber, paper, chemical, electrical apparatus, steel and canning.

United States export loans to Canada would send to unprecedented figures an export trade that is already of boom proportions.

American shipments to Canada for the first ten months of the European war, ended with June, were $496,000,000, which compared with $332,000,000 for the same period last year and $401,000,000 for the same ten months in 1937-38.

Destroyers Could Be Ready in a Week

By the Associated Press

Fifty United States destroyers could be made ready to leave the East Coast for England within one week should Congress accede to Prime Minister Churchill's plea for ships, a naval authority said yesterday.

More than 100 of the 123 over-age destroyers owned by this country have been recommissioned and the remainder are to be returned to service shortly.

The destroyers were reconditioned for neutrality patrol, escort duty and other limited service after the outbreak of war in Europe.

Dies Clears 3 Film Stars After Quiz

Finds Cagney, March, Bogart, Writer, Have No Communist Ties

By the United Press

San Francisco, Aug. 20.—Movie Stars James Cagney, Humphrey Bogare and Frederic March and Screen Writer Phillip Dunne are not, and never have been, sympathetic with the Communist movement, Chairman Martin Dies of the House committee investigating un-American activities said today.

The Texas Congressman made the announcement a few minutes after concluding a hearing with Cagney, screen "tough guy," who flew here from Massachusetts by way of Los Angeles to deny charges previously filed with Dies.

Although Dies, who has been conducting secret hearings into alleged West Coast subversive activities, said he believed Bogart, Cagney, March and Dunne were patriotic Americans, he added, there are "numerous actors and screen people, out of humane motives, who have made contributions to, and let their names be used by certain organizations which the Dies committee has unanimously found to be organized under Communist leadership."

Cagney, supported by 50 World War veterans who rallied to his aid under leadership of Past State Commander William Wilson, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said he had been questioned by Dies about various contributions he had made during recent years, "including money I gave to aid women and children in the Salinas lettuce strike and other San Joaquin Valley strikes.

"I have always ignored these charges of communism as ridiculous," the actor told newsmen. "But now I'm going to clear up the matter once and for all."

Cagney said he told Dies of contributions of money and services to the Motion Picture Relief Fund, the Hollywood Guild, the Scottsboro Boys Defense Fund, Community Chest "and other organizations whose work I have never considered un-American."

Dies did not reveal whether he would question other movie actors at his secret hearings in Saan Francisco.

Defense Sidelights

FBI Probes Langley Field Accidents; Sabotage Charged

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, said last night that agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were investigating a series of airplane accidents at the Army's Langley Field, Va., which he ascribed in the Senate to sabotage.

"I heard that at Langley Field within 26 days there were 26 accidents and that every one of the 26 accidents was caused by a defective landing gear," the Senator said. "There must have been sabotage."

Construction of storage facilities, probably underground, to assure a 100-day reserve of aviation gasoline in event of war is planned by the Army and Navy.

Secretary of the Navy Knox told the Senate Appropriations Committee during hearings on a $5,008,000,000 supply bill yesterday that underground storage space was being considered for 7,500,000 barrels of gasoline. The estimated cost would be $2,500,000 for the Navy and $5,000,000 for the Army.

Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones announced that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has allocated $50,000,000 for purchase of high-test gasoline.

The Navy today invited bids from private shipyards for construction of ten seaplane tenders of approximately 1,600 tons standard displacement.

Bids will be received, the department said, on lots of two, four or six ships and will be opened at the department here at noon Wednesday, September 25. Vessels of the type are estimated to cost approximately $5,000,000 each.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee recommended yesterday that President Roosevelt be granted emergency authority to make temporary promotions of regular Army officers, a power previously limited to time of war. The Chief Executive was said already to have such authority for the National Guard and reserves.

The Defense Commission announced yesterday that it had cleared $22,299,730 in additional contracts to be awarded by the Army and Navy.

Largest of the four items announced was $15,000,000 for gun equipment to be bought from the Savage Arms Corporation at Hartford, Conn.

With the latest clearances, the Defense Commission had approved a total of $2,100,445,017 in defense contracts since it was created late in May.

Mrs. William W. Smith Gets Material For Her Column on Vacation in Hawaii

MRS. WILLIAM WALTER SMITH, past president of the Professional Writers' Club and an active member of the League of American Pen Women, has been vacationing this summer in Hawaii, not only enjoying the beauties of the islands, but also picking up material for the column she writes for Iowa papers.

Yesterday, said a recent letter, she expected to fly back to Honolulu after a visit to two other islands. She will leave September 1 on her return to the States. Going by train from San Francisco to Newton, Iowa, she plans to stop there to speak in the high schools and then continue her trip East.

Mrs. Smith has been entertained by the Honolulu Pen Women, was a guest of Mrs. Eli A. Helmick, wife of Gen. Helmick, retired, and was feted by Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Richards, with whom she was at North Cape last summer.

Gen. and Mrs. Helmick went to Honolulu from Washington 11 years ago to spend a three months' vacation and have been there ever since. This is a common story in the islands, writes Mrs. Smith, for few persons who visit there ever leave if they can manage to stay.

BRIDGE PARTY—The summer season, although not a time for regular meetings of women's organizations, is enlivened by informal gatherings of members of various groups. Delta Zeta alumnae and actives will meet for a dessert bridge this afternoon at the home of Mrs. George Leland White, in Alexandria. The hostess will be assisted by Mrs. Ralph Howard and Frances Caston.

LOOKING AHEAD—Preparing for the opening of the school term, Zeta Chapter of Sigma Kappa Sorority entertained at a formal rush party last night at the home of Mrs. Edith Lapish Porter, 3414 O street, for the incoming freshmen girls at George Washington University. Chinese lanterns decorated the garden. Betty Burnett provided accordion music.

Active members in charge of the affair were Jane Hampton and Muriel Rafferty, assisted by Jeanne Spaulding and Emilia Black. Alumnae members of the chapter who assisted the hostess were Mary Brooks Haley, Grace Lady and Peggy Graves.

STUDY GROUP MEETS—"Public Health and National Defense" will be discussed by Dr. James A. Crabtree, of the United States Public Health Service, in an address this morning before the meeting of the study group of the Woman's National Democratic Club. Mrs. Philip Dodson will preside at the session, which will be the last of the summer series.

CLUB DINNER—The Women's City Club will have its regular get-together dinner tomorrow night at the clubhouse in Jackson place with Nell V. Price as hostess. "How Does Your Garden Grow?" a motion picture in natural color, with the narration by Lowell Thomas, will be presented by R. E. Hockett as the evening's program.

MAKE-BELIEVE TOUR—A second imaginary "Good Neighbor Tour" of South America has been announced by the General Federation of Women's Clubs with the cooperation of the Pen-American Union.

The "tour" is an unusual course of study on the 20 republics of Latin America.

The travel motif is carried throughout the project and groups adopting it may go through all the formalities of actual travel. The first program is given over to the preparations for the trip and the departure, followed by a session on board ship, consisting partly of serious discussion as a preliminary introduction to the countries to be visited, and partly to recreation. From then on the "tour" touches at each of the countries of Latin America, stopping first at Brazil and proceeding to Uruguay and Argentina; thence across the Andes and up the west coast of South America, through Central America and Mexico, and finally to the republics of the West Indies.

The project is not merely a travelogue, but a comprehensive course of study during which every phase of life and activity in the republics of Latin America is touched upon, including the political, economic, cultural and social.

The itinerary is divided into 20 programs, an outline of which is set forth in an attractive and colorful brochure. To augment the outline and to provide the necessary material with which to work up the programs, ten volumes of documentary material will be sent to each club registering with the department of international relations at the headquarters of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Washington. In addition, each club will receive a one-year subscription to the monthly bulletin of the Pan-American Union.

A group of 25 prominent clubwomen, headed by Mrs. Saidie Orr, president of the federation, and Mrs. Frederic Beggs, chairman of the department of international relations, made an actual South American tour in May and June.

Water Men to Meet

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 20 (AP).—The annual meeting of the Virginia section of the American Water Works Association will be held in Monroe Hall at the University of Virginia on September 5 and 6, it was announced today by City Manager Seth Burnley.

New Council Will Appoint City Engineer

Alexandria Board Defers Appointment Until September 10

A successor to H. G. McCartney, Alexandria city engineer who resigned two weeks ago following closed session of the city council, will be named September 10, when the new council, will be installed.

At a special meeting last night the body voted to delay appointment of the new engineering head since three members of the present council wil lretire within ten days.

A post of "such importance" should be filled by the incoming council, members resolved in approving a motion of Councilman Henry Cooper, one of those who will retire.

Cooper and the other two retiring councilmen, Mayor Richard L. Ruffner and A. S. Lamond, will be replaced by Eugene Manken, James Armstrong, and Ernest Simpson.

Vice Mayor William T. Wilkins will preside over the new policy-making unit.

Pending appointment of the engineer, the city manager was instructed to select a member of the present engineering staff to serve out McCartney's term.

In other action last night the council voted a $35,000 appropriation for heating plants in five public schools. Another appropriation request for $12,000 was deferred for action to a subsequent meeting.

'Fat Friends'

Barrage Balloons Make Nazis Miss Targets

London, Aug. 20 (AP).—Britain's "fat friends" variously known also as "floating elephants" or "old floppies," or just plain barrage balloons, have won a pat on their broad backs from military experts.

Once dismissed with a laugh by many observers, the great, cable-tethered sausages now are credited with causing Nazi bombers to miss countless targets.

R. A. F. officials point to the persistent attacks by German pilots on the bag balloons in answering questions as to whether they are effective.

"They are not doing that just for the fun of it," one air expert pointed out.

"As a matter of fact the balloons with their trailing cables proved well worth their salt in the past week in doing their assigned job—namely, protecting vulnerable points from dive bombers and in making raiders fly at the heights we want them to fly.

"The latter means that we have just that much less sky to watch. We can have our guns trained and our fighters patrolling at certain levels, thanks to our fat friends, the balloons."

4 Killed in Blast Of Powder Plant

Gibbstown, N. J., Aug. 20 (AP).—Four men were killed today in an explosion that wrecked a cartridge-filling building at the Dupont Co.'s Repauno dynamite plant, shook buildings over a wide area and shattered windows five miles distant.

Approximately 1,200 pounds of dynamite let go in a cartridge house, one of the last operations in the manufacture of dynamite. The building, a wooden structure 20 by 30 feet, inclosed on all sides by an earthen barricade, was destroyed.

H. E. Edwards, Richmond Aide, Named State Democratic Head

City Attorney, 38, Directed Campaign Of Va. in 1938

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Aug. 20.—The Democratic State central committee today named Horace H. Edwards, 38-year-old city attorney of Richmond, State chairman of the party to succeed the late J. Murray Hooker, of Stuart.

Edwards, who directed the Democratic State campaign of 1936, said in accepting he would "pull no punches" and assured the committee and the Democrats of Virginia that a vigorous and active campaign would be waged.

Gov. Price, offering his services to the committee during the campaign, urged immediate action by the Democrats with district meetings, like that at Waynesboro last night, as a springboard to get the drive for Roosevelt, Wallace, Senator Byrd and the Democratic nominees for Congress under way.

The committee adopted a resolution, offered by State Senator John W. Carter, of Danville, praising the 50 years of service to the party by the late Mr. Hooker, for 40 years a member of the committee, the last 15 as chairman. It was adopted by a rising vote.

Edwards' name was the only one presented to the committee at a special meeting called by the members themselves to select a successor to Mr. Hooker.

Edwards told the committee he planned to follow "as far as I can the policy of the late J. Murray Hooker."

"The success of my office," he said, "will depend largely upon the enthusiasm and cooperation of the district, county and city Democratic committees, and especially upon the workers in the 1,700 precincts of the State.

"Every member of our party will have the right to be heard at all times and every effort will be directed toward harmonizing and solidifying the democracy of this Commonwealth. I welcome the advice of all of our members, and I sincerely hope they will give me the benefit of their views in all matters affecting our party.

"The immediate task lying before us is to elect in November President Roosevelt, Mr. Wallace, Senator Byrd and the Democratic Congressional nominees throughout the State. Arrangements will be made at once to open a State campaign headquarters here in Richmond, and shortly I shall appoint a manager to direct the campaign. Every effort will be made to attain the successful election of our candidates. I assure the Democrats of Virginia that a vigorous and active campaign will be waged."

HORACE E. EDWARDS

Gov. Price, asserting that news of the activities of the "other group" is appearing regularly in the press, said there were reasons for the Democrats making an immediate start on the campaign and showing that "our hearts and interest are in the fight." Criticising the acceptance speech of Wendell Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee, the chief executive said if it contained a single new constructive idea he failed to note it.

"He indorsed what President Roosevelt has done but said he could do it better and cheaper," the Governor said. He expressed the view nothing could be more unfortunate for the country than the election of what he termed an "inexperienced representative of Wall street."

8 Cabbies Fined for 'Loitering' In Front of Navy Department

Eight cab drivers were fined $10 each in Traffic Court yesterday—twice the amount they would have forfeited—when hey appeared to protest charges they were "loitering" in front of the Navy Department.

Twelve drivers were taken into custody by Park Policeman E. S. Mast on Monday. Two elected to forfeit $5 each at the time of their arrest, another sat in the courtroom and refused to answer his name after hearing the fines imposed in five of the cases, and one driver was acquitted.

Despite the drivers' argument, made conclusive by snapshots, that their cabs were blocked by a street excavation which occupied two of the three traffic lanes on Constitution avenue, Judge George D. Neilson accused the defendants of "aggravating the general public."

Mile an Hour Pace

"You have made a nuisance of yourselves driving along at 1 mile an hour, holding traffic up for blocks and blocks," Judge Neilson declared. "I have heard complaints about this situation and just last week sentenced six men for the same violation. Even the Secretary of the Navy has complained about the cabs blocking the entrance to the building."

The defendants were arraigned in two groups. In each instance, Mast testified the drivers would pull to the curb at the entrance to the Navy Department, Eighteenth street and Constitution avenue, driving very slowly.

"They use that excavation as an alibi," Mast stated. "They get into the curb and know it will take them some time to get back into the traffic lane. They hope to pick up a passenger during that time."

Mast explained before the trials that the violations were "on his beat" and that Capt. Henry Helms, of the Park Police, had called his attention to the fact that several complaints had been received about "loitering cabs."

Walter Cavell, 29, 4563 North Capitol street, one of the first defendants, explained to the court that the only free lane of traffic was the "left-turn" lane. Not wanting to make a left turn, he said, he pulled to the right and his way was blocked by the excavation. Five cabs were blocked behind him he said until he could nose his way into the moving lane again.

Fails to Respond

The other drivers told the court the same story.

Broadus M. Valentine, 23, of 612 A street northeast, saved $5 by not replying to his name when it was called by Court Clerk Charles Driscoll. Mast, from the stand, pointed out Valentine when his name was called, but Driscoll said if he did not want to answer, his collateral would be forfeited. Valentine had posted $5.

The case against George E. Murphy, 28, of 234 Sixth street southeast, was dismissed when he explained to the court that he had taken a fare to the Navy Department and was blocked by cars going around the excavation. Grady J. Brooks, 49, of 140 Adams street northwest, and Robert L. Meares, jr., 46, of 1351 Meridian place northwest, each forfeited $5 at the Third Precinct, Monday.

The men fined were Bernard L. Olsen, 41, 1518 Newton street northwest; F. Lester Sutton, 25, 1310 Thirty-fourth street northwest; Charles W. Sorrell, 33, Forestville, Md.; Roy S. Lytton, 21, 5012 Fourth street northwest; Scherer Preston, 33, 1308 Connecticut avenue northwest; John W. Neal, 21, Arlington, Va.; Walter Cavell, 29, 4563 North Capitol street, and Alphonso V. Bavtista, 27, 1139 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Last Rites Held In Mays Landing For L. W. Todd, 63

Funeral services were held at 2 p. m. yesterday in Mays Landing, N. J., for Lemuel W. Todd, 63, cashier of Laidlaw & Co., New York Stock Exchange firm at 1821 Fifteenth street northwest.

Mr. Todd died Sunday. He was spending the summer at Mays Landing. He lived here at Randolph Terrace, Fourteenth and Randolph streets northwest.

Born in Haverstock, Pa., Mr. Todd came here in his youth and was first associated with the Southern Railway Co. He had been associated with G. Bowie Chipman, manager of the Laidlaw office, for 30 years.

Italian Sets Forth British War Aims

Milan, Italy, Aug. 20 (AP).—Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo Di Italia, published today a dispatch from its war correspondent assigned to the German forces which said in part:

"During the winter of 1940 and the spring and summer of 1941 London hopes to succeed in bringing about an entirely new set of political and military conditions favorable to England, including the following:

"Intervention by the United States, rupture of the good relations now existing between Russia and the Axis, war between Japan and Russia or a war between Japan and the United States, revolution in France, a rebellion in the French empire against Petain, war between the Axis and Yugoslavia, war between the Axis and Greece, war between Turkey and the Balkans, war between Hungary and Rumania, rebellion in Ethiopia, general famine in Europe, internal disturbances in Italy and Germany, India's declaration in favor of England's war against the Axis, weakening of Germany's air force, failure of the submarine campaign, an English naval victory in the Mediterranean."

Italians Prepare To Attack Aden

Duce Orders Duke Of Aosta to Lead Aerial Attempt

By the Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 20.—Premier Mussolini's African legions triumphantly completed the occupation of British Somaliland today and prepared for an aerial attempt to conquer Aden, English-held eastern hinge of the gateway to the Red Sea, and thus to imperil the British lifeline.

Strongly implying that attacks on Aden, on the Arabian coast of the narrow waterways linking the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean, and on islands in the Strait of Bab el Mandeb were contemplated, authoritative Fascists said the Somaliland victory would enable their forces to "threaten the British outlet from the Red Sea."

Mussolini ordered the Duke of Aosta, commander of the Italian forces on this front, to lead them against new objectives after a period of rest.

Gains of Victory

The capture of Somaliland was declared by the Italians to have given them these five important gains:

1. It wrested from the British an area opening upon the Red Sea's outlet on the empire's route to India, and will add 68,000 square miles to the Fascists' own empire in Africa.

2. It deprives the British of a base and provides the Italians with a new base for assaults of their own. Aden being but 215 miles by air from the captured Somaliland capital of Berbera.—[Aden is closer to Eritrea, Italian before the war.]

3. It frees thousands of Italian and native troops for offensives on other African fronts—in British Kenya, the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Egypt.

Outlet for Ethiopia

4. It impresses the middle-Eastern world, said the Italians, with the decline of Britain's power.

5. It provides Italian Ethiopia with new outlets to the sea, since the Italians plan to build roads from Harar, in Ethiopia, through the conquered Somaliland to the coast.

(Italian rejoicing was generally pooh-poohed by the British. British headquarters in Cairo, Egypt, described it as "an empty victory.")

In a surprise attack on British positions at Gallabat, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, the Italians said, they took prisoners and captured large quantities of munitions.

British Raid Libya

British air raids were reported on Neghelli, Ogadiscio, Bardia, Genale and Derna in Libya. Bombs were said to have struck a hospital in Derna, killing one patient and wounding 22.

The Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, denied British statements that the defenders of Berbera were outnumbered.

He said the British forces totaled 25,000, including the regular garrison of 14,000 plus Rhodesian and Italian troops.

(Early statements of the size of the British forces placed them at 7,000. Today's dispatches from Rome before the Gayda estimate, said the British defenders totaled 17,500.)

Through Service Begun From Here to Coast

Marking the first time airplanes in regular schedule have operated over connecting airlines—similar to through Pullman service on railroads—United Air Lines last night inaugurated coast-to-coast sleeper service without the change of planes formerly necessary at Salt Lake City.

This new service, it was announced, makes it possible to leave Washington on Pennsylvania Central at 6:35 p. m. and connect at Cleveland with United Air Lines' through sleeper plane arriving in Los Angeles at 9:45 p. m.

British Raid Nazi Ports, Factories

—the government took further steps to insure the independent functioning of local defense areas in the event they were isolated.

Emergency administrative machinery to direct traffic in 40 ports, without the necessity of authority from London, were set up.

But it was the long-range British overnight bombers that carried the ball in the air war.

These, said the air ministry, were the scope and results of their offensive:

Rail Facilities Smashed

Bombs dropped in bursts on the hangars and across the landing ground of the military airdrome at Villacoublay, just outside Paris; other French areas bombed as far south as Orleans.

Direct hits on one of two 3,000-ton German transports in the harbor of Haugesund, Norway.

Direct hits on the great German naval base at Kiel, bombs hitting the naval dockyard, the main basin and underground stores of oil.

New raids on the already battered French port of Boulogne; on the airdrome at St. Omer, in northern France; on oil tanks near Bordeaux; on Hanover oil refineries; in the industrial Ruhr and in northwest Germany.

R. A. F. bombers, it was declared, left a 200-foot sheet of flame over Hanover; attacked the Dortmund-Ems and Elbe canals; dislocated rail communications over a wide area.

In these far-ranging actions, three British planes were acknowledged to have been lost.

In the St. Omer bombing, the communique said, the British bombers "found a flare path lighted in readiness for returning Nazi aircraft."

"One Blenheim pilot, mistaken for a German," the communique said, "was signalled to come in and land. He relied with a load of bombs."

During the day the government proudly told Parliament that from August 8 up to last night, the defenders of Britain destroyed 699 German bombers and fighters and lost only 153 of their own fighters.

Send Regrets to Swiss

Dublin, Aug. 20 (AP).—The Department of Defense announced tonight that a German plane had crashed near Cloghane, County Kerry, and that its crew of six, two injured seriously, had been interned.

Thorough Stamp Investigation Predicted by Danaher

Follows Condemnation of Ickes For Offering to Sell 'Gummed' Variety Public Never Was Able to Buy

By William M. Stuart
The Post Stamp Editor

Senator John A. Danaher, of Connecticut, said yesterday that without a doubt the Senate Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads would look most thoroughly into whether laws concerning manufacture and regulation of sales of postage stamps have been violated.

In the Senate on Monday the Senator introduced a resolution calling for a complete investigation relating to imperforate stamps of the special printing of March 15, 1935, that Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes offered for auction in New York for the benefit of refugees.

Senator Danaher declared that stamp collecting should always be free from any questionable dealings. The stamps in question were issued ungummed, and the public has never been able to secure alleged gummed varieties. The Senator is interested in stamp collecting and believes its adherants are entitled to the fullest cooperation of postal authorities in seeing that all collectors shall be able to secure each issue of stamps as issued.

Philatelic quarters have reported the existence of "gummed" varieties of the imperforate ungummed issue of March 15, 1935. However, Postoffice officials have always denied the issuance of these varieties.

"Now Secretary Ickes in his letter to the chancellor of New York Univeristy admits the varieties and suggests they be sold at auction, as stamp clubs in various parts of the country are preparing to hold stamp sales for the benefit of refugees.

In his letter to Henry Woodburn Chase, the chancellor, Secretary Ickes wrote: "The series of blocks of four imperforate park stamps are the so-called Farleys, but with a difference that will be noted. Every stamp collector knows that when the regular issues of park commemoratives were printed there were also printed a small number of imperforate stamps upon the same dies.

"I bought two complete sets of these imperforates that were gummed. I still have one complete set of these gummed imperforates, but the other set I have cut into to some extent in order to send to my stamp-collecting friends.

"So far as the Secretary knows none of the 'gummed' varieties have been sold, but he traded some of these stamps for others that I wanted, but my information is that even the ones so traded have not been sold.

"Accordingly, it will be seen that there were only 200 of each of these gummed imperforates issued. I still have in my possession probably 150 of each denomination."

Senator Danaher considers the "gummed" varieties as illegitimate stamps and that they should be treated as such. As part of his remarks on Monday the Senator used a story in The Post of August 18 regarding the stamps in question.

House Unit Votes 21-to-45 Draft

pending, adopting 60 to 10, a proviso exempting divinity students from draft.

A similar provision was tentatively approved by the House Military Affairs Committee, which also approved the exemption of advanced students in college R. O. T. C. courses, and the deferment of students in the last year in college until the conclusion of their year's course.

Agree on Guard Bill

The Senate-House conference committee on the National Guard mobilization bill reached an agreement on disputed sections and prepared the final draft of the measure. Senate members agreed to a House amendment withdrawing enforcement of the job-guarantee proviso from the National Labor Relations Board. As approved, the bill directs employers to rehire Guardsmen and Reservists after their year of service, but in case of refusal, requires men to go into court to get their jobs back.

Another House amendment directing the discharge of young Guardsmen under 18 was changed to retain the men in the Guard but not mobilize them for service.

Chairman May, in announcing the tentative approval of the draft bill by the House committee, said it was still open to amendment within the committee, but predicted it would be before the House early next week. In providing for the registration of all men 18 through 64, no authorization was made for training those under 21 and over 45. Any service of the younger and older men in "home guards" would be left to later Congressional action.

Senate opposition to the draft forced restriction of the bill in the upper house to the registration and draft of men 21 through 30. Sentiment there at the present time is about evenly divided for and against the Maloney compromise.

Urges a "Cushion"

Taking the floor in support of his plan, Maloney urged its adoption to provide a "cushion against a shock to our national life."

"Millions of people all over the country," he said, "are hopeful that an immediate selective draft bill will not be passed by Congress.

"I admit the potential danger, and even the possibility, of attack, but I am sure the time has not yet arrived to distribute gas masks, plow up the golf courses and build bomb shelters. I am confident that there is at least a little time yet for an orderly and calm procedure.

"I believe we will enlist men under my plan just as fast as the Army can digest them."

Fairfax Arranges 3 More Stations For Bookmobile

Librarian John H. Mehler informed the Fairfax (Va.) County Public Library trustees at the August meeting this week that deposit stations for books have been established in three communities in the county this month through the traveling bookmobile.

Stations are now located at Dunn Loring, Burke, Fairfax, Forestville, Herndon and Woodlawn, and it is the intention of the trustees to establish other stations as rapidly as possible. Persons in other communities who desire to avail themselves of this new library service are asked to communicate with the librarian.

It was also reported that the central administration building will be started as soon as grading has been completed of the property loaned for the purpose by the county.

4-Million Army Held U. S. Need

cause our obligations are scattered in so many directions.

"We will not have complete equipment for sometime to come. Further, we can not at present expand beyond a force of 1,200,000 without destroying our present organizations.

"However, the 1,200,000 with an adequate air force and with the Navy able to assist it, is a reasonable minimum to discourage anyone from attempting to come into the Northern Hemisphere or the Caribbean area."

Admiral Furlong said that a $10,000,000 order for 144 antiaircraft guns required for equipping 28 destroyers had been held up because of manufacturers' unwillingness to take naval orders. He revealed that the Goss Printing Press Co. of Cleveland had withdrawn a bid for the work because five or six subcontractors scheduled to participate had taken other orders.

United States Steel, he stated, wanted to expand an armor-plate factory to furnish special equipment for the Navy, but under the present law would have to amortize it over a long period of years.

"It ought to be amortized in about 5 years," Furlong added, "because they are just putting it up for the Government's special need and for no future business that they can foresee."

Senator Russell, noting that Congress was about to vote on a conscription bill, declared it "unfortunate" that "these people are so much interested in profits that they will not take any contracts with the Navy."

"I guess we will have to conscript business, too," he added.

"When we are going in for a universal service bill," said Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, "we ought to have a universal tax bill, too, and put them all on the same basis."

"We surely should," declared Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware.

The testimony was in connection with the $5,000,000,000 appropriation bill to provide funds for starting a "two-ocean" Navy and equipping an Army of 1,200,000 men. Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the subcommittee in charge, turned over the task of piloting the bill on the floor to Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, declaring the Army and Navy were "going too far" in their demands for defense funds.

Wheeler Replies

In a radio speech last night, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, replied to Rear Admiral William H. Standley and 30 other persons who, Wheeler said, had signed a statement advocating war with Germany.

"This admiral and his 30 fellow 'notables' overlooked one important thing," Wheeler said. "American enthusiasm for war was cooled by the memory of the last war; by the memory of the forty billion dollar back-crushing debt that it piled on them, by the memory of the bones and blood of 126,000 American boys left rotting in France, by the memory of 234,000 other American boys gassed, shell-shocked and shot, who to this day lie in narrow cots in hospitals that dot the land.

"No! admiral—Americans are a little cautious. You can fool them once but not twice with the same old slogans."

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, in another radio speech, said that "virtually every competent authority, including the chief of staff, testify that the volunteer system (of recruiting) is wholly inadequate to meet the problem with which the country is now faced."

Peace Rally Howls Against Draft Bill

Thousand Cheer As Rep. Coffee Hits 'Pay-Triots'

One thousand Washingtonians last night howled their opposition to the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill at a mass meeting in the National Press Club auditorium.

At a rally sponsored by the Washington Peace Mobilization, they shouted and stamped their approval of a Congressman, a labor leader, a college professor and a colored youth leader, who opposed intervention in the European war and denounced "the defense profiteering of industrialists and monopolists."

They were told by Representative John Coffee (Democrat), of Washington, that "industrialists and monopolists are demanding their pound of flesh in advance before accepting millions of dollars in defense orders."

They're "Pay-triots"

"They are patriots," he added, "who spell the word, pay-triotism. They demand that youth accept conscription at $21 a month, but they have showed no willingness to make similar sacrifices.

"They have, in fact, obtained the elimination of competitive bidding on defense orders. They have campaigned for the elimination of the Vinson-Trammel profit limitations. They demand that the Government pay for their plant expansion and they urge the cessation of antitrust prosecutions.

"They seek profits from the blood and sacrifice of American boys."

Coffee and Joseph Curran, president of the C. I. O.'s National Maritime Union, shared a half-hour broadcast from the meeting over a Mutual Broadcasting System hookup.

Challenges Referendum

Curran declared that "conscription in peacetime smacks of involuntary servitude." It is "the first step toward dictatorship," he added, challenging the Administration "to submit the question to a referendum" at the November election.

"Labor in this country is loyal. American workers are patriotic. They will defend their country and its institutions against attack from any source, foreign or domestic."

Curran charged that registration of all men between the ages of 18 and 64, as proposed by the Burke-Wadsworth bill, "contains in it the germs of a universal blacklist to be maintained by the Federal Government for the use of labor-hating, union-baiting corporations."

"No other step," he said, "can give us more impetus toward war than the creating and equipping of a conscript army. As the Railroad Brotherhoods have put it, a huge war machine cannot and will not be allowed to rust in peace."

Hundreds Turned Away

From Dr. Walter Rautenstrauch, a professor of engineering at Columbia University, the audience heard that conscription means "regimentation, the spreading of official propaganda, falsehood and deception."

Police reported that several hundred persons were turned away at the door to prevent overcrowding of the hall. Other speakers included Louis Burnham, executive secretary of the National Negro Congress' youth council; the Rev. Albert F. Harkins, of Alexandria, Va., and Frances Williams, administrative secretary of the American Youth Congress.

Casey Indicted After Woman Charges Attack

Ex-Convict Declared Identified by Victim; Faces 15-Year Term

John James Casey, 29, whose 11-year police record includes convictions on charges of larceny, assault and highway robbery, was indicted by the District grand jury yesterday on a charge of attempting to criminally attack Mrs. Josephine Graham, 37, 605 Girard street northeast, on the Franklin street bridge the night of August 10.

Casey would face a prison term of as much as 15 years, if convicted.

Mrs. Graham told police officers that Casey was the man who knocked her down and hammered her head against the pavement the night of August 10.

The assailant fled when Benjamin E. Caricofe, 2825 Fifth street northeast, heard Mrs. Graham's screams and went to her rescue with a tire tool. Col. T. L. Rhoads, Army Aide to 2 Presidents, Dies Boyertown, Pa., Aug. 20 (AP).—Lieut. Col. Thomas L. Rhoads, 70, who was military aide to Presidents Taft and Wilson and personal physician to the former, died at his home here today. He suffered a heart attack August 15.

Col. Rhoads entered the Army as a contract surgeon in 1898. He subsequently served as adjutant and chief surgeon at Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, as head of the Army Hospital San Francisco, and as chief surgeon at the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Twice stationed in the Philippines, he became acquainted with former President Taft while the latter was serving as Governor of the islands. Rhoads was named by President Taft as his military aide.

President Wilson retained Rhoads as his aide until the United States entered the World War. Then Rhoads became chief surgeon of the First Army, A. E. F.

5 Plane Makers Say They'll Build, Then Talk Profits

Presidents of five airplane manufacturing companies said in a statement last night that they were "ready to build airplanes first and talk about profits afterward," and that in the last ten weeks they had made large expenditures to prepare for increased production for national defense.

The statement was issued by Donald W. Douglas, of the Douglas Aircraft Co.; Robert E. Gross, of the Lockheed Aircraft Co.; P. J. Johnson, of the Boeing Airplane Co.; R. W. Millar, of Vultee Aircraft, Inc., and R. H. Fleet, of Consolidated Aircraft.

Police Rescue Man From River

Harbor police rescued a middle-aged man from the Potomac last night after he plunged into the water at Haines Point with the remark that "I'm tired of it all."

Sergt. E. J. Shelton and Private H. N. Johnson, patrolling in a motor boat, saw the man take off his coat and start toward the water. They came ashore and attempted to dissuade him from jumping in, but he broke away from them and dived into the river.

They pulled him out with a hook and took him to Gallinger Hospital for observation.

Crazed Slayer Of Mother Is Committed

Jerome Howard, 25-year-old dementia praecox victim who hid for days like a frantic animal in the darkened house with body of his slain mother, was committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital yesterday.

Justice David A. Pine signed the order after the District grand jury reported that it would not indict Howard for his mother's death. Thus closed the court record on the bizarre murder of Mrs. Bessie Howard, 66, which was discovered last March 30 by reporters from The Post.

The newspapermen investigated suspicions of sinister happenings at the Howard home, 815 Taylor street northwest, after neighbors became uneasy. Huddled in the house, clutching nearly $1,000 in bills and a loaded .32 caliber revolver, was Jerome Howard. In her bedroom, with her throat cut and a rusty kitchen knife near her body, was the man's mother. Upon a nearby table was one of her son's books, open at a marked passage, which read: "If I had a blade of keenest steel . . ."

Speaking in a broken and dazed fashion which indicated his psychosis, the man told the investigators that "they" made him kill his mother.

After the man had been in Gallinger Hospital several months, Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert advised District Attorney Edward M. Curran that Howard was "totally out of touch with his surroundings, dull, childish" and so deteriorated mentally as to require constant care and supervision. Dr. Gilbert said the man, who previously was in a Colorado institution, was a dementia praecox sufferer of long standing. Dr. Amino Perretti, also of Gallinger, confirmed the report.

Bound Body Found In Detroit River May Be D. C. Man

Relatives of Rudolph Lindner, 32, of 3801 Wheeler road southeast, left Washington yesterday for Detroit to view the body of a man found yesterday in the Detroit River, shackled hand and foot.

Detroit authorities tentatively identified the body as that of Lindner, who had been vacationing at a camp in northern Michigan, the Associated Press reported. Due back at work yesterday at the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., where he was a stenographer, Lindner failed to return. Lindner's brother, Fred, and brother-in-law, Floyd Pelley, were expected in Detroit today.

Lindner, a bachelor, was born in Washington. He was graduated from McKinley High School.

Mrs. Schlosberg was a member of the Adas Israel Synagogue, the Eastern Star, the Haddassah, B'nai B'rith and the Jewish Consumptive Relief Society. She was a lifelong resident of Washington.

Survivors are sons, Morris and Leo Scholsberg; sisters, Mrs. Joseph Levy and Mrs. Anna Bernstein; brothers, Charles and Max Rosenthal, and two grandchildren, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p. m. tomorrow at the Danzansky funeral home, 3501 Fourteenth street northwest, with burial in Adas Israel Cemetery.

Robber of Cafe Near Headquarters Gets 5½ Years

William H. O'Brien, 35, who robbed the Courthouse Coffee Shoppe, only a few yards from police headquarters, was sentenced in the District Court yesterday to serve 5½ to 15 years in prison.

O'Brien pleaded guilty to seven indictments, which charged a total of 19 crimes. Justice David A. Pine ordered that O'Brien serve his sentences on the seven indictments one after the other.

Parents Warned Of Fake Agents

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday issued a warning to parents of adolescent daughters not to permit men posing as health department agents to enter the home without proper identification.

He said a man posing as a department physician last Thursday entered a home in the Northwest section while the parents were absent. The girls reported the man said he wanted to "find out if they were good girls." The girls are 12 and 14. He examined the 14-year-old girl, but no assault was attempted. Police are seeking the impostor.

3 Episcopal Clergymen Get New Posts

Curate at St. John's To Become Vicar In College Park

Three Episcopal clergymen in the Washington area soon will depart for new posts.

The Rev. Nathaniel C. Acton, curate of historic St. John's Episcopal "Church of the Presidents," Lafayette square, since February, 1939, has resigned to become vicar of St. Andrew's Chapel, College Park, Md., effective September 8.

The Rev. Gresham Marmiom, assistant to the rector of St. Alban's Parish, Mount St. Albans, next month will become rector of St. George's Parish, Port Arthur, Tex.

The Rev. Robert J. Gibson, for five years rector of St. John's Church, Accokeek, Md., and prominent figure in the department of religious education, the Washington Diocese, has resigned to join the staff of historic Trinity Episcopal Church, New York City.

The Rev. Raymond E. Fuessle, rector of the Church of the Resurrection, Greenwood, S. C., will become new assistant at St. Alban's, effective September 1. Graduate of the Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, and New York University, he served several pastoral posts in Brazil early in his career, returning to America in 1937.

The Rev. Mr. Gibson's duties as one of Trinity's curates will include work at St. Paul's Chapel, at Broadway and Fulton street, part of Trinity Parish. He also will be instructor in sacred studies at Trinity School for Boys and St. Agatha's School for Girls.

200 Mothers Arrive to Fight Conscription Bill

More than 200 American mothers, hailing from 15 States of the Union, converged on Washington yesterday to urge their Congressmen to vote against the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill.

They came in answer to the call of the Silver Star Mothers and the Mothers of the U. S. A., and they toured the Capitol, and the House and Senate Office buildings to echo the cry, "I do not want my boy to be a soldier."

According to Mrs. Rule Brubaker, of Baltimore, a leader of the Silver Star Mothers, their purpose is not so much to oppose the principle of conscription, but "to fight this particular bill and its disruptive effects upon American life."

Rep. Barton Calls Hitler 'Savior' Of 3d-Term Move

Representative Bruce Barton (Republican), of New York, last night chided President Roosevelt for his "rough" treatment of Adolf Hitler who, he said, "saved him" and made possible a third-term nomination.

Speaking to an overflow audience of 350 at a meeting of the Willkie-McNary Campaign Club in the Willard room of the Willard Hotel, the former advertising executive declared:

"Roosevelt is very rough on Hitler considering what he did for him."

The Chief Executive was nearly out of the 1940 Presidential picture, "when Hitler advanced on Paris and saved him," Barton said.

Bigger Staff Is Sought By Oehmann

More Inspectors Needed, He Says; Files Budget Asking $264,260

Declaring his small staff of building inspectors is unable to insure safe construction, Col. John W. Oehmann yesterday asked the Commissioners to provide three additional inspectors and three more clerks for the building department, in his 1942 budget estimates.

The total budget submitted by the director of inspection is $264,260, an increase of $10,500 over the present appropriation.

Two electrical inspectors, provided under the second deficiency bill of 1940, would be made permanent. Col. Oehmann reported that increase in required electrical inspection during the past few years had made it impossible for the regular force to keep up with current work.

Although the budget estimates show only a $10,000 increase over last year, the $7,000 salary paid Capt. Hugh P. Oram, who resigned several weeks ago, would be used to pay for several of the proposed inspectors.

One of the additional building inspectors would be assigned to the fire escape section, which Oehmann states is "inadequate." At present the staff includes a chief inspector and two inspectors, who are required to make about 5,000 license inspections yearly, in addition to those reported by the fire marshal and other agencies.

Each of the 11 men now on the building inspection force is carrying about 300 jobs. This means each job can be visited about once every 15 days, on the basis of 20 inspections a day. If some jobs are visited more often, the others must suffer, Col. Oehmann said.

Although the value of construction work in the District has more than doubled between 1933 and 1940, the number of the inspection force has been increased by only five men, Col. Oehmann said.

Capital News In Brief

Concealed Tear Gas Guns Barred in D. C.

Sale and possession of "pencil or pocket" tear gas guns was outlawed last night by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, in an order to his commanding officers.

Brown's action came as a result of the receipt of a letter from District Attorney Edward M. Curran in which the prosecutor said such instruments are governed by the "concealed weapon" statute.

Legal Holiday Proposed On Lincoln Birthday

Lincoln's birthday would be made a legal holiday in the District under the provisions of a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois.

The measure proposes to amend the District code to include February 12 among the legal holidays in the National Capital.

Dredging Measure Reported Favorably

The House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee yesterday reported favorably a bill which authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to exchange dredging privileges for land deeds along the Mount Vernon Memorial highway.

The Smoot Sand & Gravel Corporation, under the terms of the bill, would deed 283.5 acres of land altogether to the Government in exchange for the right to dredge 85 acres of Federal land along the Potomac 800 feet off the boulevard.

11,000-Volt Wire Kills Man in Leap on Train

Louis Rounds, 42, colored, of 372 H street southwest, was electrocuted on track 13 at Union Station yesterday after leaping to the roof of a car of a Chicago train.

Assistant Station Master Clarence R. Swain told police that he saw Rounds on the roof of a Baltimore & Ohio shed and yelled:

"Lookout! Don't touch those wires!"

Rounds turned and ran, he said, then jumped to the roof of the Chicago-bound train, touching an 11,000-volt high-tension wire. There was a flash and a loud report, and Rounds rolled unconcious to the ground, as two trainmen broke his fall by trying to catch him.

Rounds died at Casualty Hospital three hours later.

Liquor Store Robbed

Two armed robbers held up a liquor store at 1114 Eighth street southeast last night and escaped with $35 and a pint of whisky.

New Jefferson High School To Be Ready for Fall Term

NEW AND OLD—The outmoded Jefferson Junior High School (top) at Sixth and D streets southwest, and the modern Jefferson Junior High School (lower), at Seventh and H streets southwest

Thomas Jefferson Memorial Junior High School, an $800,000 building at Seventh and H streets southwest, will be ready for occupancy at the opening of the school term, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, announced yesterday.

The contract calls for completion of the structure September 5.

The new building will replace a school erected in 1872 at Sixth and D streets southwest. It is designed to be a community center as well as school, with a separate entrance leading to the auditorium and gymnasiums so they may be used at night by residents of the section. A recreation area is being prepared in front of the building.

A library to be conducted under supervision of the board of the Washington Public Library is included.

The school equipment puts emphasis on manual arts for the boys and homemaking courses for the girls. This is because in many instances the pupils' schooling terminates at Jefferson.

In the old school railroad tracks and heavy traffic were safety hazards, and noise of the trains was so loud that the children had learned to stop automatically in the middle of recitations and wait for them to pass.

When a speaker addressed the school, a corps of boys stood at the back of the assembly room, ready to close the windows when a train came and to open them after it had gone by. One speaker noticed that the girls in the audience would occasionally emit little squeals and giggle in the midst of her talk. She thought at first her remarks were amusing them, but later learned that the old chairs were so wobbly the girls were apt to get pinched in them when they moved.

Despite the age of the building, its inadequate equipment and the disadvantages of its location, fine work was done there, Mrs. Doyle declared.

D. C. to Get More Buses, Street Cars

Capital Transit Files Expansion Plan With P. U. C.; To Cost $1,650,000

A $1,650,000 transit program, including the purchase of 115 buses and 35 street cars to meet demands of increased population because of the defense program, was forwarded yesterday to the Public Utilities Commission by E. D. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co.

The defense program as well as the expected utilization of factory capacity in furtherance of that program, have made it necessary to plan for additional street cars and buses in advance of the time when such purchases would normally be made, Merrill reported.

Local banks would finance the purchase of the cars and buses, with the exception of three buses which the company proposed to pay for with cash.

Up at Next Meeting

The proposals will be considered at the next meeting of the P. U. C.

Merrill said in his letter to the commission that orders have been placed for 60 buses to be delivered beginning next month, delivery to be completed by October 1. The company also requested authorization for the purchase of 35 new streetcars of the Presidents Conference Committee type.

The transit president said plans for normal replacement and additions to the fleet of buses call for the purchase of 55 buses next year, but the company considers it desirable to placeorders for this equipment within the next two or three months for delivery early in 1941.

Terms of Bank Loan

Terms of the proposed bank loan would provide the company with $750,000 on or about November 1, this amount being required for payment of the 57 buses already ordered, and for street car trucks and wheels; and the remainder, $888,000, is to be borrowed on or about February 1, 1941, for payment of able to place orders for this equip-

Of the first amount borrowed, 25 per cent, or $187,500, is to be repaid within four days, and the remainder in ten equal semiannual installments beginning January 1.

Of the amount borrowed February 1, the company would pay 25 per cent, or $221,500, within four days, and the remainder in ten equal semiannual installments beginning July 1, 1941.

Winning Sweeps Ticket Not Needed to Have Fun

'Lucky Partners' Gives Old Plot New Twist; 'Howards of Virginia' Promises Solid Worth; This, That and the Other About the Theater

IF ONE WERE TO BE GIVEN an advance peek at "Lucky Partners"—as it is being bruited about some have been—he would discover the suave and polished Ronald Colman in one of his more whimsical moods and Ginger Rogers making renewed progress as a light comedienne who need not necessarily dance to leave a considerable impression upon her audience.

BELL

There is something of the flavor of "My Favorite Wife" in the ingredients that have been poured into "Lucky Partners." The piece gets under way a little slowly and just a little nebulously, with something about a sweepstakes ticket and what will be done by an engaged young lady and her accidental partner in the venture should they win all that money. As a matter of fact, they don't win it, but the intended husband of the youthful adventuress sells her half of the ticket for $6,000, which forms a fair financial basis for the purely "impersonal" trip that has been planned as a weird experiment in unconventional romance.

The going, through this part of the film, is a trifle stodgy at times, but once all concerned are haled into court, there emerges something a bit novel in extra-curricular love. This is due in large measure to the unique temper of the presiding judge and in part to the deftness of the accused, each acting as his or her own attorney. The veteran character actor Harry Davenport is nicely cast as the judicial comedian, but, despite his skill, one somehow wishes it might have been the late Granville Bates presiding over a trial as bizarre as the one he distinguished in "My Favorite Wife" and later in "Private Affairs." It is nice going, most of the way, even so.

Last minute advices are to the effect that "Lucky Partners" will open Friday morning on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, following two weeks of "The Boys From Syracuse's" farcical hilarity. It is worth passing note—as seems to be true in the case of every comedy of recent release—that the Will H. Hays office still was exercising its tin ear when much of the dialogue in "Lucky Partners" eluded the blue pencil.

If a large and handsome bound volume just to hand is to be taken at its face value, "The Howards of Virginia" will be one of the notable releases of the season. This is the Frank Lloyd production for Columbia, upon which Cary Grant and Martha Scott, supported by a distinguished cast, were at work so long not so far away. It is not to be confused with "Virginia," the Paramount film for which location shots recently were completed down around Charlottesville, with Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll heading the cast. "The Howards of Virginia" is the one based on "The Tree of Liberty," by Elizabeth Page, with screen play by Sidney Buchman. Mr. Buchman, it will be recalled, was the scenarist also of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington"—which need not of necessity be held against him. He seems to have turned out an inspiring patriotic work for Mr. Lloyd.

"Sweeney in the Trees," a new play by William Saroyan, will be tried out at the Cape Theater, Cape May, N. J., next week, beginning Tuesday and continuing through Saturday. Julie Haydon and Martin Blaine will be seen in the leading roles. Mr. Saroyan set himself a stiff pace last season by garnering practically all the important first prizes there were to be had for brilliant dramaturgy. And what might the new title signify, exactly?

That "walking globe" stunt, one of the most popular routines ever presented on the Earle stage by the indefatigable Roxyettes, will be revived in revised form for the new stage revue opening Friday on Thirteenth street. Many patrons will remember the difficult time one "dizzy blonde" seemed to have in keeping her own individual globe under control. In case you wish to pay personal tribute to a fine display of comic talent, that young woman was Babs Robertson.

After a five-week engagement at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, in Chicago, Horace Heidt has arrived in his native California with his 30-piece orchestra to inaugurate a motion picture career under the aegis of James Roosevelt. Heidt's "Pot o' Gold" program, that recently proved so popular on the stage at Loew's Capitol, will form the nucleus of a Roosevelt production to be released through United Artists.

What's-in-a-Name Note

Would it be too much to suggest that the genial maestro is at the Heidt of his career? I was afraid it would be!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Aug. 20.

"Love Thy Neighbor" set is the screwiest in town, what with Jack Benny, and his writers, Rochester, his stand-in, valet, and chauffeur, Mary Martin with stand-in, maid, secretary, make-up man, and hair dresser, —Fred Allen, with a sharpened pencil and sharper wit. The other day Jack was taking padding out of his pajama shoulders—"Not because I don't need it—I just think it's silly." His dressing gown looked like one of Bing Crosby's horse blankets. Director Mark Sandrich was doing a parade of hats—he has a mania about them. I accused him of having a dash of Dache, because he looks over hundreds of hats, then says, "I know what I want—that's not it."

HOPPER

Which reminds me of the battle Dietrich and Lubitsch had years ago over a bonnet she wanted to wear in a scene at the Ascot races. She liked a turned-up hale trimmed with $200 worth of paradise feathers. Ernest didn't think an English lady would wear it. A garden hat was what he wanted. Bonnets were flown from all corners of the globe. John Fredericks happened to be in town. He worked straight through the night, did six. What she wore was the garden hat ! ! !

How different now! If she wants special flowers, she pays for them . . .

But how the fur used to fly. La Dietrich once wanted a certain sable coat. Shoulders were too broad. It was ripped apart, made over, then cast aside. Same thing happened to an ermine one. They tore their hair over her shenanigans. Now they're blessing her, because if they hadn't bought the furs then, they wouldn't have any now.

Yep, Kay Francis actually milks Elsie—and gets to the studio at 8 a. m. for her milking lesson.

And Jimmy Lydon, in the same picture, "Little Men," has become so proficient that when Elsie kicked him off the stool, he didn't spill a drop of milk. Elsie's temperamental and won't work without Beulah. And it takes four men to keep the calf out of a scene, but within Elsie's vision.

Elsie, not Kay, gets 300 fan letters a day, and has a special writer to answer them—Louis Sobol's sister, Janet.

When 4-year-old Richard Nichols had to do a prayer in same picture, he was sleepy—they just couldn't get it right. So finally, after the sixth take, he said, "God bless Mamma, Papa, sister, Little Buttercup, the Lone Ranger, and him (meaning the donkey)—Amen." Can you imagine a blessing for the Lone Ranger in 1877?

After Kay Francis had carried Richard in and out of a scene six times, she cracked (in more ways than one), "In the last take, I felt like I was carrying Andy Devine."

Did you know that in Laguna Beach the natives call themselves "Lagunatics?"

George Burns and Gracie Allen have been told that two of the thousands of unnamed lakes in Minnesota will be named after them. Gracie says she's going to build a bridge over her lake, and another bridge a hundred yards before you get to it, so that she can cross her bridge before she comes to it!

These Four Probably Would Boom Any Town!

SPENCER TRACY, HEDY LAMARR, CLAUDETTE COLBERT, CLARK GABLE, a quartet of reigning popularity that will be seen in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Boom Town," coming to the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, following "I Love You Again," the current William Powell-Myrna Loy vehicle. "Boom Town" is a celluloid gusher of the oil fields, alive with action

The New Yorker

(Errol Flynn, screen star, is today's guest columnist for Leonard Lyons, who is on vacation.)

WHEN I WAS informed by a publicity man that I was to write a guest column for Leonard Lyons, I tried the usual dodge of pleading that I had nothing to write about. "I have a terrific idea," the informer suggested. "Why not write about the subject that is closest to every man's heart—whiskers! You ought to be an authority on that subject, because, after all, 'The Sea Hawk' is the third consecutive picture in which you display your hirsuteness."

ERROL FLYNN.

I MADE the mistake of asking him what could be said about whiskers except that they were inevitable. "There are millions of sensational facts!" he replied impatiently. "Why, do you realize that if all the beards worn by the actors in 'The Sea Hawk' were laid chin to chin, they'd reach ten miles? It's a new record! Not since 'King of Kings' have so many chin-pieces been worn in a motion picture. .

"AN INTERESTING fact," he continued, "is that the hair for the galley slaves' beards came from the yak, a cross-word puzzle animal that thrives in Tibet. The yak is born with prematurely white locks that's marvelous for artificial beards and cheaper than human hair. Also, Mike Curtiz, who directed 'The Sea Hawk,' made the extras shave of their real beards and wear artificial whiskers, because on the screen, real beards don't look as legitimate as the ones glued on by the make-up department. When Edward G. Robinson played Dr. Ehrlich, he wore a pink beard. That's what made it shade into the contours of his face so realistically."

"I'VE BEEN TOLD," I interrupted, "that a column isn't considered interesting unless it's it's filled with names." It takes more than that, though, to discourage a publicity man! He went right on, "What's tough about that? Tell some intimate gossip about your friends and their whiskers. Say that Basil Rathbone is known among Hollywood barbers as a "three-stroke man," because his face is so straight and narrow they can shave him in three strokes; that it takes longer to shave Edward Arnold than any actor in Hollywood because his face has the largest area of beard. Hollywood's two-a-day shavers are Robert Taylor, Gregory Ratoff, Cesar Romero, Chester Morris and the Marx Brothers—and William Gargan and Charles Bickford have to shave three times a day! The late Douglas Fairbanks, sr., had the fastest growing beard within man's memory. He could grow a full-length beard in four days.

THAT WAS the limit! I decided to finish him off then and there. "People aren't interested in that sort of trivia in these times," I sneered. "They only want to read about the international big-wig" . . . "So," he countered, not the least bit ruffled, "you can write about the shaving idiosyncracies of the great. Prof. Albert Sinstein shaves while sitting in the bathtub, and instead of shaving cream, he lathers with the same soap he uses for bathing. When Mussolini is shaved by a barber the barber gets strict orders not to talk. Mussolini, who was very jealous of the late Italo Balbo, said that 'Whiskers are a sign of decadence' . . . Everybody's interested right now in the British navy. You could tell about the regulation that if a man grows a mustache, he must also grow a beard, and vice versa. If a British sailor wants to have any hair on his face, he must grow it all over his face or not at all.

ONE LAST, desparate effort! "It all sounds very interesting," I fibbed. "But there isn't enough of it to fill a whole column" . . . "The trouble with you actors is you have no ingenuity," the publicity man sneered. "You can puff up the column with miscellaneous tid-bits like these. The reason why Napoleon was clean-shaven was because he once tried to grow a beard but he couldn't make the grade . . . Abraham Lincoln loved to experiment with his beard. He was always shaving it off and growing it back again in a different pattern . . . Buffalo Bill Cody once engaged a man in a duel because the heckler claimed he looked like a goat with his tiny chin beard . . . Eccentric James Gordon Bennett, who was editor of the New York Herald, used to invite people aboard his yacht for a pleasure cruise and suddenly, while out at sea, issue a command that all his guests appear on deck within a certain time with naked faces. And the chagrined guests would have to shave off whiskers, burnsides and mustaches.

Famous Duo Chose Titles In Jig Time

Towne and Baker Used Up Half-Hour Planning Schedule

By Alexander Kahn

Hollywood, Aug. 20 (U.P.).—Those clowning, fun-loving writers, Gene Towne and Graham Baker, who for years had listened to producers wail about the lack of good movie material, proved that these laments were just poppycock by digging up in 20 minutes enough ideas for three films.

And not only did they find the subjects for the pictures, but they are producing them. Two of the pictures have been completed and the third is now being shot.

A little more than a year ago Towne and Baker decided they would become producers. For years this team had been turning out stories for hit pictures at fancy prices. But they got tired of seeing their ideas distorted, their lines given to actors they considered inferior. So they formed their own company and called it "The Play's the Thing Productions Co." Because they participated in the financing, Towne and Baker had little trouble getting a distribution outlet. But let Graham Baker, the more subdued partner, tell the story.

Stalled for Time

"Gene and I thought we would have plenty of time to pick stories of our pictures and had not even started to think about them when one day last spring we got an urgent call from RKO—Radio asking us the titles of the films we intended making for them to release. We stalled by saying that we were not definitely decided on which of a group of films we would make.

"The studio executive would not be stalled. He said that distributors of their pictures were holding a convention and he had to tell them what Towne and Baker would make for the following season. We finally got a half-hour of grace to make our decision.

"Gene and I looked at each other. What to do? So we rushed down to the public library. 'What are the most widely read classics?' We asked a librarian. She produced a list. We sat down and studied it. The top fiction work was 'Swiss Family Robinson.' We wrote it down. Another at the head of the list was 'Tom Brown at Rugby.' That also was added to our list. Some of those listed had been done before, so we eliminated them. But one of the most popular works to this day was 'Little Women.' It had geen made, so we had an inspiration to do 'Little Men,' almost as widely read and by the same author, Louisa M. Alcott.

"We turned the three names in to the studio official within the allotted 30 minutes and then it was up to us to make good."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 20 (INS).—George Raft and his bosses at Warner Brothers are battling. He has expressed an unwillingness to accept the lead in "South of Suez" which they have ready for him. Hal Wallis said today if George does not report for work he will refuse to let him play opposite Norma Shearer in "The World We Make" at M-G-M. George up to now has said, "no," with a capital "N," to Warners' request that he accept the role assigned him.

PARSONS

Hal did some tall scurrying about today. He had given RKO his verbal promise that Dennis Morgan would play opposite Ginger Rogers in "Kitty Foyle," but when George bowed out he had to beg RKO to release Dennis.

Good news to Hollywood lovers of the theater, when "Tonight at 8:30" closes it will be followed by "Melo," Henri Bernstein's famous play. Those finished actors, Vivien Leigh and Charles Boyer, will be starred and arrangements are now being made for Garson Kanin to direct the play.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Lucille Fairbanks was a busy girl receiving the good wishes of many friends on her engagement to Owen Crump. The date is October. She is a niece of the late Douglas Fairbanks and he is a writer at Warners and was once Isabel Jewell's heart; Clayton Moore, whom Lupe Velez introduced to Hollywood, eloped yesterday and married pretty Mary Francis at Las Vegas; when Alvin York reaches here Thursday he will check in at Warners and work with Jesse Lasky on the whim of his life.

Cole Porter played every one of his eight catchy song numbers that will be in "Panama Hattie" at the Charlie Feldmans. What a party, with Noel Coward and Howard Sturgis just back from France as the guests of honor; Grace Moore, who came here for the Hollywood Bowl Concert, dropped in with the Richard Barthelmesses. Elsa Liz Whitney had as her house guest Thomas Fortune Ryan 2d; Martha Scott and Carlton Alsop, now an item, at the house of Murphy at a tete-a-tete dinner.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

Keltner Bats Tribe to 11-6 Edge Over Red Sox

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Ordinarily, the name of the world's best golfer is known when the last cards are turned in at the annual P. G. A. tournament, because the winner has just succeeded in winning the toughest tournament of 'em all, but such may not be the case this year.

POVICH

Only with reservations can this year's winner in the tournament slated to start at Hershey, Pa., next week, be acclaimed as the Nation's No. 1 golfer. He will not have beaten Lawson Little, the national open champion, who is barred from the P. G. A. on a flimsy technicality.

Little will be on the sidelines because he doesn't hold a union card in the P. G. A. The pros are jealous of their profession, and they bar upstart amateurs until they have completed five years of apprenticeship as pros. Little is in his fourth year as a pro. But despite his failure to hold a card he is every inch as much as pro, in the common conception of the term, as any of the grizzled veterans of the P. G. A.

The P. G. A. pros are keeping Little out even though it costs them perhaps several thousand dollars at the gate. The swaggering Little and his National Open title are that much of an attraction. He would be one of the top favorites off his open triumph when he met much of the same field in medal play and licked 'em.

It is understandable, though, why the P. G. A. doesn't let the bars down. Theirs is as much of a mutual benefit association as any union. A P. G. A. card entitles the holder to insurance benefits, and there are other advantages that accrue. P. G. A. pros buy and sell P. G. A. golf balls at a profit far exceeding that of non-P. G. A. pros, and in other small ways they earn emoluments.

There is, of course, no guarantee that Little would win the tournament, but as long as he must be regarded as a distinctly possible winner, the 1940 P. G. A. champion's crown will scarcely ring true this year.

We started off by saying that the annual P. G. A. affair is the toughest tournament of 'em all, but we acknowledge that there may be some dissent. The National Open, which Little won, has essentially the same field plus a sprinkling of amateurs, but the Open is a medal play event and the P. G. A. is head-to-head, or match play. The latter type of tournament has always seemed the harder competitive test. The P. G. A. imposes a 7-day strain on the competitor in contrast to the three-day National Open.

Wiffy Cox, the Congressional Club pro, never has liked match play which is probably one reason why he has never survived beyond the first round of the P. G. A. tourney in five attempts. Cox points out that in the Shawnee P. G. A. tourney two years ago when he was playing Johnny Revolta, his every drive was down the middle while Revolta failed to hit a single fairway with his drives. "Yet Revolta beat me, 4 and 3," said Cox. "He couldn't have done it in medal play."

Match play, unlike medal play, rings in a psychological factor in which a golfer is always aware of the task that faces him inasmuch as he can scarcely fail to note his opponent's shots. He is continually in competition, unlike the medal player who doesn't know until the finish whether a good shot has brought him an advantage or a bad shot has proven costly. Match play affords the golfer a chance to match his opponent's best shot on the spot, or to take advantage of a poor one.

This P. G. A. tournament might have been Little's dish. He has been a superb match play golfer despite the fact he won his open at medal play. He won his two national amateurs and his two British amateurs at match play.

There are match play specialists and medal specialists. Ralph Guldahl, two-time winner of the open, has never come close to winning the match-play P. G. A. Shooting against par, Guldahl is a remarkable golfer. Shooting in match play against an opponent he can see and hear, Guldahl cannot muster his best game.

Denny Shute is the antithesis. Shute excels at match play. He won the P. G. A. in 1936 and repeated in 1937 and was runner-up on another occasion. In those two years he was probably the greatest golfer in the world, but he has been a notorious flop on medal-play winter golf circuit, excepting the match play pro-amateur, where he finished on top.

Unlike the medal play National Open, no run-of-the-mine golfer ever won the P. G. A. Sam Parks, an obscure Pittsburgh pro, was able to win the open in 1935, but for the next four years he couldn't win a tournament. And in 1936, Tony Manero, certainly not a great golfer, was able to win the National Open. Nobody less than a great golfer can win the P. G. A. according to the history of the tournament. The only time any suspicion attached to the ability of a P. G. A. winner was in 1931 when Tom Creavy scored an upset victory. Creavy has accomplished little since, but not generally known is the fact that his health broke after his victory. In 1931, the pros will tell you, Creavy actually was a superb golfer.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 20.—Never a slacker, when there was toil to attend to, Buck Newsom now comes forth with a suggestion that may cause his less-industrious colleagues to blackball him out of the union.

CONSIDINE

"If we're as close to that pennant in the last two weeks of the season as we are today," Buck told us today at the Yankee Stadium, "I'm offering to pitch not only every other day—like they say Feller is going to do—I'm offering to pitch every day. Start or relief; don't make no difference. Just leave me in there."

We suggested to Detroit's favorite son from Hartsville, S. C., that such a campaign might hurt his arm.

"Pooh," Newsom said. "I never had a sore arm and I don't ever expect to have one. Only time I'm ever out of there is when I break a finger or a laig. Happens every year, just when I get going. But I come back. I always finish up well in the fall.

"Remember down in Washington. I came there from the Browns with six losses and no wins. I beat the White Sox, 10-0, in my first game for Washington, and knew I had my stuff. Then Averill broke my laig, but I finished up the season with 11 wins.

"Only other time I ever set on the bench for a long time without something broken was the year when one of the teams I played on kept me on the bench so's they wouldn't have to pay me a bonus for winning so many."

We steered Buck back to his seven-day week program.

"I could do it," he swore. "I could do it because I'm a pitcher; I'm not just a thrower like a certain fellow on that Cleveland team. I pitch 'em in there with my back and shoulder and everything else. He pitches them in there with his elbow and wrist. I ain't saying who."

Denny Carroll, the eminent trainer of the Tigers, spoke up: "If you're talking about Feller, I think you're right. The way he throws a ball takes a lot out of him. I doubt if he could do double duty, without hurting himself."

Newsom displayed his latest break, the thumb on his right hand. "She's healing up pretty good, but you can see she's still swollen," he said. "Y' know, I felt worse about this one than all them other breaks I had. I know I could'a broke that 16-straight record. Like Bucky Harris said ot me, 'Buck,' he said, 'I guarantee this much: if you ever win that sixteenth and then go out for the seventeenth, you'll win it and break that record, no matter who you're pitching against.' Great manager, that Harris."

Newsom won't have much trouble reaching the 20-victory mark for the third year in succession. Even with his sick-bay interruption he has won 15. But, as enthused as he can become over his own undeniable ability to throw a baseball, the year will be a kind of disappointment to him.

This spring at Lakeland, Fla., we asked Buck if he expected to win 20 again and Buck said, "Maybe . . ." We thought for a moment that we had caught him red-handed in the first bashful reply of his career. But Buck hadn't finished. He said, "I was going to say, maybe 30."

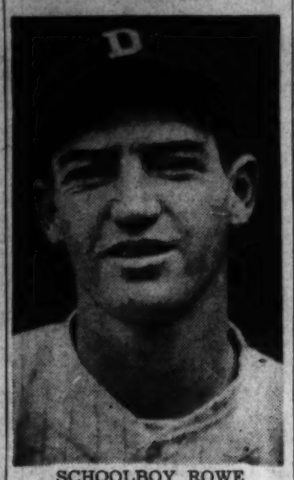
And he might have done it at that, without that broken thumb.

We walked over to the quiet Yankee dressing room. Joe DiMaggio was sitting in front of his locker, smoking a cigarette. We asked him if it felt any different to be with a loser. (Editor's note: Watch 'em go, now!) inasmuch as Joe has been with a pennant-winning team for the last five years—four with the Yanks and one with San Francisco.

"It's no different," he said. "You still get out there and swing. There's just no way to account for it. When you're winning everything goes great. Your hits find a hole, and their's go foul. When you're losing it's just the opposite."

We asked him if he had conceded his batting championship yet. "Heck no," he retorted. "I've still got a good chance to win it. I've always fallen off in the fall. Like last fall. But I've usually had a good streak right before that. Maybe I'll come up with it soon. I mean days when you get four-for-five or three-for-four. I'm due. But, y' know, I've been pretty lucky at that. I've gotten one hit in a lot of games this year. You're okay if you get a hit, particularly this time of year. If you get a hit in four trips you only drop a point. But if you don't you drop three or four points."

Rowe's Injury Gives Yankees Pair of Runs



SCHOOLBOY ROWE

Tiger Hurler Loses Ball in Collision With George Selkirk

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, Detroit Tiger pitcher, who hurried to New York from his mother's bedside in St. Louis to pitch the first game of today's double-header with the New York Yankees, was injured in the second inning in a collision with George Selkirk, Yank outfielder.

After fielding a bunt by Frankie Crosetti, Rowe tried to take Selkirk, who was scoring from third base and was knocked unconscious by the impact.

After several minutes Rowe resumed pitching. Selkirk scored on the play, as did Babe Dahlgren when the ball rolled away from the unconscious Rowe. Selkirk had walked and Dahlgren doubled to get on base.

Grimes' Ban Is Upheld By Committee

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 20.—One-year suspension of Burleigh Grimes from organized baseball on a charge that he spat in an umpire's face was upheld today by the executive committee of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues.

GRIMES

The former star "spit-ball" hurler for the Brooklyn Dodgers denied the accusation that on July 21 he spat at Umpire Robert Williams in a Michigan State League game, but the committee announced it had accepted the testimony of Williams and other witnesses.

Grimes, manager of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) team, has the right of an appeal to Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis, final arbiter of professional baseball, since the decision involves more than $300 in salary.

The committee's action upheld a ruling by W. G. Bramham, president of the National Association.

Leonard Faces Browns' Southpaw In Series Finale

Facing a new threat to their sixth-place berth from the Browns, now only 2½ games removed, the Nats will send Dutch Leonard to the mound in the series finale today.

Leonard underwent his worst pitching experience of the season last week in Boston when he was battered for nine runs and 15 hits by the Red Sox. In his last start against the Browns he shut them out, 4 to 0.

Manager Fred Haney will send the left-handed Howard Mills to the box for the Browns.

Outfielder Gerald Walker who was forced to retire in the third inning yesterday when he pulled a leg muscle while running out a hit, is expected to return to the line-up today. Catcher Bob Swift, of the Browns, who turned his ankle while backing up first base, will be on the sidelines, however.

Yankees Beat Tigers Twice, 4-3 and 4-2

Ruffing and Bonham Show Fine Form as Champions Take Bill; Rowe Is Injured

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 20.—The unpredictable New York Yankees today got what they've needed all year—good pitching—and so they blasted the Detroit Tigers by 4-3 and 4-2 in a double-header before 30,348 fans.

In the first game Charley (The Red) Ruffin let the Tigers down with eight hits to win his twelfth victory of the season. He almost ran afoul of trouble in the ninth when Pete Fox opened with a homer and Pinch Hitter Tuck Stainback doubled with one out. However, Red bore down and forced the next two hitters to pop out.

Schoolboy Rowe, who came up from his mother's bedside in St. Louis to pitch the first game gave up all the Yankee runs before he was lifted for a pinch hitter in the seventh. He was considerably shaken up in the second inning when he collided with George Selkirk.

In the nightcap, young Ernie Bonham, the Kansas City recruit, pitched strongly to register his second victory of the year with an eight-hit performance. The Yankees bunched the same number of hits effectively in the first and fifth innings to score twice in each frame.

The double victory, combined with a split between the White Sox and Athletics, put the Yanks back in a tie for fourth with Chicago, while the Tigers dropped 4½ games back of the Cleveland Indians who beat the Red Sox 11-6.

Fleet Rookie Joins Washington Today

Rookie Second Baseman Larry Womack, purchased by the Nats from Ocala in the Florida League and labeled by his admirers as "faster than George Case," will join the Washington club today.

Young Womack, bought on the recommendation of John Ganzel, who scouted Sid Hudson in the same league, will not be available for duty for at least a week. He injured his leg sliding and will undergo treatment by the Washington club's physician.

In the Florida League, Womack stole 35 bases in 110 games and batted .315, driving in 57 runs. According to Clark Griffith, he is at least a year away from the majors, but will get a long tryout in September.

Reds Defeat Giants, 3-2, With a Rally

Leaders Score All Runs in Ninth on Four Hits to Win

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 20.—The Cincinnati Reds, who had been handcuffed all day, bunched four of their seven hits off Bill Lohrman for all their runs in the ninth inning, to nip the Giants, 3-2, in a thriller here today.

The league leaders thus ended their three-game losing streak, just when it looked for certain they were to drop their second game of the series to the Giants.

Frank McCormick's single that scored Linus Frey and Ival Goodman was the biggest blow struck. It came after Lew Riggs, who pinch-hit for Eddie Joose, had doubled and later scored on Frey's single. Linus advanced to third on Goodman's double near the right field foul line and that set the stage for McCormick's game-winning blow, a long single to left field.

It was the third time this year the Reds had beaten Lohrman, who has lost his last four starts and has dropped nine while winning the same number.

The Giants, after blasting the Reds yesterday, started out as though they meant to win this one quickly. In the first inning Terry Moore walked, went to second on an infield out and scored on Johnny McCarthy's double to deep right center.

The Giants kept their scoring streak alive in the second when Mel Ott tripled inside the rightfield foul line and scored after Tonny Cuccinello's long fly had been caught by Mike McCormick.

There wasn't any other scoring until the ninth as both Lohrman and Junior Thompson, who was winning his twelfth game of the season with a seven-hit performance, were niggardly with hits.

It may look like an act by Shortstop Jimmy Pofahl, of the Nats, but he's simply lifting himself out of range of the spikes of Grace, of the Browns, in the first inning. Before he zoomed skyward, Pofahl took a throw from Buddy Myer to force Grace out at second

Browns Slug Hudson And Beat Nats, 6-3

Auker Masters Washington and Defeats Rookie Sensation; Buddy Lewis No Help to Cause When He Muffed Play

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

The St. Louis Browns used underhanded methods to beat the Nats yesterday—the underhanded methods of Pitcher Elden Auker. With his sub-sidearm delivery Auker held the Nats to eight hits and delivered a 6-3 victory to the Browns.

Auker outpitched Sidney Hudson, of all people. The Nats prize rookie who has a one-hit shutout over the Browns to his credit, didn't exactly baffle the St. Louis clubbers yesterday. They rapped him for all of their ten hits in the seven innings he lasted.

Buddy Lewis was no help to the Nats. Three of the Browns' runs were directly traceable to a fielding lapse by Lewis in rightfield in the third inning when the ground he covered on a hit by Joe Grace was chiefly under his feet. From that cheap blow stemmed the Browns' 3-0 lead.

Auker had more trouble with Umpire Joe Rue than with the Nats. He was protesting all day on decisions on balls and strikes, and the boos of the slender crowd. But when he wasn't arguing with Rue he was pitching clever baseball. The Nats failed to make more than two hits in any inning against his pitches which started only inches above the ground and drifted lazily to the plate in a low parabola.

Young Hudson was troubled with his control, but he staved off damage until the third inning when Lewis put him on the spot. He had two out in the third and apparently was out of trouble when Grace lifted a lazy fly to short rightfield.

Lewis' reaction was to stand stock still for too long. The ball fell safely at his feet for a cheap single and the flood gates were opened. The Browns seized this break with great violence. They pasted Hudson for five consecutive hits.

"Rip" Started Things

League Leading Hitter Rip Radcliff beat out a hard smash to Pofahl for the second hit, and Walter Judnich delivered a single to left center that scored Grace. Judnich stole second and then Harlond Clift produced the big hit of the inning—a single to left that scored both Radcliff and Judnich with the second and third runs. McQuinn followed with a single to left that did no damage.

Auker, himself, lent a hand to the Browns' attack in the sixth when they came up with two more runs after Hudson walked Clift. Hudson struck out McQuinn, but Berardino dumped a single to short left. George Susce squeezed a run home with a bunt to Bloodworth, whose throw to the plate was late, and Auker then lashed a long two-bagger over Case's head to score Berardino.

Balk Cost a Run

Bob Feller Credited With 22d Victory; Indians Come From 3 Runs Back to Win

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 20.—Kent Keltner, third baseman of the league-leading Cleveland Indians, went on a batting spree today to down the Boston Red Sox, 11 to 6, and give Pitcher Bobby Feller his twenty-second victory of the season.

Keltner poled out a round-tripper with the bases loaded in the eighth inning, while 20,200 hometown fans looked on.

Feller had left the mound for a pinch-hitter just before Keltner contributed to a seven-run outbreak in the eighth, but he was credited with the victory.

When Feller retired, with his teammates on the short end of a 5-to-2 score, it appeared that Jack Wilson, the starting Boston pitcher, was headed for a hero's role.

Then Clarence Campbell, pinch-hitting for Rollie Hemsley, Feller's cattery mate, lined out a single and then Jeff Heath, batting for Feller, hit a two-run homer to put the Indians back on the warpath at 5 to 4.

Ben Chapman, a former Bostonian, followed with a single and Wilson gave way to Emerson Dickman. Weatherly forced Chapman at second, but Boudreau singled and Trosky walked, filling the bases.

Passau Wins 15th, Giving Three Hits; Mulcahy Is Loser

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 20.—Claude Passeau racked up his fifteenth mound victory of the season today, pitching the Chicago Cubs to a 4-to-0 decision over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Only 30 batters faced Passeau as he yielded only three hits and issued no walks.

Zeke Bonura contributed the first Cub run when he blasted a home run in the first inning. Chicago added two more in the fourth on three hits off Hugh Mulcahy, the starting and losing pitcher. Passeau's double and Stan Hack's single produced the final run.

Heurich Nine Loses Again, 5-3, to Cameo in Post Playoff

First Title Tilt Won by F. Deavers

James Beaten as Beer Club Misses Chances To Score; 2d Scrap Set on Ellipse Today

Looking every bit like the champion it hopes to be, Cameo A. C.'s nine romped to a 5-3 victory over Heurich Brewers on the Ellipse yesterday, taking a one-game jump on the defending champions in the three-game series for The Washington Post Industrial League title.

Winner of the crown for two years straight, and possessor of the first-half championship this season, Heurich was never a serious threat yesterday. It was forced to wait until Cameo had scored all its runs before it bunched a trio in the seventh.

It was the third straight game the forces of Manager "Connie" Wyche have taken from the Beermen. In straight games they disposed of a playoff for the second-half title with Heurich.

To Frank Deavers, stocky hurler, went credit for one of the headiest games during the league season. Heurich reached him for ten hits, the same total which Cameo amassed, but the right-hand control-artist bore down admirably in the pinches. Walter James went six innings for the losers, gave up nine hits and was relieved by Lacy in the seventh.

Heurich had at least one man on base in each of the eight innings of the game. Cameo was in a position to score in all but the first inning, but it wasn't until the fifth that it got a runner home.

That first point was as much due to James' hitting "Hoggy" Albert as it was to Godfrey's single. Deavers, who had cracked a clean single in the third inning, was walked to start the fifth. Albert pushed him up when hit on the arm, and then came Godfrey's big blow.

In the sixth, the Furniture nine went to work in earnest. Bill Harris singled, "Giggles" Adair was safe on a sacrifice when First Baseman Posnack dropped the ball. The bases were loaded when Ken McQuinn slapped a ball that Second Baseman Kaufman threw over Posnack's head. Jack James then pushed home two of the winners' three runs in the inning with a one-base hit. Shortly thereafter Albert wound home.

Cameo's run in the seventh was unnecessary, but good insurance. Especially when the Brewers jumped on Deavers for four hits in their half of the seventh. Sustitute Catcher Murphy hit one of the first pitches for a triple. Knight followed it with a double and before the side was out Barry aid Colliflower had singled.

What may be the last game of the playoff, if Cameo wins, will take place today on the North Ellipse at 4:30. Tommy Hahn is slated to work for Cameo and big Ed Colliflower for Heurich.

Dodger Pennant Hopes Receive Setback; Now 5½ Games Behind

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 20.—The hopes of the Brooklyn Dodgers to close the gap between them and the Cincinnati Reds received a series of shocking jolts today.

The Brooks lost a double-header to the St. Louis Cards by 3-0 and 4-3, while the Giants were losing to the Reds. That left the Brooks 5½ games back of the Rhinelanders.

The second game was the heartbreaker for the Dodgers. Tied at 3-all in the eighth by virtue of home runs by Pete Coscarart and Dolph Camilli, the Dodgers called on Hugh Casey to carry on where Lefty Flowers and Tex Carleton had left off. But in the eighth with one out Johnny Mize singled, Joe Orengo made the second out, and then Enos Slaughter walked, Don Padgett batted for Mickey Owen and walked on four pitched balls to fill the bases, and Stu Martin batting for Martin Marion, also got a walk on four pitches to force in the winning run.

field single to Judnich and then committed an obvious balk in an attempt to trap Judnich off first. Clift drove in his third run of the game with a single to center.

The Nats didn't get a run until Jimmy Pofahl opened the fifth with a long drive into leftfield which he beat out for a home run with the help of Radcliff's slow fielding. It was only the Nats' third hit of the game. A bit later, Farrell walked and the Nats came up with another run. Hudson forced Ferrell and Case popped up, but Lewis singled to right and the Browns compounded two errors on the ball. Grace bobbled it in rightfield and Lewis dashed to second. When Berardino muffed Grace's throw to the infield, Hudson raced home from third.

In the seventh the Nats cut the Browns' lead to 6-3 when, with two out, Pinch Hitter Jake Early tripled off the right center wall. George Case scored him with a squeeze bunt he beat out for a hit. Early made a clever slide to the plate to score beneath Auker's toss to Susce. In the eighth, Travis tripled with only one out and couldn't score, and in the ninth, after Pinch Hitter Sammy West singled and Chet Laabs obligingly dropped Case's fly with two out, Buddy Lewis sent everybody home by striking out—lustily.

Naval Air, Pepco Nines In Deadlock

Two Bitter Rivals Finish in 1-1 Tie In Championship Play

Though the were able to settle on the site of their championship game in the U. S. Government League, Pepco and Naval Air Station nines still weren't able to decide the title yesterday.

The torrid rivals wound up in their second consecutive 1-1 deadlock in a game played at the Airmen's diamond.

Pepco, first-half champion, pushed across a run in the second and proudly coasted on that advantage until the seventh. Then Naval Air got a single tally to tie the count.

The Airmen's Meads had much the better of the pitching battle, allowing only four hits while his mates slammed Garvey, of Pepco, for seven. Only two errors marked the air-tight fray, and nobody was able to ring up more than a single base blow at one time.

Lanahan Hurls Pirates to 6-3 Win Over Bees

Breaks Four-Game Buc Losing Streak; Garms Is Bat Star

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 20.—Although yielding 13 hits, most of them slow bounders the infield could not handle, Southpaw Dick Lanahan today pitched Pittsburgh to a 6-to-3 victory over Boston, fanning six as he broke the Pirates four-game losing streak. Four double plays aided the Buc hurler.

Deb Garms continued his sensational batting streak, getting three hits, including a double, and driving in two runs. In his last 27 games the infielder-outfielder has hit safely in 24 for an average of .419 to pull up his average for 62 games to .375.

Pittsburgh clinched the contest in the eighth with two out and Lanahan on first. Paul Waner's high fly fell safe back of second, Garms doubled and Bob Elliott singled to score three runs.

The Buc's catching squad was reduced to one effective man, Virgil Davis, when Eddie Fernandes hurt a finger. Al Lopez is out for two weeks with a split finger.

Moses Steals Home To Give A's Nightcap After Losing Opener

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 20.—Wally Moses stole home in the tenth inning of the second game to give the Athletics a 4-3 victory and an even break with the Chicago White Sox in a double-header today.

Chicago won the first game, 6 to 1, when a five-run rally in the ninth inning made a rout of a pitching duel between Ed Smith and Buck Ross. None of Chicago's six runs were earned, the A's committing five errors behind Ross.

Philadelphia's only score came on Al Rubeling's fifth home run of the season.

Nelson Potter pitched shutout ball for eight innings of the second game, then weakened and the Sox tied the score with a three-run attack in the ninth. In the home tenth, Moses singled, advanced on a sacrifice and infield out, and then bolted home as Thornton Lee pitched to Benny McCoy.

Soose to Meet Zale Tonight In 10-Rounder

One of Middleweight Titles May Hinge On Chicago Battle

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 20.—Billy "The Kid" Soose, 23-year-old boxing master from Scranton, Pa., may become middleweight champion without portfolio tomorrow night.

Already victorious over Ken Overlin, Soose will attempt to halt the championship boom of Deadly Punching Tony Zale, from the steel mills of Gary, Ind., in a 10-round open-air battle. Zale, knockout conqueror of Al Hostak, Seattle, Wash., is recognized, as result of that victory, as 160-pound titleholder by the National Boxing Association. While Overlin, former gob from Decatur, Ill., is likewise recognized by the State of New York and Promoter Mike Jacobs.

It will be Zale's first start since he defeated Hostak, and Soose's first battle since he upset Overlin. Both have agreed to scale 162 pounds, making tomorrow night's bout a nontitle combat.

Zale, having won 10 of his last 12 bouts by knockouts, probably will enter the ring 7-to-5 favorite to win and even money he stops the former collegiate champion from Penn State College. Soose never has been stopped in 29 professional battles. He moves, blocks and counters with straight punches, while Zale is a crowding type and a terrific body puncher.

The battle figures to draw 10,000 spectators with receipts at $20,000. The Greek middleweight champion, Anton Christofordis, undefeated since his invasion, meets Tony Bruno, slugger from Milwaukee, Wis., in a ten-round semifinal. Jose Basora, Puerto Rico middleweight, winner of 24 successive bouts, engages Joe Sutka, Detroit, in an attractive six-rounder.

80TH YEAR

'Foreign' Teams Are Ousted From National Tennis Doubles

Joe Hunt Paces Upset At Longwood

U. S. Sure of Taking Back Crown Captured In 1939 by Aussies; Riggs, Van Horn Win

By the United Press

Chestnut Hill, Mass., Aug. 20.—Elimination of both "foreign" combines in the men's divisions by youthful domestic tandems featured today's opening play in the fifty-ninth annual Tennis Doubles Championships on the Grass Courts of Longwood Cricket Club.

Midshipman Joe Hunt, of Annapolis, and Charles (Ted) Olewine, of Santa Monica, Calif., furnished the major upset of first-round play by defeating the top-seeded "foreign" pair of George Lyttleton-Rogers, of Ireland, and Frank Froehling, of Chicago, in straight sets, 6—1, 7—5, 6—2.

Olewine, the Nation's third-ranking junior, and Davis-Cupper Hunt combined a forcing net game with blasting placements to keep their giant opponents constantly on the defense. Rogers, once Ireland's Davis Cup ace, thrice held service in the second set to deadlock games at 5—5 after Hunt and Olewine had swept the first set in 10 minutes. But Hunt held service in the eleventh game and Froehling was broken for the third time in the twelfth for the set.

Cunning drop shots and sharp placements completed the rout of the "foreigners" in the third set.

The youthful Los Angeles duo of Earl Bartlett and Joseph Evert completed the conquest of the "foreign" field when they eliminated the second seeded team of W. C. Choy, of China, and John Palfrey, of Boston, after a five-set struggle, 3—6, 6—4, 6—0, 2—6, 6—1.

Thus the return of the men's doubles championships to the United States was assured. Adrian Quist and Jack Bromwich, of Australia, who won last year, were prevented by the war from defending their crown.

All four domestic men's teams advanced with slight difficulty, though two of them were forced to four sets.

The third-seeded Californians, Jack Kramer, of Montabello, and Ted Schroeder, of Glendale, the Nation's top-ranking junior, eliminated Norman Drake and Al Stitt, Boston, 6—0, 6—1, 3—6, 6—1. Fourth-seeded Gardnar Mullow, of Coral Gabes, Fla., and Henry Prusoff, Seattle, Wash., whipped E. Victor Seixas and Bill Voigt, of Philadelphia, 4—6, 6—2, 6—1, 6—2.

The top-seeded tandem of Frank Parker, Beverly Hills, Calif., and Don McNeill, Oklahoma City, Okla., advanced by default, while the second-seeded Bobby Riggs, Chicago, and Welby Van Horn, Los Angeles, outslugged Tom Jansen and G. Holmes Perkins, Boston, 6—1, 3—6, 6—2.

Play in the women's division ran to form with Alice Marble, of Beverly Hills, and Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, starting quest of their fourth straight national doubles title with a 6—0, 6—1 triumph over Nancy Amory, of Beverly Farms, and Joan Humphrey, of Manchester.

The top-seeded foreign team of Valerie Scott and Mary Hardwick, British Wightman Cup players, kept pace by defeating Mary Fuller and Phyllis Richards, of Boston 6—3, 6—2.

Pauline Betz, of Beverly Hills, and Margaret Osborne, of Los Angeles, given an outside chance of ultimately toppling the champions, advanced with a 6—4, 6—2 win over Mrs. Greti Dupont, of Los Angeles, and Mrs. H. Wightman, of Brookline.

Veteran Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., and Mary Arnold, of Los Angeles, seeded third, scored a routine victory over Helen and Ann Knowles, of Beverly Farms with loss of only one game. Fourth-seeded Virginia Wolfenden and Patricia Canning, of San Francisco, advanced by default.

Mrs. Lela Hall, McNeir Take Trap Titles

Vandalia, Ohio, Aug. 20.—Mrs Lela Hall, Strasburg, Mo., housewife, and Forest McNeir, 65-year-old architect-contractor, of Houston, Tex., captured the North American Clay Target Championships today at the Forty-first Grand American Trapshoot.

It was the fifth victory in six years for "Lovely Lela," definitely spotting her as the Nation's No. 1 feminine scattergun star.

McNeir, veteran of 30 Grand Americans, climbed the heights after being defeated in shoot-offs in 1920 and 1935 when he tied for the national title. The Texan took no chances today on a shoot-off, breaking 200 in a row for the only perfect score in a field of more than 400.

It was McNeir's first 200 in 32 years of trap shooting. But it won him his fiftieth championship cup.

The father and son championship went to Dr. I. S. and Ned Lilly, of Stanton, Mich., in a shoot-off with Elmer and Don Torge, of Wales Center, N. J., and Fred Tomlin, of Glassboro, N. J., successfully defended for the fourth time his national professional crown, breaking 75 straight in a shoot-off.

Georgetown Girls Win Swim Meet

Most impressive score of the annual City-Wide Girls Swimming championships at four pools yesterday was that turned in by the Georgetown mermaids, who totaled 70 points in winning the finals at their home pool. Anacostia and Takoma teams also were victorious over their home waves, with 57 and 49 points, respectively, while Langley Club stole honors at McKinley pool with 49 points.

Six hundred girls competed in the various meets, and in each case the winners had little trouble.

Chile Forced Out of U. S. Horse Show

Thomas P. Morgan, jr., secretary-treasurer of the Inter-American Horse Show Association, Inc., announced last night that word had been received from the Chilean Embassy stating that due to unsettled state of affairs in Europe and the resultant unfavorable economic conditions in Chile, the Chilean government regrets that it will not be possible for the military horse show team to participate in the show this year.

The Mexican Embassy advises that the Mexican government will not permit its military team to leave the country in view of the general unsettled world conditions.

The military attache in Lima, Peru, has said that the severe earthquake in Peru on May 24 has resulted in the cancellation of all social events and therefore he believed it would not be possible for the military team to participate.

The Inter-American Horse Show is scheduled for October 24, 25, 26 and 27 this year, but in view of these refusals, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Inter-American, has called a meeting of the board of directors in his office Thursday, August 29, at 10 o'clock to decide whether the show will go on.

The participation of the leading military teams of South America and foreign countries in competition with the leading United States military team has always been the colorful and outstanding feature of the Inter-American Horse Show and it is questioned whether in view of the disturbing world conditions it would be wise to hold the show this year.

The National Horse Show, which is held at Madison Square Garden in November each year advises that it has, to date, received no acceptances from South American teams.

National Body Rules Against $1,500 Claim

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 20.—The executive committee of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues today ruled out a $1,500 salary claim by Catcher James Holbrook against the Albany, N. Y., team of the Eastern League. The decision reversed a finding by baseball's high commissioner, Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

New Material Of Redskins Pleases Coach

Flaherty May Open Season With 4 New Faces in His Line-Up

By Al Hailey
A Staff Correspondent

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 20.—The Redskins will have at least four new faces in the backfield this fall, and as a result some of the veterans are going to exert a lot of effort in the next few days to avoid the "ax," Coach Ray Flaherty indicated today.

While most of the veteran backs are certain of their places on the squad, there is still a large amount of uneasiness and a strong belief persists that more than one old-timer may be placed on the inactive list to make way for the newer talent.

Maxie Krause, the 30-year-old fullback who's playing his eighth year of professional football, was frankly concerned over his prospects and Boyd (Red) Morgan, a 1939 rookie halfback, was equally outspoken.

Faces Battle for Job

"I'm going to have to work awfully hard to stay on that squad this year," Maxie said glumly as the Redskins stepped off a train here today to be greeted by their first taste of rain since beginning training in Spokane two weeks ago.

Krause, injured early in the season last year, was placed on the inactive list and did valuable work as a coach and scout, and the belief is that he may be placed in the same capacity this fall—thus giving Flaherty room for one more of his promising rookies.

The Redskin coach has been particularly taken with a backfield in which three rookies run—Ray Hare, blocking back from Gonzaga; Bob Seymour, 1940 version of Cliff Battles, and Roy Zimmerman, whose kicking and passing appears certain to lead him on to starring roles this fall if he can stand the rough wear.

Other Rookie Standouts

In addition to these three—all of whom will see plenty of action in Thursday night's charity intra-squad game here—are Bob Hoffman, draftee halfback from Southern California, and Ernie Lain, fullback from Rice Institute.

Hoffman, now in Chicago waiting to start with the College All-Stars against the Green Bay Packers, August 29, is a sure bet. Twenty two years old, Hoffman weighs 200 and is said to be a devastating blocker. In fact, all five of the rookie backs mentioned scale at least 200, and Lain, who is on the doubtful list, is the heaviest, at 230.

Lain is expected to be sent to the Wilmington, Del., pro football club for seasoning. The big Rice passing star has been slow, until recently, getting into form. His 50-yard passing specialty has been clicking lately, however, and he may be held because of his weight.

Two Rookie Linemen May Stick

At present, only two rookie linemen appear likely to remain with the club when Flaherty starts cutting the squad from 45 to 33 next week. They are Bob Titchenal, center from San Jose State, and Bob Fisher, tackle from Southern California.

Sandy Sanford, the place-kicking end from Alabama, is scheduled to be sent to Wilmington, also, for seasoning. Sanford, who played only in 1937 and 1939, did not see much action while at Alabama, but was used largely as a field goal threat. Consequently, he has proved green on the field, but Flaherty likes his apparent natural ability.

That's the way the picture looked today as the Redskin coach prepared for his first big test—the game Thursday. It'll be a battle between the rookies and the veterans as well as an East-West affair, and from the looks several veterans may come out second best.

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

Fish Are Giving Anglers Run-Around; Quail Propagation

Bill Diers says that regardless of where he fishes this year, whether it is a Western Maryland trout stream or down on his favorite sharking grounds at Cape Charles, the fish steadfastly refuse his proffered baits. We know of others who seem to be in the same rut.

ACKERMAN

On the other hand, consider A. M. Ferguson, who two weeks ago tried the Ocean City fishing for a day. His 114½ pound white marlin, caught on that trip, is the top fish so far for the season. Back again Sunday for another try, and he brought home a 152 pound mako. We know of still others who seem to carry the same luck.

So far as we know the 66 pound, 12 ounce channel bass caught by Randolph Robinson fishing at Wachaprague with Capt. Earle Parker on his Silver Spray is the largest of the species caught anywhere this season.

Entered in the George Ruppert contest, it will drag down some real money on December 31 for both angler and guide. However we have a record of a local angler catching a bass three years ago that weighed just 12 ounces more.

With 250 smackers on his nose, the same tiny 6-ounce codfish is still leading the Ruppert contest, and has been for nearly three months. It is impossible, or at least improbable, that it can continue to do so through the fall months, yet we have seen many happenings equally strange.

We noted yesterday the fact that trout were not falling for soft crabs and peelers in the upper bay. That evidently doesn't hold for the Point Lookout section for Alan Brown, fishing from George Smith's, got to them late Sunday evening on Northwest Middles for a count of 73. Many weighed up to three pounds. Pretty good going we call it.

Quail propagation and release has become quite an activity of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Chapter of Ike Waltons. Some members raise and release several hundred each year. Usually brood birds are to be obtained from them, but this year, sometime during September, the Chapter will receive 250 Bobwhite for carrying over the winter and liberation next spring. Here is a chance for others to get in on an interesting pastime, for there is little doubt but what many of these birds will grow up to fine mated pairs, and could be made to pay off in real numbers.

Windsor Adams will handle the distribution, and he should be contacted at the regular meeting tonight at the clubhouse of the National Capital Field Trial Club out on Bradley Boulevard.

Rodak, Kogan Draw

Biggest Channel Bass

The largest channel bass taken this season hereabouts, in many books, is shown here in the hands of its captor, Randolph Robinson. The prize weighed 66 pounds 12 ounces

Kercheval Reports To Dodger Camp

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—Ralph Kercheval has changed his mind and is going to play another year of pro football.

The former Kentucky back, famous as a kicker, announced at the close of last season, his fifth with the Brooklyn Dodgers, that he was retiring from the gridiron to devote his attention to breeding horses. Today, however, he announced Owner Dan Topping's offer was so attractive that he couldn't refuse so he'll report to Coach Jock Sutherland at the Dodgers' Princeton, N. J., training camp tomorrow.

Favorites Advance in Parks Tennis

Turski-Schaefer Score Over Chicago Pair for Only Upset

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 20.—Favorites came through on schedule today in more early round matches of the National Public Parks Tennis Tournament.

Only two seeded players saw action in the men's singles. Despite a staunch battle by Joseph Turski, of Buffalo, Richard McKee, of Jacksonville, seeded third, came out with a 6—0, 6—2, 8—6 victory.

Cincinnati's Jim Ratliff also had to fight off a closing rush but took over Moreay Estes, of Nashville, Tenn., by a 6—3, 6—2, 8—6 score. Ratliff and his brother, Chalmers, went into a marathon doubles match with Michael Sweting and Robert Wrobdel, of Detroit, and were two sets on their way to triumph when the Detroiters dug in to take the next three sets and the three-hour match, 5—7, 1—6, 6—2, 6—2, 8—6.

The only real upset of the day came in the men's doubles when Joe Turski and Lou Schaefer, the pride of Buffalo, knocked out Eugene Quinn and Benny Levin, of Chicago, 7—5, 1—6, 6—3, 6—3.

The Ratliff brothers had mixed luck in the men's singles. While Jim was beating Estes, Chalmers fell before the stroking of Charles Schoustrom, of Chicago, 6—2, 6—1, 4—6, 6—3.

In the women's singles Marcelna Weiss Parker, of St. Louis, seeded second, had an easy time downing Mrs. Henrietta Frankle, of Buffalo, in love sets.

'Touch' Football Officials to Meet

Laying the groundwork for "touch" football leagues in the Recreation Department, Dick Tennyson, head of the organization, last night announced he would organize a Touch Football Officials Association.

A meeting for this purpose will be held next Wednesday night at 1740 Massachusetts Avenue, at which all prospective referees are expected to be present. The event will get under way at 8 p. m.

William Brann's Aethelwold Takes Saratoga Feature Race

Half-Length Is Margin Of Victory

Winner Pays $9; Favored Get Off Places Second In Handicap Race

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 20. The red and yellow blocked silks of William Brann, owner of the mighty Challedon, flashed to victory for the first time at the meeting when Aethelwold, making his initial start since two unsuccessful efforts at Suffolk Downs, drove to a half-length triumph in the featured Springbok (Class C) Handicap here today.

With the veteran George Wolfe on his back, the 5-year-old son of Challenger II—Khara had the better of a hard duel with Circle M Ranch's Get Off. Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Up the Creek followed, three lengths behind, while Bosley and Gino Rex brought up the rear. The victor paid $9 and made the sharp time of 1:24 2-5 over a track that had dried out to fast condition. Get Off was favorite at 2 to 1, chiefly on the strength of a recent local victory.

A crowd of 8,829, enjoying cooler but sunny weather, saw the 7-furlong handicap. They found it difficult to make a favorite win today. Only one choice clicked in the first six races.

Bosley had much to do with the defeat of Get Off. The latter had something taken out of him overtaking the son of Bosworth and it was not until they straightened for home that the favorite could get his head in front and dispose of the pacemaker. Aethelwold, on the extreme outside as the trio turned into the stretch, gained slowly but surely and beat Get Off despite bearing out in the late stages.

Freddie Smith earned a double by virtue of an easy two lengths score on Navy in the 1 mile 5 furlong seventh race. Navy, which performs in steeplechases and on the flat, went to the front around the last bend and stood off Bright Rebel for his second straight success. The Annapolis gelding was a $4.20 choice. Cross Question was a bell-beaten third.

Racing Castoff Wins Washington Park Feature

Chicago, Aug. 20 (AP).—Paul Kelley's Memory Book, a Greentree Stable castoff, got up in the final stride to defeat the 3-year-old Nightland in the Blue Island Purse at Washington Park today.

Before a chilly crowd of 8,000, Nightland, with 96 pounds up, took a long early lead, but folded in the stretch as Memory Book, a 7-year-old, opened up. The winner, ridden by Jimmy Ashcroft, carried 114 pounds. Third went to William Palmer. Memory Book paid $7.00 and ran the mile over the heavy track in 1:43 4-5.

Racing Moves to Marlboro Today With Promise of Record Run

Every Convenience Possible Offered at Nearby ½-Mile Oval

By Walter Haight

Riding the crest of a record wave of interest, Maryland's half-mile version of the Sport of Kings moves right up against Washington's big bank roll today at nearby Marlboro. For the next ten days, Sunday excepted, the pitter-patter of hoofs and rustle of greenbacks will hold the center of attention in Prince Georges County.

There is every reason to believe that Marlboro's 1940 session will be a record one. Charles Town, Hagerstown, Bel Air and Cumberland all hung up new marks for both betting and attendance. The smaller tracks have lured better horses than ever before. In addition they have become modern in that they offer totalizator betting, electric starting gates and up-to-the-minute finish cameras.

The installation of these improved methods, as well as stricter officiating, has given the public increased confidence in wagering. Only in the size of theovals and perhaps a shade in class, have the bigtime ovals anything on their half-mile cousins. As money-making tracks, the little fellows are digging deep into their rivals.

While Marlboro will be unable to offer a clubhouse until next year or even a larger grandstand, General Manager Joseph A. Farrell and his associates have done everything possible, with ways and means afforded them, to make the customers comfortable.

FARRELL

The chief improvement offered, is a new bridge over the stream on the road into the plant. Both the bridge and the approaches are higher than before and the road has been widened. Perhaps next year, Marlboro will have a road connecting with the Crane highway to help with traffic, but an announcement of such a road made sometime ago was premature.

Today's program is worthy of an opening day at any small track. As was expected, Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan had his hands full of horses. For instance, after 14 were drawn into the first race, 87 were forced to be excluded. With one exception, every event had an overflow.

Marlboro Purse Set

The feature of the first card is the Upper Marlboro Purse, a sprint of 5½ furlongs and located fourth on the program. The test is sizzling with speed and has drawn Kamport, Miss Maker, Cats Cradle, Seneschal and other horses which prefer the short route.

For those fans who like distance events, three are in the lineup. The day's secondary feature, the Holly Beach Farm Purse, is over a mile and a sixteenth. With Channing, Schley Goree, Good Wine, Wayriel, Darby Du and other crack distance horses ready for action, this event should prove a good betting as well as spectacular affair.

Card Is Varied

The other races include two sprints for older horses and one for 2-year-olds. The juveniles will operate at 5½ furlongs and local fans will see Misty Eye, Mr. Jim, Ida Time, Miss Mud, Ginseng and Erins Girl, all speedy youngsters around the other courses.

Marlboro's betting will be in charge of Donald Hay, the Baltimore man who handles the wagering at Bowie, Charles Town and other tracks. Hay gave the mutuel crew a brush-up session yesterday afternoon.

Posttime throughout the Marlboro meeting will be 2 p. m., with the daily double on the first and second races. Daily double windows will close at 1:45 p. m.

D. C. Continues To Lead World In Telephones

Latest Survey Shows 40.14 Sets Here Per 100 Population

By Thomas M. Cahill

With 40.14 telephones per hundred population, Washington continues to lead the world in relative telephone development, according to the current Bell Telephone Quarterly magazine.

Ranking next to the Capital are San Francisco with 38.54, Stockholm with 32.64. Other cities, in their respective order, as far as telephone development is concerned, are Denver, Los Angeles, Seattle, Omaha, Minneapolis, Chicago, Toronto, Vancouver, Zurich, Copenhagen and New York.

Berlin's population of 4,338,000 was served by 544,911 telephones, or only 13.38 per hundred population. Paris, with a population of 2,830,000, had 437,139 telephones, or 15.45 per hundred. More than 100 large cities in this country had a telephone development superior to that of any one of the three large European capitals. The central part of London, with the slightly more than 4,000,000 persons, had 717,643 telephones, or 17.81 per hundred population.

12,750 Home Credit Units

At the end of June approximately 12,750 banks building and loan associations, life insurance companies, mortgage concerns and other financial establishments had been approved by the Federal Housing Administration to make loans to home buyers at a maximum interest rate of 4½ per cent. This was an all-time high and represented an increase of more than 500 qualified institutions over June, 1939, according to Administrator Stewart McDonald.

Retail Linage Jumps

A sharp upturn in retail linage in newspapers of 82 cities was reported yesterday by Advertising Age. Linage for the week ended August 10 aggregated 13,864,276, a gain of 3.3 per cent over the corresponding period of 1939.

Linage in newspapers of these cities for the 32 weeks ended August 10 amounted to 595,977,084, an increase of 1.4 per cent over 1939.

Air Line Sets Record

Pennsylvania-Central Airlines reported yesterday that its Washington branch recorded a 123 per cent increase in revenue passenger traffic in July, as compared with the same 1939 month. General business of the air line in July set a new record for the fifth consecutive month, according to Edward Sullivan, general traffic manager.

New Manager Named

Vinkler J. Waddill has been appointed manager of the Washington office of Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., it was announced yesterday. Mr. Waddill, who has been associated for the last 26 years with the mercantile agency (for the last five years as ranking member of the Washington staff), succeeds John Brewer, who retired after 43 years' service.

Net Up Sharply, W. Va. Paper Firm Boosts Dividend

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co. directors authorized a common stock dividend of 75 cents a share today, 7½ times as much as April and July payments this year. The dividend is payable October 1 to holders of record September 10.

The big increase, observers said, was the first taste the financial district had of the year-old prosperity of the paper companies which started at the outbreak of the war. German conquest of Norway, a large pulp producer, gave impetus to the upward trend in earnings.

Chesapeake & Ohio Railway today increased the dividend rate on its common stock. After paying this year three dividends of 62½ cents—equal to the 1939 rate of $2.50 a share—directors today declared a dividend of 75 cents payable October 1 to holders of September 6. This brings 1940 dividends to $2.62½.

C. & O. Railway Nets $2,904,009

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. reported a July net income of $2,904,009—an increase of $70,278 over June and a decrease of $25,211 from July, 1939.

Net income for the first seven months was $18,618,761—up $10,290,129 over the same 1939 period. July's net railway operating income was $3,581,903, an increase of $53,612 from June, but down $226,221 from July, 1939.

Net operating income, before fixed charges and other income, of other railroads reporting yesterday for July included:

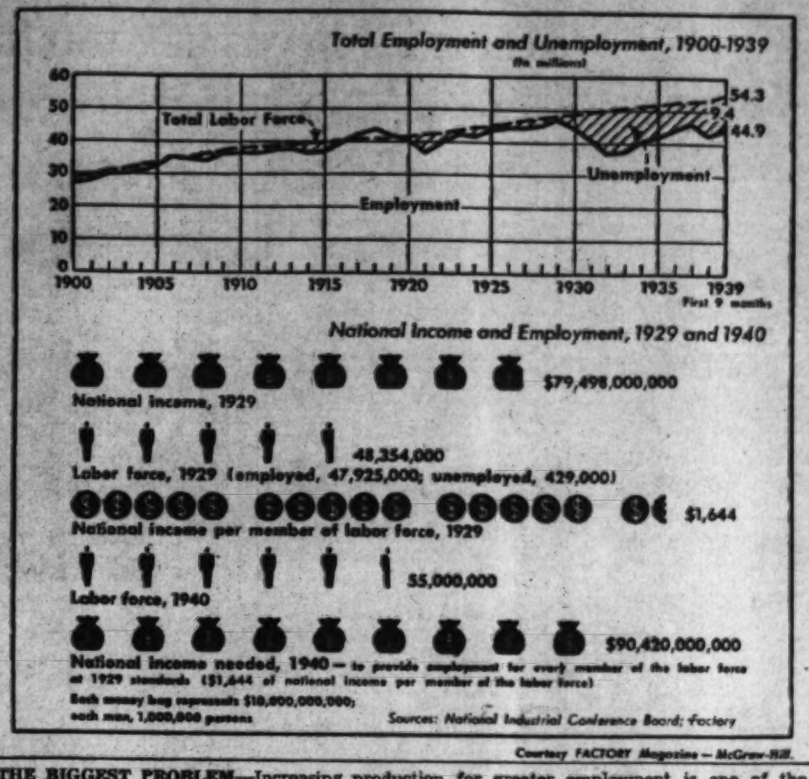
Warner & Swasey Plan Approved by Holders

Cleveland, Aug. 20 (AP).—Stockholders of Warner & Swasey Co., manufacturers of machine tools and astronomical instruments, today approved a recapitalization plan designed to place some of the company's closely held stock into public hands.

The plan increases authorized common stock from 300,000 shares of $5 par value to 1,000,000 no-par shares, and changing each present share of common into three new no-par shares. A registration statement recently filed by the company said 276,580 shares.

More Jobs in Non-Defense Lines Viewed as Need



THE BIGGEST PROBLEM—Increasing production for greater employment is one of the biggest problems confronting America. In a comprehensive survey, the current issue of Factory magazine says: "America's defense program will add jobs. Yet those very jobs must be paid for out of production of normal goods. Therefore increased employment in non-defense occupations must take place"

Master Workman and Auto Empire Builder, Walter Chrysler Kept Human Touch With Aides

By Merryle S. Rukeyser
Economic Commentator

WALTER P. CHRYSLER'S life story is more than a rags to riches saga.

It is true that he re-lived the Horatio Alger pattern in rising from a dollar-a-day sweeper and handler in a Kansas City railroad shop to leadership in the automobile industry. But the substantial wealth which he acquired was only an incident in the magnificent role which he played as an economic empire builder. The rewards of his courage, his industry, and his practical imagination went far beyond his own pocketbook.

Tens of thousands of workmen shared his success in better earnings, and still more customers participated in the economics of mass production in making better and more stylish motor cars.

There was nothing of the swivel chair, business college executive to Walter Chrysler. He was essentially a master workman, and he never lost human touch with the rank and file of men who worked with him.

HE DREAMED great dreams about this country he loved, and he helped to make them come true. He preached no doctrinaire theories about sociological objectives, but he enabled hundreds of thousands to live better because of his genius for industrial organization, for invention, and for styling products. No single personality contributed as much as Chrysler in converting automobiles from strictly utilitarian vehicles to highly styled, more colorful and more beautiful products.

Walter Chrysler never dissipated his energy by weeping about adverse economic conditions. His virile affirmative manner recalled Napoleon's aphorism—"circumstances, why I make circumstances."

CHRYSLER BELIEVED there were opportunities for creative ideas at every stage of the business cycle. At the nadir of the depression, when reduced family incomes were shrinking the demand for high priced automobiles and other expensive comfort goods, Chrysler determined to put greater emphasis than before on cars in the lowest price class.

But he wasn't satisfied in merely making one more cheap car. In order to find a niche, he believed it was necessary to contribute something new to the art of motor making. His great depression contribution was "floating power," which provided greater riding comfort.

Mr. Chrysler's philosophy at the time was summed up in the remark: "the depression has caused much hardship, but it has also brought us many benefits. It has made men think. And being forced to think, we have found new ways to overcome obstacles."

MR. CHRYSLER recognized that women influence the selection of cars, and through innovations in streamlining and in color designs Mr. Chrysler was a pace maker in catching the feminine eye.

It was Mr. Chrysler's thought to make his car so distinctive in design that it would be an advertisement for the maker. Chrysler had great faith in advertising, and when he decided to put increasing emphasis in the lowest price field he cleverly associated his product in the public mind with the two competitive leaders which were then very far out in front. He did this through the advertising slogan, "Before making a selection, see all three."

Instead of joining the politician's wail against deflation and reduced family incomes, Mr. Chrysler said: "We feel that a basic change has taken place in the attitude of people toward merchandise. They are seeking greater value and are insisting upon more for their money in all lines of merchandise. But we find that they are both able and willing to buy if right values are offered."

Walter Chrysler had not only gusto in working, but a lust for living. He spent himself in an active, full, vibrant life. And when ill health reduced him to relative inactivity in the last two years, his foresight in developing a competent management group around him enabled the company to carry on.

Thus, his passing signifies no abrupt change in management. His vigor, his courage, his restless imagination are saturated in the traditions of his company.

July Ore Use Sets Year's High

Cleveland, Aug. 20 (AP).—Consumption of Lake Superior ores during July totaled 5,493,961 tons, highest for any month since last December's 5,538,374 tons.

The figure, announced today by the Lake Superior Iron Ore Association, compares with 5,212,699 tons in June, and 3,143,337 in July, 1939.

The consumption of Lake Superior ores to date this year totals 32,826,627 tons, against 20,114,223 tons in the comparable 1939 period.

Hudson Boosts Output

Detroit, Aug. 20 (AP).—Hudson Motor Car Co. announced today its production schedule for August calls for the shipment of 11,500 cars. A year ago August shipments numbered 3,650 units.

Business Highlights

Prepared for The Post by Standard Statistics.

Virtually all of the big milk distributors' wagon routes in New York City are now making deliveries in the 2-quart fiber containers. Unfortunately, however, only about 40 per cent of the route customers, on the average, have been sold on the idea, the remaining 60 per cent preferring the glass bottle. This opposition has made it necessary to continue daily milk deliveries on virtually all routes and has prevented any real start on adoption of the every-other-day schedules. The latter, the main sources of saving incident to the adoption of the 2-quart fiber containers, may be delayed longer than the distributors originally expected. However, the trade is confident that the bulk of those who still are insisting upon glass bottles and daily deliveries will ultimately be won over to the new scheme.

'Sail With Breeze' for Profits, Retail Sales Analysis Concludes

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 20.—Department stores which "sail with the breeze," "swim with the tide" and "play the winners" are, in the words of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, likely to make the most profits.

These observations were brought forth today in a statistical survey of the Nation published by the association and dealing with the dates upon which women demand new hats, men buy suits and couples get married.

The survey also points out that little boys don't like to go shopping—which many parents already knew—and that wives give their husbands house coats at Christmas.

Carefully analyzing the annual business in 86 different retail departments, the report selects the chief sales' months for various commodities, and advises:

A—Have what people want.

B—Have it when people want it.

C—Step out and tell people the news that makes goods sell.

Illustrative of this advice is the association's comment on Department 36, corsets and brassieres.

"This department," says the survey, "ranked highest as profitmaker in the last four years, and in the typical department store produces sales equivalent in volume to the infants' wear department."

Corsets and brassieres sell best in May and December, but, the report states, there are "no great peaks nor exceptionally dull months."

This is most definitely not the case with Department 61, men's clothing. Here we find that 35 per cent of the year's sales appear in December, October and November, and in that order.

"December's peak," says the survey, "is undoubtedly influenced by the sale of robes and house coats. . . . Easter has no great effect on the department's sales."

But Easter certainly affects Department 34, millinery, which in 1939 did one-quarter of the whole year's business in March and April.

In the case of boys' wear, it is suggested, Easter should bring more business than it does, but the best month for that department is December.

In the case of thriving Department 43, infants' wear, the picture is not so complicated. To quote: "With babies being born every day and growing out of their clothes almost as rapidly, there is excellent reason to plan for day in and day out business, with ample stocks of staple and semistaple items—always."

Pet Milk Earnings Rise to $554,153

Pet Milk Co. and subsidiaries reported June quarter net profit of $554,153, equal to $1.25 a common share. This compared with net loss of $7,612 in the preceding quarter and net profit of $442,702, or $1 a share, in the June quarter last year.

Servel, Inc.

Servel, Inc. reported for its third fiscal quarter ended July 31 net profit of $1,237,498, equal to 69 cents a common share, compared with $1,241,417, also 69 cents a share, in the corresponding 1939 quarter. The company makes refrigeration equipment at Evansville, Ind.

Copper Price Boost Brings Heavier Sales

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—Large producers of copper did the best business in days following elimination of the gap between the producer and smelter prices, metal dealers said today.

Custom smelters advanced their base ⅛-cent to 11 cents a pound, which the producers have quoted for several weeks.

The needs of copper users for October have not yet been covered, according to estimates in the trade, and it was hinted a tight situation might develop if buyers tried to accumulate large stocks at the current level.

Cotton Spinning Declines in July

By the Associated Press

The Census Bureau reported yesterday the cotton spinning industry operated during July at 86.5 per cent of capacity, on a two-shift, 80-hour week basis, compared with 87.1 during June this year, and 81.5 during July last year.

Spinning spindles in place July 31 totaled 24,747,636, of which 21,916,700 were active at some time during the month compared with 24,752,022 and 21,942,743 on June 30 this year, and 25,377,986 and 21,915,362 on July 31 last year.

Canada Boosts Shipments of Gold to U. S.

Week's Imports Surge As Dominion Sends $85,298,255 Here

By the Associated Press

Large Canadian shipments boosted gold imports in the United States last week to $119,632,770.

This was more than four times the size of gold movements into the United States in the preceding week, which was one of the smallest weeks since the war began.

In the week ended August 14, shipments included $85,298,255 from Canada, $5,997,894 from the United Kingdom, $5,198,642 from Portugal, $4,513,795 from Colombia, $2,869,168 from Brazil, $3,280,000 from South Africa and $1,381,170 from Sweden.

Gold deposited under earmark in the Federal Reserve System for the accounts of foreign governments and central banks were reduced during the week by $5,753,106 to $1,652,723,637.

Silver imports also increased somewhat to $1,025,920, including $504,734 from Japan, $141,033 from Mexico, $133,711 from Peru and $38,797 from Canada.

Export totals included $168 of gold and $168,493 of silver.

Petroleum Trade Steps Up Output And Refining

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—Activity in most branches of the petroleum industry rose slightly last week, the report of the American Petroleum Institute disclosed today.

Gains in Kansas, Texas and Oklahoma boosted daily crude oil production to 3,518,750 barrels compared with 3,475,300 the previous week. A year ago, when a partial shutdown was in effect, production averaged 2,480,550 barrels daily.

Reporting refineries advanced operations to 81.1 per cent of capacity from 78.9 per cent the week before. Daily runs of crude oil to stills for the industry as a whole were estimated at 3,510,000 barrels, compared with 3,435,000 the previous week and 3,472,000 a year ago.

Meanwhile, the Bureau of Mines estimated yesterday that 3,624,300 barrels of domestic crude oil daily would be required to met the market demand in September.

This was 33,400 barrels less than the estimated daily demand for August and 104,100 barrels less than the actual demand in September, 1939.

Lumber Dealers Informed of Army And Navy Needs

By the Associated Press

Lumber manufacturers were informed yesterday that the Army and Navy would need 650,000,000 feet of lumber for construction projects which have been started or for which plans have been completed.

John W. Watzek, jr., in charge of the defense commission's lumber section, outlined the requirements to the executive committee of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association at a meeting here.

He stated that approximately 257,500,000 feet of the lumber, 75,000 doors and 195,000 windows had been authorized for Army troops housing, and that orders for all of it would be placed by September 15. A large part already has been purchased.

Lumber for troops housing will consist of 37 per cent sheathing, 10 per cent siding, 15 per cent flooring and wainscoting and 38 per cent dimension and framing. The total requirements of 650,000,000 compares with a current lumber production of 28,000,000,000 feet a year, or roughly 75 per cent of present capacity.

Erie R. R. Builds 325 Gondolas in Scranton

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 20 (AP).—Three hundred and twenty-five new mill-type 70-ton gondolas will be constructed at the Dunmore shops of the Erie Railroad for the first time in the history of the system, R. H. Boykin, superintendent of the local division, announced today.

Work on the new freight cars will be started October 1. "The cars are being constructed primarily for use in the Youngstown steel district for shipments of steel," Boykin said.

Stocks Tilt Higher as Sentiment Improves; Steels and Aviations Stand Out on Upside

New York, Aug. 20.—General improvement in all markets today, both with respect to price range and activity, revived hopes in the financial community that Monday's 24-year record low in Big Board volume was just an accident that will not be repeated. Gains of around 1 to 2 points were scored by a number of the better known issues and trading increased to 242,800 shares. The composite average registered a gain of 0.34 point.

From the opening the level of stocks held above the close of the previous day and while there was no special development to account for the better feeling, there was general satisfaction in the type of resistance displayed to the German raids and to the ability of the R. A. F. to stage its counter-offensive. The political outlook also improved with the speech of Secretary Ickes, the feeling in the Street being that the New Deal spokesman had gone so far wrong factually that Mr. Willkie rather than Mr. Roosevelt had been the gainer.

Compared with the previous day, the volume in stocks on the big board doubled in the first hour while in the fourth hour the turnover was three times that of the corresponding period Monday. Wheat, cotton and most of the other commodities improved along with stocks, the Government bond list was firm and gains of 1 to more than 3 points were general in the foreign bond list.

Steels and aviations stood out in today's rebound. The former was stimulated by the expectation that the letting of contracts for defense purposes finally will become an important part of our industrial situation, although to date the record has been disappointing, the same applies to the outlook for the aviation companies.

Testimony in Washington in connection with the supplemental defense bill, and the letter from Representative J. Parnell Thomas to the Secretary of War each contributed its bit to the growing realization that funds now being appropriated are not being used to the best advantage in preparing the country.

A number of the major industrial concerns, including most of the aviation and motor companies are going ahead with expansion programs in order to accept Government orders, but they still have nothing more than a word of mouth assurance from the Government that they will be permitted to retire these additional expenditures during the period in which the added facilities will be productive. This amounts to a risk in the name of patriotism which investors in these companies are making.

Executives of the concerns involved doubtless feel that their stockholders must be forced to make this contribution to the cause on the ground that unless they do there is no telling the way will be cleared in Washington.

Whoever takes the risk, the assumption is that defense contracts will soon play a more important part in the Nation's industrial activity. This has led to the belief that the steel industry is headed for capacity operations.

United States Steel added a point today, Bethlehem 2, while Republic was up a fraction. Aviation Corporation was the day's most active stock and advanced slightly. General Motors and Chrysler added a point each and the coppers improved when custom smelters advanced the price of the metal to 11 cents. Chesapeake & Ohio was a feature of the rails, adding 1% when directors ordered an increased dividend. Lot was up a point and the way was believed cleared for a merger between it and its profitable affiliate, the Pepsi-Cola Co.

American Telephone, American Smelting, Kodak, Monsanto, Skelly, Celanese, Coca Cola and American Can were among the other well known issues which closed a point or more higher.

Bonds displayed a firmer tone in larger trading volume, the improvement appearing in virtually every section of the list here today. On the Stock Exchange turnover reached $2,822,000, against $1,934,000 on Monday.

Treasury bonds, both on the Exchange and in the over-counter market, reflected returning confidence after doubts engendered last week by the war development. Final over-counter deals showed gains up to 3-32 point.

Foreign bonds were subjected to some unusually large price changes, particularly among relatively inactive issues. Australians were firm with gains of around 2 points and Canadian bonds reflected hopes for mutual aid by the United States with gains up to more than 3 points. Canadian rails were similarly strong.

News or the increased Chesapeake & Ohio dividend brought immediate response in Allegheny Corporation bonds, which rose as much as 2 points. Other rails, including the speculative group were firmer. Participating in the advance were Baltimore & Ohio, Boston & Maine, Lehigh Valley and Nickel Plate issues with gains of 1 to 2 points.

The average of 20 bonds closed with a gain of 0.12 point. To this gains in industrials and utilities contributed.

Loan Man Seeks $10,000 Damages From Attorney

William J. Nolan, vice president and general manager of M. S. Nolan, Inc., automobile finance firm at 1102 New York avenue northwest, filed a $10,000 damage suit in the District Court yesterday against Attorney John F. Hillyard, 631 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Nolan, who was represented by Attorney James J. Laughlin, accused Hillyard of malicious abuse of process in filing suit for $1,000 in the Municipal Court against Nolan and the Nolan company. Hillyard acted as attorney for Nolan's mother, Mrs. Margaret S. Nolan, in a suit that is still pending.

Nolan claimed in the action that for three years he was in control of real estate belonging to his mother. Nolan said Hillyard several months ago asked that title be restored to Mrs. Nolan and that he agreed on condition that he be given a release.

Despite the release, Nolan charged, Hillyard harassed him about a certain $85 debt and finally filed the suit for $1,000.

Guard Promotes 3 D. C. Majors

Ogdensburg, N. Y.—Three majors in the District of Columbia National Guard will return to Washington at the end of maneuvers this week with the silver leaves of lieutenant colonels on their shoulders.

Promotions were announced today for Maj. William T. Roy, commanding the Twenty-ninth Division special troops; Maj. William T. Bullis, commanding the Second Battalion, 260th Coast Artillery, and Maj. William T. Heale, commanding the First Battalion, 260th. They were advanced after a special examination given recently by a board headed by Col. Walter W. Burns, commanding the 260th.

As lieutenant colonels, Heale and Bullis will continue to command their battalions, with majors as executive officers.

Foreign Markets

London, Aug. 20 (AP).—The securities market scored new gains today. Interest in government bonds revived after a sleepy opening and gains ranging to ¼ point were posted. Substantial advances spotted the kaffir list and coppers further further improved. Selective buying kept industrial leaders on a steady course. Domestic rails fell behind as traders considered the possibility of air raid damage. Japanese and Egyptian bonds improved.

Liverpool, Aug. 20 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 1 point higher to 4 lower today. Trade calling, commission house and local demand offset professional selling and hedging.

Wheat Leads Upsurge In Commodities

Corn Also Advances As War News Wanes In Trading Interest

By the Associated Press

Major commodities swung decisively upward in futures markets yesterday as war news waned in importance in trading centers.

Wheat at Chicago moved up 1½ to 1⅞ cents a bushel in a one-way market. Mill demand, short covering and strength in the Minneapolis wheat market were rated the main motive power. Corn added ⅛ to 1 cent.

Oil Firm to Market Big Issue Privately

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—The Tidewater Associated Oil Co. announced today it had arranged for a private sale to a group of insurance companies and banks of $35,500,000 in notes and debentures.

The proceeds will be used to repay $34,730,000 in 3½ per cent debentures remaining out of a $40,000,000 issue sold in 1937.

Col. Ashburn Dies; Columbia Hospital Head

Retired Medical Officer Decorated for Services With Army in France

Col. Percy M. Ashburn, 68, superintendent of Columbia Hospital for Women, died yesterday at his home, 3930 Connecticut avenue northwest, after an illness of several months.

Col. Ashurn, a retired Army medical officer who was decorated with the Legion of Honor for services in France during the World War, will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery following funeral services at 11 a. m. tomorrow at Fort Myer Chapel. Chaplain Herman J. Kregel will officiate.

Born in Batavia, Ohio, Col. Ashburn joined the Army as assistant contract surgeon in 1898 after practicing medicine in Cincinnati.

Served in Philippines

During his career he saw active service in Manila, Cebu and various other Philippine islands and was twice a member of the board for the study of tropical diseases in Manila. He was president of the board during his final tour of duty at Manila, which ended in 1913.

In 1915 he was ordered to duty at Walter Reed Hospital here and subsequently was commanding officer.

Early in the World War he organized and commanded the Medical Reserve Officers Training Camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. Later he was officer in charge of the Medical Officers Training Camp Division of the surgeon general's office.

He was ordered to France in July, 1918, attached to the office of the chief surgeon. That August he was sent to Switzerland as a member of the Mission for Prisoners of War.

Returning to the United States in the summer of 1918, Col. Ashburn was attached to the surgeon general's office in Washington until 1920, when he went to Carlisle Barracks, Pa., where he was organizer and commanding officer of the Medical Field Service School until detailed to the Military Academy at West Point as surgeon.

At Columbia Since 1934

His last active duty, as librarian of the surgeon general's library in Washington, ended with his retirement for disability in line of duty in December, 1931.

Col. Ashburn had been superintendent of Columbia Hospital for Women since 1934.

He was author of "Elements of Military Hygiene," used as a standard text during the World War by the United States Army; "A History of the Medical Department of the United States Army," and approximately 50 published articles of medical and general interest.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Agnes Davis Ashburn; a son, Frank D. Ashburn, of North Andover, Mass., and a daughter, Mrs. Ann Virginia Rose, of Washington.

Contract Bridge

In duplicate matches part scores are just as important as game contracts, and frequently they develop into the most interesting hands, though the play may be so complicated as to make explanation difficult. Today's deal, played at the recent southern New England championships, shows how Jerome Scheuer, of Boston, managed to win his three-heart contract, though the king, queen, jack, nine and seven of trumps were out against him, four of them being bunched in one defender's hand.

Another spade honor is led and North is trapped. He can win only one of his hearts. He can ruff with the queen, but then he will win no more tricks, as declarer can pick up South's queen of clubs. If he trumps low declarer will overtrump, and the result will be the same. Mr. Scheuer made three hearts, losing a diamond, a spade and two heart tricks.

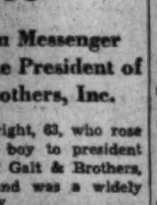
W. H. Wright, Gem Expert, Dies at 63

Rose From Messenger To Become President of Galt & Brothers, Inc.

William H. Wright, 63, who rose from messenger boy to president and treasurer of Galt & Brothers, Inc., jewelers, and was a widely known authority on precious stones, died yesterday at Doctors' Hospital.



MR. WRIGHT

A circulatory ailment from which he rallied two years ago returned a week ago, when he was taken to the hospital.

Last November Mr. Wright's employes tenedered him a testimonal dinner in honor of his fiftieth anniversary with the Galt company.

Just half a century before, at the age of 13, Mr. Wright was a Western Union messenger engaged by the jewelry store to run errands during the Christmas season.

Instead of returning to his job of delivering telegrams, he remained with the jewelry company and became a buyer while still in his 'teens. Later he was a salesman, and before turning 30, betame assistant manager.

He was made manager in 1923 and in 1934 organized a stock company composed of employes and bought the store and fixtures from Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who had inherited it from her first husband, Norman Galt. It was established by the Galts in 1837.

Mr. Wright, it was said, could judge the value of a diamond simply by looking at it, without the aid of the diamondscope. The Hope diamond is among the precious stones which he handled.

Mr. Wright was a registered jeweler of the American Gem Society and a member of its board of directors.

He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Spencer Watts; two sisters, Mrs. E. W. Burton and Mrs. H. P. Waller, and a brother, Augustus Wright, all of Washington. His wife was the former Theresa Caspar, of Washington.

Today's Radio Highlights

9:30 a. m., WOL—A bright idea has come from Mrs. Albert Youngman who points to the lack of setting-up exercises for the early morning listener. This program by Mutual's Wallace, Keep Fit to Music, is our town of sedentary workers, single setter-upper. Got any ideas on this matter?

7:30, WMAL—Betty Garde, star of the radio series, My Son and I and Myron McCormick, featured in Pare Lorentz' film "Fight for Life," play an original air drama by Frank Nolan on Manhattan at Midnight.

7:30, WRC—A-new-angle-or-is-it? The Jethro Boys from Kentucky are about to avenge the classics for their merry revivification at the hands of the swingsters. They're turning a hot modern ditty into hill-billy.

8:15, WOL—Family conscious: Dr. Pedigree and his Who Are You move to a new time for those "winter" months Mutual is harping of these pleasant days. Formerly Mondays at 7:30 p. m., the new time is Wednesday at 8:15. The Carews and the Careys are the folks on this one, with Harry Carey of the films and stage lending his assistance.

8:30, WOL—Richard Huey returns to Washington tonight with his Sheep and Goats Club, an amalgamation of psalm singers and hepcats. There's also a sermon promised for the emphatic country parson.

8:30, WJSV—Succeeding the now completed Stadium Concerts on the Columbia schedule is this series of the Columbia Concert Orchestra conducted by Bernard Herrmann. Handel's Overture to "Acis and Galatea" precedes Haydn's "Oxford" Symphony in G.

9:15, WJSV—Harllee Branch and Robert H. Hinckley discuss National Defense.

Listen! with Glynn

Now that John Charles Daly, WJSV's indefatigable chronicler of special events for the Columbia network, has completed his vocal reportorial duties at the Army maneuvers in northern New York, it can be told.

We don't know exactly how the Army would feel if it knew who it was letting in on all its secrets. But the truth is that the said Mr. Daly obviously hasn't much sympathy with the Army. The reason for that being that he's in the Navy—a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Naval Reserve, no less. We just like to keep the record straight without being too embarrassing, that's all.

Incidentally, Ed Laker, WJSV engineer, must be having quite a time keeping his allegiances straight, too. It was only a couple of weeks ago that Ed had the assignment of doing a broadcast from the U. S. S. Wyoming, sailing up the Caribbean Sea from Guantanamo Bay in Cuba to New York. He was the Navy's guest for several days on that cruise and came back with about as much praise for the Navy as could be crowded into the short time he had to give it. Because he hadn't been back more than a day when he also was detailed to engineering duties for C. B. S. at the Army maneuvers. He's probably just about as enthusiastic about the Army by this time, although he's not back yet to report.

Such chameleons as we do have around us, is all I've got to say.

France Facing 'Greater Woes,' Says Carson

Ambulance Driver Tells of Last Days Of German Push

By Robert Carson
Written for International News Service

New York, Aug. 20.—Bewilderment of the French armies at the lightning German advance, the glee with which the French themselves threw down their arms, privations of French prisoners in Nazi cantonments—these are the things of the past which inflame my memory after returning from three months of service as an ambulance driver on both sides of Europe's front.

Looking to the future, an impartial observer foresees still greater suffering for France, since a major portion of the erstwhile republic's food supplies are being diverted to Germany's war use.

We score of Americans who found ourselves trapped by the incredible speed of the German advance in the Vosges Mountains of Alsace-Lorraine last June 23 were lucky. Not so lucky were the 10,000 Frenchmen at the gigantic concentration camp at Dieuze, about 32 miles southeast of Metz. They were crowded into what formerly was a French army barracks. I have never seen such horrible sanitary conditions in my life. The food seemed little better.

Got Ersatz Bread

For breakfast, the French were given hunks of "ersatz" bread, made of no one knows what, and "coffee" presumably made of parched grain. For lunch, they had soup which seemed to be made of dishwater, sometimes with a little barley in it. For dinner, more of the same soup.

When the mess bugle called and the French prisoners lined up, they had to stand in queues for two hours before they got to the cook tent.

Our outfit was shot up to the flank of the Maginot Line from Paris under the direction of the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps. In those few short weeks, from mid-May until the French armistice, we had a first-hand view of the collapse of the Fourth Army, then saw the picture from the other side. For a time—since our mission was neutral—we aided the German wounded.

I was under fire the first time at Nousvilliers with Charles Wilen, of Baltimore. His American-built ambulance had been badly machine-gunned by German planes. I was taking a new ambulance up to him when German artillery suddenly broke loose as Willen was loading his old ambulance with wounded. One of the men in my ambulance died during the bombardment.

French Caught Napping

This shelling marked the first time in my experience when the Germans really started going to town. The French were wholly unprepared for them.

The Nazis broke through a ten-mile gap in the Maginot Line in Lorraine. The French had counted on using a canal system there to flood the area, but the Germans knew even more about every highway and line in the area than the French did. They swarmed through the Maginot Line before the French were even prepared to retreat.

Back over roads jammed with refugees who hampered the military retreat, we fell past bases at Frankeltroff and Diffenbach, under almost incessant bombardment.

We were secluded in the Vosges for five or six days in the Mont Repos sector—while unknown to us the French had signed the Compiegne Armistice—when we learned that we were completely surrounded.

Gen. Hubert, commander of the Fourth French Army, refused at first to believe the news. I have never seen a more pathetic sight. He did not know whether to continue fighting or end his resistance. His officers were in tears, but the common soldiers rejoiced as they threw away their rifles and abandoned their ammunition—for German propaganda and the Fifth Column had done their work among the peasants and workers most effectively.

Traffic Violators Pay District $383,830 in Year, Report Shows

Traffic violators paid the District $383,830.32 during the last fiscal year.

Of this amount $225,974 was forfeited collateral. This was stated yesterday by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal in his report to the Commissioners on Police Court activities.

Total traffic cases numbered 29,422, an increase of 1,708 over the previous year. Of these, about 16,000 resulted from illegal parking; 7,513 were for speeding; 1,281 were for driving without a permit; 1,069 were for passing red lights; 337 for driving while drunk and 602 for passing a stop sign.

Intoxication led the list of all offenses in this branch, accounting for 15,551 of the 21,388 cases handled during the entire year. More than 3,000 persons were charged with disorderly conduct; 600 with soliciting alms; 227 with drinking in public; 568 with violation of police regulations and 446 with vagrancy.
